1 I. INTRODUCTION

2 This is a case about the medical and mental health care conditions
3 experienced by 15 Plaintiffs while in the custody of U.S. Immigration and Customs 4 Enforcement (“ICE”) in several facilities across the United States. These 15 5 Plaintiffs also challenge certain instances of administrative segregation and their 6 treatment as purportedly qualified individuals with disabilities. Two organizational 7 Plaintiffs assert claims on their own behalf. Each Plaintiff’s medical and mental 8 health condition diverges greatly from the next; accordingly, the actual remedies 9 for each Plaintiff’s grievances in the Complaint are different. Nevertheless, in their 10 prayer for relief, Plaintiffs seek a Court order declaring that Defendants comply 11 with the requirements of due process under the Fifth Amendment as well as the 12 requirements of the Rehabilitation Act. In essence, Plaintiffs seek an amorphous 13 and impermissibly broad injunction that Defendants obey the law. Undoubtedly, 14 the allegations in the Complaint are troubling. However, without conceding that 15 Plaintiffs are entitled to any particular form of relief, the avenue by which 16 Plaintiffs seek a remedy for alleged individualized harm—by asserting a 17 constitutional due process challenge to certain of ICE’s policies and procedures in 18 detention facilities in an effort to effect nationwide, programmatic change—is 19 inappropriate.
20

21 The Complaint in this case is unwieldy, and the majority of the allegations 22 are irrelevant in that they have little, if anything, to do with the individual 23 allegations pertaining to each Plaintiff. The allegations that do pertain to each of 24 the 15 Plaintiffs are scattered across 657 paragraphs comprising 200 pages. For 25 these reasons, Defendants seek to sever and dismiss Plaintiffs’ claims. In the event 26 that certain claims are not severed and dismissed, Defendants seek to transfer 27 venue for claims of Plaintiffs detained outside of the Central District of California.
28 Finally, for any surviving claims, Defendants move to strike those remaining

1 portions of the Complaint that contain immaterial, irrelevant, or unnecessary 2 allegations, and dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction and for failure to 3 state a claim upon which relief can be granted pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil 4 Procedure 12(b)(1) and 12(b)(6).

5 II. PROCEDURAL OVERVIEW

6 Plaintiffs' Complaint seeks declaratory and injunctive relief stemming from 7 alleged violations of the Due Process Clause of the Fifth Amendment and § 504 of 8 the Rehabilitation Act, 29 U.S.C. § 794, arising from conditions of confinement at 9 federal detention facilities that hold ICE detainees for more than 72 hours.

10 Plaintiffs allege three sources of harm based on Defendants' operation of 11 detention facilities. First, Plaintiffs claim a violation of the Fifth Amendment's 12 Due Process Clause for Defendants' alleged failure to monitor and oversee medical 13 and mental health care at detention facilities. Compl. ¶¶ 624-30. Second, Plaintiffs 14 maintain that Defendants also violated due process by failing to monitor and 15 oversee segregation practices in the detention facilities and by failing to monitor 16 and oversee conditions for persons with disabilities. Id. at ¶¶ 631-43. Third, 17 Plaintiffs allege Defendants DHS and ICE have violated Plaintiffs' rights under the 18 Rehabilitation Act and its implementing regulations by failing to ensure that 19 detention facilities reasonably accommodate disabled detainees. Id. at ¶¶ 644-55.

21 III. ARGUMENT

22 A. THE CLAIMS MADE BY PLAINTIFFS SERGIO SALAZAR
23 ARTAGA, JOSE SEGOVIA BENITEZ, AND EDILBERTO
24 GARCIA GUERRERO ARE MOOT BECAUSE THEY ARE NO
25 LONGER DETAINED.

26 A case "becomes moot when it 'no longer present[s] a case or controversy 27 under Article III, § 2, of the Constitution.'" Abdala v. INS, 488 F.3d 1061, 1063 28 (9th Cir. 2007) (quoting Spencer v. Kemna, 523 U.S. 1, 7 (1998)). To state a cognizable claim for injunctive relief, "Article III, § 2, of the Constitution requires

1 the existence of a case or controversy through all stages of federal judicial 2 proceedings.” Shamim v. Chertoff, No. C 07-4308 SI, 2008 WL 509335, at *2 3 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 22, 2008). Throughout the litigation, the plaintiff “must have 4 suffered, or be threatened with, an actual injury traceable to the defendant and 5 likely to be redressed by a favorable judicial decision.” Id. (citing Lewis v. Cont'l 6 Bank Corp., 494 U.S. 472, 477 (1990)). Additionally, a detainee-plaintiff must 7 prove a sufficient likelihood that the person will be subjected to defendants’ 8 alleged wrongful conduct, in this instance, while in custody of Defendant ICE. See 9 City of Los Angeles v. Lyons, 461 U.S. 95, 101-02 (1983). As a result, a detainee’s 10 release from custody generally moots claims for injunctive relief relating to the 11 detention facility’s policies. See Nelson v. Heiss, 271 F.3d 891, 897 (9th Cir.
12 2001). Release from a detention facility also extinguishes a detainee’s legal interest 13 in a cause of action seeking injunctive relief when the requested injunction would 14 have no effect on the detainee. See McQuillon v. Schwarzenegger, 369 F.3d 1091, 15 1095 (9th Cir. 2004). Similarly, claims for declaratory judgment would become a 16 mere advisory opinion, which the Constitution prohibits. See id.; see also Preiser
17 v. Newkirk, 422 U.S. 395, 401 (1975).

19 In this case, Plaintiffs Sergio Salazar Artaga, Jose Segovia Benitez, and 20 Edilberto Garcia Guerrero are no longer detained in ICE custody. Mr. Artaga was 21 released on an order of recognizance on September 12, 2019, see Ex. 1, Order of 22 Release on Recognizance, Mr. Benitez was removed to El Salvador on October 23, 23 2019, see Ex. 2, Record of Persons Transferred,¹ and Mr. Guerrero left the United 24 States pursuant to an order of voluntary departure on November 26, 2019, see Ex.
25 3, Declaration of David De La Garza. Because these three Plaintiffs are no longer 26

27 ¹ The Court may take judicial notice of the document attached at Exhibit 2 as an 28 administrative record that is part of Plaintiff Benitez’s A-file. If the Court prefers, Defendants can supplement Exhibit 2 with a declaration.

1 detained in ICE custody, they are no longer subject to the alleged and challenged 2 official conduct, they cannot demonstrate any realistic threat of substantial and 3 immediate irreparable injury, and therefore they no longer have a legally 4 cognizable interest in the outcome of this litigation. See McQuillon, 369 F.3d at 5 1095; Nelson, 271 F.3d at 897; Lyons, 461 U.S. at 101-02. Thus, the claims of 6 Plaintiffs Artaga, Benitez, and Guerrero in this action are moot, and the Court
7 should dismiss these Plaintiffs from this lawsuit for lack of subject matter 8 jurisdiction pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(1).

10 B. PLAINTIFFS' CLAIMS SHOULD BE SEVERED AND 11 DISMISSED PURSUANT TO FED. R. CIV. P. 21.

12 i. Legal Background.

13 Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 21 authorizes a court to “sever any claim 14 against a party.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 21. A court has broad discretion to sever claims.
15 Coleman v. Quaker Oats Co., 232 F.3d 1271, 1297 (9th Cir. 2000). In deciding 16 whether to sever an action under Fed. R. Civ. P. 21, courts consider: (1) whether 17 the claims arise out of the same transaction or occurrence; (2) whether the claims 18 present some common questions of law or fact; (3) whether settlement of the 19 claims or judicial economy would be facilitated; (4) whether prejudice would be 20 avoided if severance were granted; and (5) whether different witnesses and 21 documentary proof are required for the separate claims. H.M. v. United States, No.
22 17-00786-SJO, 2017 WL 10562558, *15 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 21, 2017) (severing 23 plaintiffs’ mandamus claims in the interests of justice and judicial economy and 24 finding that each case involved distinct factual and legal issues) (citing Trazo v.
25 Nestle USA, Inc., No. 5:12-CV-02272-PSG, 2013 WL 12214042, at *2 (N.D. Cal.
26 Dec. 4, 2013)). If a claim is severed from an action, the court can remedy the 27 misjoinder by dismissing the severed claims without prejudice to re-file in a 28

1 separate action. Visendi v. Bank of America, N.A., 733 F.3d 863, 871 (9th Cir.
2 2013).

3 ii. The Claims Do Not Arise Out of the Same Transaction or 4 Occurrence.

5 For claims to arise out of the same transaction or occurrence there must be 6 “factual similarity in the allegations supporting plaintiffs’ claims.” Visendi, 733 7 F.3d at 870. In their Complaint, Plaintiffs variously allege that Defendants have 8 failed to lawfully administer, monitor, or oversee a range of health, disability, and 9 segregation-related conditions at detention facilities nationwide. These disparate 10 allegations, however, lack factual similarity and cannot properly be considered part 11 of the same transaction or occurrence.

12 First, Plaintiffs’ health and disability-related claims lack factual overlap and 13 should be severed. See Compl. at ¶¶ 624-55. Here, Plaintiffs go to significant 14 lengths to illustrate the breadth and variety of their respective health conditions and 15 disabilities, frequently identifying the particular source of injury and detailing the 16 Plaintiff’s treatment history, current condition, and prognosis. See Compl. ¶ 1 17 (“Plaintiffs have a range of serious medical and mental health conditions”); 18 generally ¶¶ 21-96. Plaintiffs, moreover, rely on the disparity in their respective 19 conditions to argue Defendants’ have failed—in a variety of detention settings and 20 across the full spectrum of detention operations—to lawfully accommodate their 21 health needs. Under such circumstances, however, each Plaintiff’s claim arises 22 from the respective Plaintiff’s particular health or disability-related condition as 23 well as ICE’s individualized response to treat or accommodate the particular 24 plaintiff’s needs. See Fisher v. United States, No. CV 14-6499-MMM (RNB), 25 2015 WL 5723638, at *4 (C.D. Cal. June 18, 2015), report and recommendation
26 approved, No. CV 14-6499-MMM (KES), 2015 WL 5705926 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 29, 27 2015) (severing Plaintiff’s deliberate indifference claims against federal prison 28

1 officials from prisons in several states even though Plaintiff alleged an “ongoing” 2 denial of medical care for the same chronic conditions; finding that “the alleged 3 incidents occurred at different times, at different prisons, and involved different 4 medical providers.”). For example, depending on the circumstances, detainees with 5 heart, vision, or back conditions would each display different symptoms and 6 require different accommodations. Naturally, Defendants’ efforts to treat or 7 accommodate the detainee would diverge significantly based on the detention 8 setting and the respective detainee’s overall condition, symptoms, and medical 9 history. Consequently, Plaintiffs’ health and disability-related claims lack the 10 required factual uniformity and should be severed. See Visendi, 733 F.3d at 870
11 (severing plaintiffs’ claims because “[w]hile Plaintiffs allege in conclusory fashion 12 that Defendants’ misconduct was ‘regular and systematic,’ their interactions with 13 Defendants were not uniform”).

14
15 Similar to the health and disability-related claims, Plaintiffs’ segregation-16 related claims lack sufficient factual overlap. As Plaintiffs acknowledge, ICE 17 employs segregation for limited administrative or disciplinary purposes often 18 unrelated to medical or mental health treatment or the accommodation of disabled 19 detainees. Compl. ¶¶ 440-41. As a result, an ICE official’s decision whether or for 20 how long to segregate an alien is frequently based upon criteria distinct from a 21 decision on how to treat a detained alien’s health-related condition or 22 accommodate an alien’s disability. And Plaintiffs do not allege that having a 23 medical or mental health condition or qualifying disability automatically results in 24 a detainee being segregated. Accordingly, Plaintiffs’ claims should be severed 25 from each other. See Visendi, 733 F.3d at 870 (severing claims because they 26 required particularized factual analysis); Coughlin v. Rogers, 130 F.3d 1348, 1351
27 (9th Cir. 1997) (severing claims that presented different factual situations).
28

1 The organizational Plaintiffs’ claims likewise lack factual overlap, both with 2 those alleged by Plaintiffs and between themselves. In sharp contrast to the claims 3 advanced by the individual Plaintiffs, the organizational Plaintiffs assert that 4 Defendants’ failure to lawfully monitor conditions of confinement has diverted 5 their resources and frustrated their respective organizational missions. See Compl.
6 at ¶¶ 100, 112, 205, 433, 506. These claims have little, if any, factual overlap with 7 the disparate claims of the individual Plaintiffs. The organizational Plaintiffs’ 8 claims should therefore be severed from those of the Plaintiffs.

10 To compensate for the dissimilarity in the factual background of their 11 claims, Plaintiffs allege that Defendants systemically failed to monitor and oversee 12 a number of policies, practices, and conditions related to Plaintiffs’ health or well-13 being. See, e.g., Compl. ¶ 203 (failure to monitor and oversee medical and mental 14 health care); ¶ 430 (failure to monitor and oversee segregation practices); ¶ 502 15 (failure to monitor and oversee disability-related practices). But merely advancing 16 claims asserting similar misconduct does not result in the same transaction or 17 occurrence because Plaintiffs allege a different factual basis for how Defendants’ 18 alleged failures affected each of them. See Coughlin, 130 F.3d at 1350 (existence 19 of a common allegation of delay, in and of itself, does not suffice to create a 20 common transaction or occurrence). Thus, despite allegations that Defendants 21 “systemically” failed to ensure lawful conditions in their detention facilities, 22 Plaintiffs’ factually dissimilar claims do not arise out of the same transaction or 23 occurrence. As there is insufficient factual overlap to these allegations, this factor 24 supports severance. See Visendi, 733 F.3d at 870; Coughlin, 130 F.3d at 1350.

25 iii. The Claims Do Not Present Common Questions of Law or 26 Fact.

27 Plaintiffs’ due process claims should be severed because they do not present 28 a common question of law or fact. As noted above, Plaintiffs allege due process

1 violations based upon Defendants’ supposed failure to adequately monitor and 2 oversee a variety of health and segregation-related policies and practices. See
3 Compl. ¶¶ 624-43. In this regard, however, the question of what due process
4 requires of Defendants across the range of Plaintiffs’ allegations will vary 5 depending on the individual circumstances giving rise to the claim. Furthermore, 6 the lack of common questions of law or fact across the Plaintiff’s individual claims 7 highlights the impermissibly broad nature of Plaintiffs’ prayer for relief, which is 8 essentially a declaration or injunction that Defendants obey the requirements of the 9 Constitution and the Rehabilitation Act. See MGM Studios, Inc. v. Grokster, Ltd., 10 518 F. Supp. 2d 1197, 1226 (C.D. Cal. 2007) (“blanket injunctions to obey the law 11 are disfavored”); see also Melan, Inc. v. Advanced Orthomolecular Research, Inc., 12 No. EDCV 18-482 JGB (SHKx), 2018 WL 8333423, at *5 (C.D. Cal. 2018)
13 (Bernal, J.) (quoting MGM Studios and concluding that the proposed injunction 14 was overbroad).
15

16 In other words, an independent fact-specific inquiry would be required for 17 each Plaintiff’s claim before the Court could determine whether Defendants 18 satisfied due process on any particular occasion with regard to any particular 19 Plaintiff. The need for independent inquiries remains regardless of Plaintiffs’ 20 challenge to Defendants’ general detention policies. Even against the backdrop of 21 Defendants’ general policies, resolution of each claim would inexorably center on 22 the particular details of each Plaintiff’s health or disability-related condition as 23 well as the specifics of Defendants’ actions or omissions in response to that 24 condition. See Visendi, 733 F.3d at 870; Coughlin, 130 F.3d at 1350-51. Lastly, 25 without more, Plaintiffs’ mere allegation that their collective claims arise under the 26 Due Process Clause does not create a common question of law or fact sufficient for 27 joinder. See Coughlin, 130 F.3d at 1351 (“[A]lthough Plaintiffs’ claims are all 28 brought under the Constitution and the Administrative Procedure Act, the mere

1 fact that all Plaintiffs' claims arise under the same general law does not necessarily 2 establish a common question of law or fact.'").

3 Finally, whether Defendants' violated the Rehabilitation Act on any 4 particular occasion is a legally and factually distinct question from whether the 5 same conduct violates due process. As relevant here, claims under the 6 Rehabilitation Act allege Executive agency discrimination in the administration of 7 programs on the basis of a qualifying disability. See e.g., Compl. ¶¶ 502-07; see 8 also 29 U.S.C. § 794(a). On the other hand, due process claims allege conditions of 9 confinement that amount—not to discrimination—but to punishment. Hatter v.
10 Dyer, 154 F. Supp. 3d 940, 945 (C.D. Cal. 2015) (citing Bell v. Wolfish, 441 U.S.
11 520, 535 (1979)). Accordingly, because due process and the Rehabilitation Act 12 protect discrete individual rights, claims arising under either raise distinct legal and 13 factual issues. As a result, Plaintiff's Rehabilitation Act claims should be severed 14 because they likewise do not present a common question of law or fact.

15
16 iv. Litigating the Claims Together Would Not Promote Judicial Economy or Settlement.

17 Litigating the allegations contained in Plaintiffs' complaint together in a 18 single action would be unwieldy and would not promote judicial economy.
19 Without severance, this action would require the adjudication of 15 individual 20 claims (without consideration of Plaintiffs' class action allegations) and two 21 organizational claims. Plaintiffs, moreover, divide themselves into two groups 22 based on either a claimed physical disability or having been segregated at some 23 point during their detention. Compl. ¶¶ 616-23, 608-15. Further, as discussed, 24 Plaintiffs' claims—whether based on due process or the Rehabilitation Act—arise 25 from individualized interactions with ICE in detention facilities throughout several 26 states and across multiple judicial circuits. Consequently, proceeding as the 27 complaint is currently constituted would require over 17 separate mini-trials. See 28

1 Padron v. Onewest Bank, No. 2:14-CV-01340-ODW, 2014 WL 1364901, at *5 2 (C.D. Cal. Apr. 7, 2014) (severing claims because trying them together would be 3 inefficient and require separate mini-trials). Lastly, Plaintiffs are detained in 4 geographically dispersed facilities across several states, including Georgia, 5 Alabama, Colorado, and Louisiana and have ready access to local courts where 6 they may make the same claims made in this suit. See Compl. ¶¶ 41, 45, 79, 86.
7 For these reasons, the concerns of judicial economy favor severance.

9 v. The Claims Require the Presentation of Different Evidence.

10 Severance is also warranted because Plaintiffs' disparate claims will require 11 the presentation of different evidence. As an initial matter, the manner in which 12 Defendants' practices and policies are applied to each Plaintiff is often dependent 13 on the nature of the detention facility at issue and ICE's relationship with that 14 detention facility; the named Plaintiffs alone raise claims involving at least 11 15 different detention facilities that employ different sets of standards and guidance.
16 Further, Plaintiffs' medical and mental health claims will involve evidence of 17 Defendants' practices and policies to identify and treat detainees' medical and 18 mental health conditions.² On the other hand, Plaintiffs' segregation claims will 19 involve evidence of ICE's segregation policies and practices, an area largely 20 unrelated to ICE's provision of medical or mental healthcare. Plaintiffs' disability 21 claims, likewise, will involve evidence unique to violations of the Rehabilitation 22 Act, including, for example, ICE's policies and practices for providing disabled 23 detainees access to the benefits available at detention facilities; properly screening 24 for disabilities and providing reasonable accommodations. See Compl. at ¶¶ 513-

25
26
27 ² Even here Individual Plaintiffs divide their medical and mental health claim into 28 challenges to at least eight discrete ICE health-related practices, each one presenting a different factual scenario requiring different evidence. See e.g., Compl. at ¶ 204 (dividing claim into such disparate areas as access to specialty care, staffing, and record maintenance).

1 21 (access to ICE programs and services for disabled detainees), ¶ 523 (screening), 2 ¶ 549 (accommodations); see also, e.g., Vinson v. Thomas, 288 F.3d 1145, 1154
3 (9th Cir. 2002) (“[W]hether a particular accommodation is reasonable under 4 Section 504 depends on the individual circumstances of each case” and “requires a 5 fact-specific, individualized analysis of the disabled individual’s circumstances and 6 the accommodations that might allow him to meet the program’s standards.”) 7 (internal citation omitted).

8 Finally, because they allege harm in the form of diverted resources, the 9 organizational Plaintiffs’ claims will involve distinct evidence related to each 10 organization’s structure, funding, operations, and decision-making. The preceding 11 evidence is plainly separate and distinct. Thus, this factor also supports severance.
12 See Visendi, 733 F.3d at 870; Coughlin, 130 F.3d at 1351.

13 C. THE COURT SHOULD TRANSFER CLAIMS BY PLAINTIFFS 14 DETAINED OUTSIDE OF THIS COURT’S JURISDICTION.

15 If the Court is not inclined to dismiss Plaintiffs’ improperly joined claims, 16 Defendants request, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1404(a), that the Court transfer the 17 actions of those Plaintiffs detained in detention facilities outside the Court’s 18 jurisdiction, and organizations with no connection to this district, to the appropriate 19 district courts and divisions. A district court may transfer an action to a different 20 district court under § 1404(a) “[f]or the convenience of the parties and witnesses” 21 and “in the interest of justice,” so long as the action could have been filed in the 22 transferee district in the first instance. Section 1404(a). A district court has broad 23 discretion to transfer a case where venue is also proper. Sparling v. Hoffman
24 Constr. Co., 864 F.2d 635, 639 (9th Cir. 1988). The district court “must adjudicate 25 a motion to transfer [venue] according to an individualized case-by-case 26 consideration of convenience and fairness.” Jones v. GNC Franchising, Inc., 211 27 F.3d 495, 498 (9th Cir. 2000) (internal quotation omitted).
28

1 i. Five Plaintiffs Could Have Properly Filed in Another Venue.

2 As described in the Complaint, ICE detains the following Plaintiffs outside 3 of the Central District of California: Marco Montoya Amaya, currently detained in 4 Bakersfield, California within the Eastern District of California (Compl. at ¶ 27); 5 Hamida Ali, currently detained in Teller County, Colorado within the Tenth Circuit
6 (Compl. at ¶ 41); Melvin Murillo Hernandez, currently detained in Jena, Louisiana, 7 and Alex Hernandez, currently detained in Gadsen, Alabama, within the Fifth 8 Circuit (Compl. at ¶¶ 12, 45, 79), and Aristotles Sanchez Martinez, currently 9 detained in Lumpkin, Georgia, within Eleventh Circuit (Compl. at ¶ 12). Under 28 10 U.S.C. § 1391(e), civil actions against federal defendants, such as this one, may be 11 brought in any judicial district in which either a defendant in the action resides; a 12 substantial part of the events or omissions giving rise to the claim occurred, or 13 where the plaintiff resides if no real property is involved in the action. Rangel v.
14 United States, No. 10-00129-DDP(FMOx), 2012 WL 1164080, at *1 (C.D. Cal.
15 Apr. 9, 2012) (transferring case in the interests of justice). Here, the preceding 16 Plaintiffs all complain of acts or omissions occurring substantially at the detention 17 facility in which they are detained. Moreover, each Plaintiff is incarcerated in the 18 district in which the detention facility is located. Thus, under § 1391(e), as to each 19 Plaintiff listed above, venue is not proper and the action could have been brought 20 in a district outside Central District of California. See Quinonez v. Pioneer Medical 21 Center, No. 12-CV-629-WQH-DHB, 2014 WL 229332, at *1, *16-17 (S.D. Cal.
22 Jan. 17, 2014) (finding that federal prisoner incarcerated at the Victorville Federal 23 Correctional Complex (“FCC Victorville”) in Adelanto, California could have 24 brought suit in Central District of California because a substantial part of the 25 events or omissions giving rise to his claim occurred at FCC Victorville within the 26 jurisdiction of Central District of California; Plaintiff was incarcerated in Central 27 District of California, and no real property was involved in the action).
28

1 ii. Public and Private Factors Favor Transfer.

2 In deciding a motion to transfer venue, the court typically weighs a number 3 of public and private factors. Rubio v. Monsanto Co., 181 F. Supp. 3d 746, 759 4 (C.D. Cal. 2016). These include “(1) plaintiff’s choice of forum; (2) the 5 convenience of the parties; (3) the conveniences of the witnesses; (4) the location 6 of books and records; (5) which forum’s laws applies; (6) the interests of justice; 7 and (7) administrative considerations.” Id. (internal citation omitted). The moving 8 party bears the burden of showing transfer will allow a case to “proceed more 9 conveniently and better serve the interests of justice.” Monsanto Co., 181 F. Supp.
10 at 759-60.

11 iii. Transfer is Favored Because the Location of Evidence is 12 Speculative.

13 If a motion to transfer venue is based on the location of evidence, the 14 defendant must show “with particularity the location, difficulty of transportation, 15 and the importance of such records.” Rubio, 181 F. Supp. 3d at 764 (internal 16 citations omitted). This Court, like others, has noted that electronic transmission 17 lessens the burden otherwise imposed by transporting documentary evidence. See 18 id.; see also Szegedy v. Keystone Food Prods., No. CV-08-5369-CAS(FFMx), 19 2009 WL 2767683, *6 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 26, 2009) (The “ease of access to 20 documents does not weigh heavily in the transfer analysis, given that advances in 21 technology have made it easy for documents to be transferred to different 22 locations.”). Regardless, at this time, neither side has sought discovery, and 23 Plaintiffs have not identified a list of witnesses or documents they intend to rely 24 upon to show that this Court is a more appropriate venue. As a result, any 25 justification by Plaintiffs in support of remaining in the Central District of 26 California is speculative. Therefore, this factor favors transfer. See Metz v. U.S.
27 Life Ins. Co. in City of New York, 674 F. Supp. 2d 1141, 1149 (C.D. Cal. 2009)
28

1 (finding evidence in support of remaining in the Central District of California “too
2 speculative” where “no discovery has been taken and Plaintiff has failed to provide 3 a list of witnesses she intends to call, or documents on which she intends to rely, 4 which might otherwise indicate that the Central District of California is a more 5 appropriate venue than the Southern District of New York”).

6 iv. Interests of Justice.

7 “The ‘interest[s] of justice’ include such concerns as ensuring speedy trials, 8 trying related litigation together, and having a judge who is familiar with the 9 applicable law try the case.” Rubio, 181 F. Supp. at 765 (quoting Heller Financial, 10 Inc. v. Midwhey Powder, Inc., 883 F.2d 1286, 1293 (7th Cir. 1989)). Here, the law 11 with respect to the applicable standard for each Plaintiff’s claim, that Defendants’ 12 acted with deliberate indifference in their provision of medical and mental health 13 care, varies by circuit. See Waddell v. Lloyd, Case No. 16-14078, 2019 WL 14 1354253, *4 (E.D. Mich. Mar. 26, 2019) (noting the circuit split concerning the 15 deliberate indifference standard applicable to medical care claims by pretrial 16 detainees and identifying the Fifth and Eleventh Circuits as applying a different 17 standard from the Ninth Circuit). Therefore, it serves the interests of justice to have 18 these cases tried in the jurisdictions where venue is proper and where a judge is 19 familiar with the applicable law.
20

21 Finally, courts in foreign jurisdictions will undoubtedly process claims filed 22 by individual plaintiffs residing in their respective jurisdictions quicker and more 23 effectively than would be the case if this Court elects to process all claims, 24 especially if such claims are made part of a class action. Class-wide discovery into 25 class members’ medical records and the agencies’ nationwide policies, as well as 26 other class issues and a wide array of experts on several medical conditions, would 27 result in significant litigation before the merits of each individual Plaintiff’s 28 medical and mental health claims could be resolved. For all of these reasons, the

1 Court should transfer any of Plaintiffs’ surviving claims that are not severed and 2 dismissed.

3 D. PLAINTIFFS’ MEDICAL CLAIMS MUST BE DISMISSED FOR 4 FAILURE TO STATE A CLAIM.

5 Even if the Court does not sever and dismiss or transfer any of Plaintiffs’ 6 claims, the Court should nonetheless dismiss Plaintiffs’ medical care claims for 7 failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. As discussed infra, 8 Plaintiffs seek relief in the form of an injunction that is impermissibly overbroad.
9 See MGM Studios, Inc. v. Grokster, Ltd., 518 F. Supp. 2d 1197, 1226 (C.D. Cal.
10 2007) (“blanket injunctions to obey the law are disfavored”); see also Melan, Inc.
11 v. Advanced Orthomolecular Research, Inc., No. EDCV 18-482 JGB (SHKx), 12 2018 WL 8333423, at *5 (C.D. Cal. 2018) (Bernal, J.) (quoting MGM Studios and 13 concluding that the proposed injunction was overbroad). In essence, Plaintiffs seek 14 an inappropriate “obey the law” injunction; Plaintiffs attempt to make an 15 amorphous, programmatic challenge for equally amorphous, class-wide relief 16 based upon a violation of the constitutional rights of specifically named Plaintiffs.

17 The Court may dismiss a complaint as a matter of law for “(1) lack of a 18 cognizable legal theory or (2) insufficient facts under a cognizable legal claim.” 19 SmileCare Dental Grp. v. Delta Dental Plan of Cal., Inc., 88 F.3d 780, 783 (9th 20 Cir. 1996) (citation omitted). To avoid dismissal, a plaintiff must plead facts 21 sufficient to “state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face.” Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 22 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009). “Where a complaint pleads facts that are ‘merely 23 consistent’ with a defendant’s liability, it ‘stops short of the line between 24 possibility and plausibility of entitlement to relief.’” Id. (quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v.
25 Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 557 (2007)).

28

1 i. Plaintiffs' First Claim Concerning Constitutionally Inadequate
2 Medical and Mental Health Care Fails As a Matter of Law

3 a. The Elements of a Due Process Violation for Inadequate
4 Medical Care

5 The right to adequate medical care for immigration detainees, comparable to 6 pretrial detainees, stems from an established right to be free from unconstitutional 7 punishment. See Bell v. Wolfish, 441 U.S. 520, 534-37 (1979). Unlike the related 8 Eighth Amendment protections afforded to criminal prisoners, for civil/9 immigration detainees, this right stems instead from the Due Process Clause of the 10 Fifth Amendment. Thus, detainees are entitled to receive “adequate” medical care 11 as part of their constitutional right to Due Process. Gibson v. Cty. of Washoe, Nev., 12 290 F.3d 1175, 1187 (9th Cir. 2002); Frost v. Agnos, 152 F.3d 1124, 1128 (9th Cir.
13 1998).

14 Although the constitutional derivation of rights between criminal prisoners
15 and civil detainees differ, the Ninth Circuit applies the Eighth Amendment's 16 analysis of inadequate medical care to detainees who otherwise derive their 17 freedom from unconstitutional punishment from their due process protections.
18 Lolli v. Cty. of Orange, 351 F.3d 410, 418-19 (9th Cir. 2003); see also Alvarez-
19 Machain v. United States, 107 F.3d 696, 701 (9th Cir. 1996).

20 However, recently the Ninth Circuit has adopted a slightly different 21 “objective deliberate indifference standard” from that previously applied in the 22 Eighth Amendment context. See Gordon v. Cty. of Orange, 888 F.3d 1118, 1124-
23 25 & n.4 (9th Cir. 2018). The elements of a pretrial detainee’s deliberate 24 indifference claim with respect to adequate medical care under due process are the 25 following:

- 26 following:
27 (i) the defendant made an intentional decision with respect to the 28 conditions under which the plaintiff was confined; (ii) those conditions put the plaintiff at substantial risk of suffering serious harm; (iii) the

1 defendant did not take reasonable available measures to abate that risk, 2 even though a reasonable official in the circumstances would have 3 appreciated the high degree of risk involved—making the 4 consequences of the defendant's conduct obvious; and (iv) by not taking 5 such measures, the defendant caused the plaintiff's injuries.

6 Id. at 1125. Essentially, a plaintiff must prove more than negligence but less 7 than subjective intent—something akin to reckless disregard.” Id. (internal citation
8 omitted). Neither general allegations of negligence nor a plaintiff's general 9 disagreement with treatment received is enough. See Estelle v. Gamble, 429 U.S.
10 97, 106 (1976). An official's denial, delay, or intentional interference with medical 11 treatment may constitute evidence of deliberate indifference. See Lolli, 351 F.3d at 12 419 (internal citation omitted). Further, a medical need is deemed to be “serious” if 13 the failure to treat the detainee's condition would result in further significant injury 14 or in the unnecessary and wanton infliction of pain contrary to contemporary 15 standards of human decency. See Helling v. McKinney, 509 U.S. 25, 32-35 (1993); 16 see also Jett v. Penner, 439 F.3d 1091, 1096 (9th Cir. 2006); McGuckin v. Smith, 17 974 F.2d 1050, 1059 (9th Cir. 1992), overruled on other grounds, WMX
18 Technologies, Inc. v. Miller, 104 F.3d 1133 (9th Cir. 1997) (en banc).

19 b. Plaintiffs Have Failed to Show Deliberate Indifference.

20 While Plaintiffs go to great lengths to allege the receipt of delayed care and 21 disagreement with their individual treatment plans, Plaintiffs fail to allege an 22 outright refusal on the part of Defendants to treat any alleged medical or mental 23 health condition. In fact, one Plaintiff fails to allege that Defendants were even 24 aware of his medical condition. See Compl. ¶¶ 27, 471 (Amaya fails to allege 25 Defendants were aware of his “tentative diagnosis of end-stage neurocysticercosis” 26 and “likely brain parasite”). Moreover, while Plaintiffs broadly assert a claim for 27 delayed medical care, no Plaintiff alleges a delay in medical or mental health care 28 that resulted in substantial risk of harm or in the unnecessary and wanton infliction

1 of pain. See Compl. ¶¶ 1-2. Specifically, Plaintiffs Fraihat, Amaya, Ali, Melvin 2 Hernandez, Sudney, Munoz, Delgadillo, Soto, Alex Hernandez, and Martinez do 3 not allege that any purported delay in medical care resulted in significant injury or 4 wanton infliction of pain, or that such delay was the result of Defendants' reckless 5 disregard for their care. See e.g., Compl. ¶¶ 24-25 (Fraihat fails to allege that the 6 delay in receiving a wheelchair for mobility purposes resulted in significant injury; 7 fails to show how the passage of three months between surgery recommendation 8 and follow-up doctor visit resulted in injury); ¶¶ 46, 216-17, 289, 339 (Melvin 9 Hernandez fails to allege delay in care relative to his allergies that resulted in 10 significant and avoidable injury); ¶¶ 54, 214-15, 337, 390 (Sudney fails to allege 11 delays in mental health screening and care for PTSD, and that delay in receiving a 12 third surgery, after two prior surgeries while in detention, resulted in significant 13 harm); ¶¶ 68, 292, 313-314 (Munoz fails to allege that the purported delay in 14 receiving medication or missed doses of diabetes, blood pressure, and cholesterol 15 medications resulted in significant harm); ¶ 338 (Delgadillo fails to allege that 16 delay in receiving mental health medication resulted in significant injury); ¶¶ 76, 17 265, 267 (Soto fails to allege that delay in receiving additional physical therapy or 18 in seeing a neurologist after having received an x-ray and MRI resulted in 19 significant injury); ¶¶ 255-57, 393, 394, 419 (Alex Hernandez fails to allege that he 20 experienced significant injury as a result of delay in care concerning his rotator 21 cuff and mental health issues); ¶¶ 261-63 (Martinez fails to allege significant harm 22 as a result of any alleged delays in receiving diabetes medication or food). Overall, 23 no Plaintiff alleges sufficient facts that Defendants acted with reckless disregard 24 such that this Court could find that Defendants were deliberately indifferent to 25 Plaintiffs' medical conditions. See Gordon, 888 F.3d at 1124-25.
26
27
28

1 c. Plaintiffs Have Failed to Show More Than a General
2 Disagreement With the Treatment Received.

3 A civilly-committed individual's claim that his medical care violated 4 constitutional standards is governed by the "professional judgment" standard set 5 forth in Youngberg v. Romeo, 457 U.S. 307 (1982). The Supreme Court has 6 declared:

7 [T]he decision if made by a professional, is presumptively valid; 8 liability may be imposed only when the decision is such a substantial 9 departure from accepted professional judgment, practice, or standards as to demonstrate that the person responsible actually did not base the decision on such a judgment.

10 Id. at 323. Thus, under any standard, mere negligence or medical malpractice does 11 not violate the Constitution. See Estelle, 429 U.S. at 106.

12 None of the Plaintiffs allege sufficient facts to rebut the presumption of 13 validity attached to the diagnoses, opinions, and professional judgment by facility 14 staff in his particular case. For example, Plaintiff Fraihat alleges that in April 2019, 15 he was recommended by an off-site doctor to have surgery on his eye as a result of 16 vision loss. Compl. ¶ 24. Then, he alleges that in July 2019, another doctor told 17 him he could not have laser eye surgery because of the degree of his vision loss. Id.
18 These bare assertions do not demonstrate anything more than a difference in 19 medical opinion as to whether Fraihat is a viable candidate for eye surgery.
20 Additionally, Plaintiff Soto alleges that he saw a neurologist and was given two 21 treatment options: surgery or physical therapy. Compl. ¶ 267. After considering the 22 options, Soto "opted for attempting physical therapy and medication before 23 surgery." Id. That Soto was given several viable treatment options, and selected his 24 preferred treatment plan, weighs against the finding that Soto received inadequate 25 medical care. If anything, Soto's multiple treatment options supports a finding that 26 Soto received more than adequate medical care and his concerns regarding his care 27 amounts to merely a disagreement with the treatment received. In the case of the 28

1 other named Plaintiffs, none have alleged enough to overcome the professional 2 judgment standard or show a violation of the Constitution.

3 ii. Plaintiffs' Second and Third Claims Concerning Punitive 4 Conditions of Confinement Fail As a Matter of Law.

5 Due process requires that the nature and duration of detention bear some 6 reasonable relation to the purpose for which an individual is detained. Jackson v.
7 Indiana, 406 U.S. 715, 738 (1972). Pretrial detainees retain greater liberty 8 protections than individuals detained under criminal process. See Bell v. Wolfish, 9 441 U.S. 520, 535 (1979). Similarly, individuals “who have been involuntarily 10 committed are entitled to more considerate treatment and conditions of 11 confinement than criminals whose conditions of confinement are designed to 12 punish.” Youngberg v. Romeo, 457 U.S. 307, 321–22 (1982). But “it is not always 13 clearly established how much more expansive the rights of civilly detained persons 14 are than those of criminally detained persons.” Hydrick v. Hunter, 500 F.3d 978, 15 990 (9th Cir. 2007). What is clear is that the Government’s legitimate interests 16 stemming from its need to manage the facility in which the individual is detained 17 may justify imposing conditions on an individual without rendering the detention 18 unconstitutional. See Bell, 441 U.S. at 539-540.

19 Defendants do not dispute that immigration detainees, like other individuals 20 not criminally detained, merit “conditions of confinement that are not punitive.” 21 Jones v. Blanas, 393 F.3d 918, 933 (9th Cir. 2004). But that detention may be 22 subject to conditions that relate to legitimate non-punitive governmental objectives 23 such as “maintaining security and order’ and ‘operating the [detention facility] in a 24 manageable fashion.” Pierce v. County of Orange, 526 F.3d 1190, 1205 (9th Cir.
25 2008) (quoting Bell, 441 U.S. at 540 n.23).

26 Here, Plaintiffs fail to allege that Defendants segregated Plaintiffs for 27 punitive purposes. Plaintiffs Fraihat and Melvin Hernandez admit that they were 28

1 placed in segregation for short periods of time for medical reasons. See Compl. ¶
2 546 (Fraihat admits when he was in medical segregation he saw a nurse twice a 3 day); ¶ 547 (Melvin Hernandez admits he was placed in segregation for his “severe 4 allergies”). Furthermore, Plaintiffs Amaya, Ali, Sudney, and Alex Hernandez make 5 vague and conclusory allegations concerning their instances of segregation that do 6 not rise to the level of a constitutional violation and fail to state a claim for relief.
7 See id. at ¶ 471 (“Mr. Montoya Amaya was confused as to whether the segregation 8 was disciplinary, or instead for his health or protection, as he was housed in 9 medical isolation.”); ¶ 391, 469 (Ali alleges that she was “effectively placed in 10 segregation” and “housed in Aurora alone in a dormitory designed for dozens of 11 people”); ¶ 543 (Sudney alleges that he was placed in disciplinary segregation 12 because he filed a grievance against an officer after a verbal altercation); ¶ 446 13 (Alex Hernandez admits he was placed in segregation for “safety reasons”).
14 Plaintiff Amaya’s confusion about the basis for his segregation, Plaintiff Ali’s 15 vague allegation of “effective segregation,” Plaintiff Sudney’s conclusory
16 allegation that he was segregated for filing a grievance, and Plaintiff Hernandez’s 17 vague allegation concerning the “safety reasons” for his segregation do not meet 18 the standard to sufficiently allege a due process violation with respect to 19 administrative segregation.
20

21 E. PLAINTIFFS’ REHABILITATION ACT CLAIMS MUST BE 22 DISMISSED FOR FAILURE TO STATE A CLAIM.

23 The Rehabilitation Act prohibits federal agencies from discriminating 24 against people with disabilities. 29 U.S.C. § 794(b)(2)(B). Section 504 of the Act 25 provides that “no otherwise qualified individual with a disability . . . shall, solely 26 by reason of her or his disability, be excluded from the participation in, be denied 27 the benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination under any program or activity 28 receiving Federal financial assistance.” 29 U.S.C. § 794(a).

1 Plaintiff has the burden of showing that Defendants violated Section 504 of 2 the Rehabilitation Act and must show that: “(1) he needed the accommodation to 3 enjoy meaningful access to benefits, (2) the government was on notice that he 4 needed the accommodation but did not provide it, and (3) there was a specific 5 reasonable accommodation available.” Mark H. v. Hamamoto, 620 F.3d 1090, 6 1097 (9th Cir. 2010) (emphasis added).

7 First, Plaintiffs Fraihat, Chavez, Melvin Hernandez, Sudney, Delgadillo, 8 Soto, Alex Hernandez, Martinez, and Jose Hernandez do not demonstrate that 9 Defendants denied them an accommodation. To the contrary, all of these Plaintiffs 10 state that Defendants have provided them reasonable accommodations. See 11 Compl. ¶ 25 (Fraihat, an individual with mobility issues, received his desired 12 accommodation, a wheelchair); ¶¶ 33, 558 (Chavez, a deaf individual, admits that 13 he was given access to a teletypewriter and Skype access); ¶¶ 47, 216, 520 (Melvin 14 Hernandez was placed in medical segregation and put on a special diet in response 15 to his need for an allergy free environment); ¶ 567 (Sudney was provided 16 prescription glasses after he complained about vision loss); ¶¶ 72-73, 361 17 (Delgadillo, an individual with mental health disorders, was provided medication, 18 placed in medical observation, and has received mental health services); ¶¶ 76-77, 19 265, 267 (Soto, an individual with mobility issues, was given a physical therapy 20 appointment, received an X-ray and an MRI scan from Adelanto medical staff, saw 21 a neurologist, and was provided a wheelchair); ¶¶ 569, 571 (Alex Hernandez, an 22 individual with mobility issues, was placed in a designated accessible cell and was 23 approved for a bottom bunk); ¶ 564 (Martinez was provided a suitable wheelchair); 24 ¶¶ 527, 560, 599 (Plaintiff Jose Hernandez, a blind individual, met with the ADA 25 coordinator and has guards and others assist him with reading and writing). Thus, 26 all eight of these Plaintiffs have failed to state a claim under the Rehabilitation Act 27 and their claims should be dismissed.
28

1 Second, Plaintiffs Amaya, Munoz, and Ali have not asserted the need for a 2 specific accommodation at all. Based on Plaintiffs' allegations, it is not clear that 3 Plaintiffs needed an accommodation to enjoy meaningful access to benefits, were 4 denied a requested accommodation, or that any specific reasonable accommodation
5 was available. See Compl. ¶¶ 396, 545 (Amaya, an individual who alleges end-6 stage neurocysticercosis and mental health conditions, fails to allege that 7 Defendants were aware of his diagnosis and that he needed an accommodation); ¶ 8 69 (Munoz, an individual with diabetes, makes a conclusory allegation that 9 Defendants' failed to comply with Section 504 at detention facilities but asserts no 10 additional facts related to the Rehabilitation Act); ¶¶ 502, 548, 587 (Ali lists herself
11 as part of the disability subclass and makes conclusory allegations that Defendants' 12 failed to comply with the Rehabilitation Act at detention facilities but asserts no 13 additional facts related to the Rehabilitation Act). Thus, these Plaintiffs have failed 14 to state a claim under the Rehabilitation Act and their claims should be dismissed. To 15 the extent any other Plaintiffs' claims under the Rehabilitation Act survive, 16 Plaintiffs Melvin Hernandez, Alex Hernandez, Martinez, Amaya, Ali, are detained 17 outside the district and their claims should be severed and dismissed or, in the 18 alternative, transferred to the appropriate district. See supra Section III.B.

20 F. THE ORGANIZATIONAL PLAINTIFFS' CLAIMS SHOULD BE 21 DISMISSED.

22 The Complaint names two organizational Plaintiffs, Inland Coalition for 23 Immigrant Justice ("ICIJ") and Al Otro Lado ("AOL"). ICIJ is an immigrant-led 24 community-based coalition organization that promotes justice for immigrants in 25 the Inland Empire region of California. Compl. ¶ 98. ICIJ admits that part of its 26 mission and organizational interest is empowering immigrants with disabilities. Id.
27 at ¶ 100. AOL is a legal services organization that services indigent migrants, 28 refugees, deportees, and their families and operates primarily in Los Angeles,

1 California, San Diego, California, and Tijuana, Mexico. Id. at ¶ 111. Part of AOL’s 2 mission is to seek redress for disability rights violations. Id.

3 i. The Organizational Plaintiffs Lack Standing.

4 The organizational Plaintiffs lack standing, and their claims should be 5 dismissed. See Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 560-61 (1992). To satisfy
6 the “‘irreducible constitutional minimum’ of standing” under Article III, the party 7 invoking federal jurisdiction must demonstrate that it has “(1) suffered an injury in 8 fact, (2) that is fairly traceable to the challenged conduct of the defendant, and (3) 9 that is likely to be redressed by a favorable judicial decision.” Spokeo, Inc. v.
10 Robins, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1547 (2016) (quoting Lujan, 504 U.S. at 560). “Foremost 11 among these requirements is injury in fact—a plaintiff’s pleading and proof that he 12 has suffered the ‘invasion of a legally protected interest’ that is ‘concrete and 13 particularized.’” Gill v. Whitford, 138 S. Ct. 1916, 1929 (2018) (quoting Lujan, 14 504 U.S. at 560). Where, as here, an organization sues on its own behalf, it must 15 establish standing in the same manner as an individual. See Warth v. Seldin, 422
16 U.S. 490, 511 (1975). Most relevant here, an organizational plaintiff must show 17 that the claimed harm is “both a diversion of its resources and a frustration of its 18 mission.” La Asociacion de Trabajadores de Lake Forest v. City of Lake Forest, 19 624 F.3d 1083, 1088 (9th Cir. 2010) (emphasis added).

21 Here, the organizational Plaintiffs do not sufficiently allege that the 22 Government’s purported failure to provide constitutionally adequate medical care 23 and accommodations to detained individuals with disabilities amounts to a 24 cognizable injury suffered by them or that their operations are meaningfully 25 impacted by Defendants’ actions. Organizational Plaintiff’s ICIJ and AOL fail to 26 show a frustration of their mission and a diversion of their resources. First, and 27 most importantly, both organizations fail to allege, beyond mere conclusions, that 28 either organization has done anything more than the ordinary work tailored to their

1 missions, which includes advocating for clients with disabilities or medical 2 conditions, providing assistance with social service needs, and empowering 3 immigrants with disabilities. See Compl. ¶¶ 98, 100, 111-12. In fact, part of the 4 central missions of ICIJ and AOL is to advocate for individuals with disabilities, 5 regardless of whether or not they request accommodations or specific medical 6 treatment. Compl. ¶ 98 (stating that “ICIJ’s mission is convening organizations to 7 collectively advocate and work to improve the lives of immigrant communities 8 while working toward a just solution to the immigration system.”); ¶ 111 (stating 9 that AOL’s mission is “. . . to coordinate and provide screening, advocacy, and 10 legal representation for individuals in immigration proceedings; to seek redress for 11 civil rights violations, including disability rights violations; and to provide 12 assistance with other legal and social service needs.”) (emphasis added). Thus, 13 both organizational Plaintiffs advocate on behalf of individuals with disabilities 14 and, if anything, this type of advocacy is exactly the type of work these 15 organizations set out to do according to their mission statements. Id.; see also ¶ 16 101 (ICIJ additionally admits that they have “a staff member who works full-time
17 to support people at Adelanto, including those who are vulnerable in detention due 18 to medical conditions, mental health disabilities, and other disabilities. Along with 19 several partner organizations, the staff member organizes a network of volunteer 20 visitors to detained people at Adelanto.”); Compl. ¶ 118 (AOL admits that 21 “[a]most all” of their “detained clients have mental health conditions, many of 22 which require additional advocacy.”). Because the organizational Plaintiffs have 23 failed to sufficiently allege facts to establish standing, their claims should be 24 dismissed under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(1).
25

26 Second, the organizational Plaintiffs fail to show a diversion of their 27 resources because they summarily allege that assisting their clients with disabilities 28 diverts resources and frustrates their mission. Compl. ¶¶ 100, 112. The

1 organizational Plaintiffs fail to show even an approximation of how many of their 2 clients are disabled within the meaning of the statute or have serious medical 3 needs. Furthermore, the organizational Plaintiffs fail to allege how many of their 4 clients are receiving inadequate accommodations or inadequate medical treatment 5 and do not show any evidence of the organization using resources for anything 6 other than usual purposes. Notably, AOL describes how almost “all of [their] 7 clients have mental health conditions, many of which require additional advocacy.”
8 Compl. ¶ 117. It is therefore impossible to determine if the organizations’ 9 resources are actually diverted to assist those individuals with disabilities or 10 medical conditions who claim they received inadequate accommodations or 11 medical treatment, or if Defendants already devote most of their resources to the 12 representation of the clients with disabilities or other serious medical conditions.

13 ii. Even if the Organization Plaintiffs have Standing, They Fail to 14 State a Claim upon Which Relief can be Granted.

15 This Court should deny the organizational Plaintiffs’ claims, made on their 16 own behalf, under the Rehabilitation Act for failure to state a claim upon which 17 relief can be granted because they have not established that Defendants are within 18 the zone of interests of the Rehabilitation Act. See Lexmark Int’l, Inc. v. Static 19 Control Components, Inc., 134 S. Ct. 1377, 1387 (2014) (clarifying that the zone 20 of interest test is substantive rather than jurisdictional). The Rehabilitation Act’s 21 statutory scheme authorizes remedy to “any person aggrieved by any act or failure 22 to act by any recipient of Federal assistance or Federal provider of such assistance 23 under section 794.” 29 U.S.C. § 794(a)(2). However, courts have interpreted “any 24 person aggrieved” narrowly, “enabling suit by any plaintiff with an interest 25 ‘arguably sought to be protected by the statute . . . while excluding plaintiffs who 26 might technically be injured in an Article III sense but whose interests are 27 unrelated to the statutory prohibitions” Thompson v. N. Am. Stainless, LP,

1 562 U.S. 170, 178 (2011) (holding that the zone of interest for a statute with the 2 term “any person aggrieved” should not be construed to protect anyone who may 3 have been indirectly injured, but to protect only those whose injuries were directly 4 related to the statutory prohibition).

5 Although the organizational Plaintiffs allege that their clients suffer injuries 6 from inadequate disability accommodations, and that these injuries place those 7 Plaintiffs within the zone of interests of the Rehabilitation Act, the organizational 8 Plaintiffs themselves allege a completely different injury—diversion of resources 9 and a frustration of their mission. Compl. ¶¶ 100, 112. The organizational Plaintiffs 10 do not require disability accommodations, but rather advocate on behalf of their 11 disabled clients for adequate accommodations. Accordingly, the organizational 12 Plaintiffs’ “interests are unarguably ‘so marginally related to . . . the purposes 13 implicit in the [regulation] that it cannot reasonably be assumed that Congress [and 14 the regulators] intended to permit the suit.’” Nw. Immigrant Rights Project v.
15 United States Citizenship & Immigration Servs., 325 F.R.D. 671, 688 (W.D. Wash.
16 2016) (citing Match–E–Be–Nash–She–Wish Band of Pottawatomi Indians v.
17 Patchak, 132 S. Ct. 2199, 2210 (2012)). Therefore, because the organizational 18 Plaintiffs have not shown that they fall within the zone of interests contemplated 19 by the Rehabilitation Act, their claims should be dismissed for failure to state a 20 claim upon which relief can be granted.

21
22 G. PLAINTIFFS’ IMMATERIAL, IRRELEVANT, AND 23 UNNECESSARY ALLEGATIONS SHOULD BE STRICKEN
24 UNDER FEDERAL RULE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE 12(f)

25 Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(f) provides that a “court may strike from 26 a pleading any insufficient defense or any redundant, immaterial, impertinent, or 27 scandalous matter.” In doing so, “the court may act on its own” or “on motion 28 made by a party [] before responding to the pleading” Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(f).

1 “The function of a 12(f) motion to strike is to avoid the expenditure of time and 2 money that must arise from litigating spurious issues by dispensing with those 3 issues prior to trial . . .” Fantasy, Inc. v. Fogerty, 984 F.2d 1524, 1527 (9th Cir.
4 1993), rev’d on other grounds, 510 U.S. 517 (1994). Insufficient allegations in a 5 pleading that do not consist of an entire claim for relief may be challenged by a 6 motion to strike. See Thompson v. Paul, 657 F. Supp. 2d 1113, 1129-30 (D. Ariz.
7 2009); Fantasy, Inc., 984 F.2d at 1527.

8 “‘Immaterial’ matter is that which has no essential or important relationship 9 to the claim for relief or the defenses being pleaded.” Fantasy, Inc., 984 F.2d at 10 1527 (quoting 5 Charles A. Wright & Arthur R. Miller, Federal Practice and 11 Procedure § 1382, at 706–07 (1990)). “‘Impertinent’ matter consists of statements 12 that do not pertain, and are not necessary, to the issues in question.” Id.; see also 13 United Studios of Self Defense, Inc. v. Rinehart, 2019 WL 1109682, No. 8:18-CV-14 01048-DOC-DFM, at *3 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 22, 2019). Finally allegations that are 15 unnecessary, burdensome to answer, and unduly prejudicial to Defendant should 16 be stricken. See In re “Agent Orange” Product Liab. Litig., 475 F. Supp. 928, 935
17 (E.D.N.Y. 1979); see also Verfuert v. Orion Energy Systems, Inc., 65 F. Supp. 3d
18 640, 65 (E.D. Wis. 2014) (“where 73 of complaint’s 96 pages contained only 19 unnecessary ‘background’ facts and motion was granted because requiring 20 defendant to pay counsel to investigate and respond to such facts ‘definitely falls 21 into the category of prejudice.’”). A motion to strike is a proper procedural vehicle 22 to challenge insufficiently pled allegations pursuant to Rule 8(a), as interpreted by 23 the Supreme Court in Iqbal and Twombly. See In Re Toyota Motor Corp., 826 F.
24 Supp. 2d 1180, 1207-08 (C.D. Cal. 2011) (striking legal conclusions in complaint 25 that were cast as factual allegations).

26
27 This Rule 12(f) motion is timely. Although Rule 12(f) motions to strike must 28 generally be brought before responding to the pleadings, Defendants seek the same

1 relief they are concurrently seeking in the motion to dismiss for failure to state a 2 claim. Moreover, courts in this District have found a motion to strike timely when 3 brought at any point in the case, reasoning that the courts are considering the issue
4 of their own accord. See e.g., San Pedro Boat Works, Inc. v. Water Quality Ins.
5 Syndicate, No. 04-08495-DDP (RCx), 2006 WL 4811383, at *2 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 13, 6 2006) (“[c]ourts have read Rule 12(f) to allow a district court to consider a motion 7 to strike at any point in the case . . . despite the fact that its attention was prompted 8 by an untimely filed motion.”).

10 The only way to remove the multitude of improper allegations that plague
11 the Complaint is to bring this Motion in conjunction with the simultaneous Motion 12 to Dismiss pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b). This way, should the 13 case proceed past the pleading stage, the operative Complaint will state only proper 14 allegations. As presently pled, many of Plaintiffs’ allegations throughout the 15 Complaint are, at minimum, immaterial and impertinent to their claims. Paragraphs 16 139 to 202 are essentially a history of issues concerning immigration detention 17 centers. Compl. ¶¶ 139-202 (discussing general history and statistics that are 18 unrelated to the present case, letters from 2012 about facilities that do not house 19 any of the named Plaintiffs, reports from 2014 about statistics unrelated to issues in 20 this case, articles about noncitizen veterans who are not parties to this case, and 21 general “conditions of confinement in prisons and jails,” and more); see also ¶¶ 22 343-49, 458, 480 (discussing reports, some a decade old, on unrelated issues). The 23 rest of the Complaint, paragraphs 203-657, is littered with irrelevant material. See 24 Compl. ¶¶ 223-25 (discussing irrelevant and unnecessary detainee death reviews 25 from detention centers across the country); ¶¶ 226-36, 270-79, 296-305, 319-34, 26 350-55, 365-66, 378-86, 404-12, 426-28, 466, 473-78, 496-500 (repeatedly 27 describing in detail the health issues and deaths of individuals not parties to this 28 action); ¶¶ 241, 287, 294, 317-18, 370-76, 442-43, 448-49, 452-54, 490, 494, 540

1 (discussing old reports about facilities not at issue in this case); ¶¶ 209-13, 242,
2 282-84, 295, 308-09, 356, 370, 399-400, 416, 424-25 (providing vague allegations 3 about un-specified individuals and facilities). None of the allegations in these 4 paragraphs involve any of the named Plaintiffs or relate specifically to any of their 5 allegations or claims for relief, and thus are immaterial and impertinent. See 6 Fantasy, Inc., 984 F.2d at 1527; Rinehart, 2019 WL 1109682 at *3. Indeed, even if 7 this Court deemed those paragraphs relevant, it would be overly onerous to answer 8 and unduly prejudicial to Defendants. Accordingly, if these allegations are not 9 stricken from the Complaint, Defendants will be prejudiced as it will be virtually 10 impossible to respond in any meaningful way to the improper, immaterial, and 11 impertinent claims. See In re "Agent Orange" Product Liab. Litig., 475 F. Supp. at 12 935. Therefore, all of the above Paragraphs should be stricken from the Complaint.

13 IV. CONCLUSION

14 For all the foregoing reasons, Defendants respectfully request that the Court 15 dismiss the Complaint. Specifically, Defendants request that the Court:

- 16 1. Sever the claims of the Plaintiffs who are not detained within the 17 jurisdiction of the Central District of California;
- 18 2. Dismiss the claims of the Plaintiffs who are not detained within the 19 jurisdiction of the Central District of California, or alternatively, transfer those 20 claims to the jurisdiction where each Plaintiff is detained;
- 21 3. Sever and dismiss the claims of the Plaintiffs detained within the 22 jurisdiction of the Central District of California;
- 23 4. For claims that are not severed and dismissed or transferred, dismiss 24 Plaintiffs' claims for lack of subject matter jurisdiction pursuant to Federal Rule of 25 Civil Procedure 12(b)(1) where appropriate, or for failure to state a claim upon 26 which relief can be granted pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6);
- 27 5. Dismiss the organizational Plaintiffs for lack of standing;
