During Calendar Year 2015, the 23rd Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 6,172 cases. The office received $925,576 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 77% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

With the exception of a single instance, the 23rd has always failed to realize the 25% increase in local funds that was expected to materialize as a result of Act 578 (2012).

The 23rd Judicial District office has nearly exhausted its fund balance as the office's expenditures exceed the office's revenues. Insufficient personnel and fiscal resources forced the 23rd Judicial District office to begin restricting services on December 1, 2015.

During Calendar Year 2015, the 24th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 11,180 cases. The office received $3,531,168 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 81% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

Since the inception of Act 578 (2012), the 25% expected increase in local have failed to materialize more than fifty percent of the time.

The 24th Judicial District Office received a single local bond fees & forfeitures disbursement totalling more than $275,000 in April which allowed revenues to exceed expenditures during Calendar Year 2015 for the first time in more than six years. It is unclear if this increase represents a one-time occurrence or a shift towards increased revenues for a district that once had a fund balance totalling more than one million dollars.

Explain District's Method of Assigning Lawyers to Cases in Courts/Sections	The PD assigned to the Magistrate Court is appointed by the Magistrate Judge to all in-jail clients who are qualified. The MPD represents clients until Arraignment. At Arraignment the Commissioner Court orders PDO appointment and Office Staff makes appropriate appointment.
Name of Adult Detention Facilities in This District	Jefferson Parish Correctional Center
Name of Adult Detention Facilities Outside the District Which Hold Clients	None
Name of Juvenile Detention Facilities In This District	Rivarde Detention Center
Name of Juvenile Detention Facilities Outside the District Which Hold Clients	None
Does the Location of Detention Facilities Affect Quality of Representation or Budget? If So, How?	No
Do your courts routinely bring juveniles before the judge in shackles if they are being held in detention or secure custody at the time of the hearing? If not, please describe your courts' shackling policy and procedure.	Yes
Has Your District Experienced Any Difficulty Accessing Detained Clients at Any Detention Facility? If So, Please Describe	The Jefferson Parish Sheriff's Office stated that they are having severe staffing problems which has limited the number of prisoners kept at the local jail. This staffing problem also gives rise to other issues regarding visitation by private investigators. Therefore, they instituted a rule by which the investigators will not be allowed into the jail without the presence of the attorney who is assigned to that defendant. My first impulse was to attempt to institute some type of legal action, however I consider this a blessing in disguise in that it is requiring lawyers to visit the jail more frequently. Other than the usual delays, the attorneys themselves have no problems having access to their clients in jail.

Veterans Court provides special attention to defendants who are Veterans. Re-Entry Court provides an avenue and training for inmates to re-enter society after a minimum sentence is served.
Indigency Determined by Whom and How?	If incarcerated, by Magistrate Judge at 72 hour hearing. If on bond, at arraignment by Commissioner at Commissioner Court.

When is Assignment/Appointment of Counsel Made?	Magistrate orders appointment of Magistrate PD at 72 hour hearing, then Commissioner, at arraignment, orders PDO appointment for both in-jail and out-of-jail clients.
What steps does your office take to ensure conflict – free representation	Upon entering a client, our data system alerts us if a docket number already exists. At that time we are able to choose another attorney that is not affiliated with that case.
Initial Client Intake Conducted By Whom? (Name and Title)	Staff enters appointments into PDO system and provides client with a "Cover Sheet" which provides information on attorney and contact information.
Does this District Use an Intake Form? (If So, Please Attach to Hard Copy)	No
Brief Explanation of Intake Process	In-jail: Commissioner PD provides info on appointments from arraignment docket. Out-of-jail: Commissioner orders defendant to come to office and make application, after determining if defendant qualifies.

Does the Court Assess the Mandatory Special Cost (Court Fee) in Every Case Resulting in Conviction? If you were not in ROS in 2015, do you foresee the possibility of the district entering a Restriction of Services in the coming year, and if so, what are your initial preparatory steps to address this issue?	No
In CY15, have you instituted any downsizing of staff in response to a revenue-expenditure gap your district may have anticipated? If so, please list staff terminated.	We lost an additional 4 lawyers from the District Court. 1 of these lawyers was subsequently hired for the Special Drug Court. No new hires were made to replace the 4 District Court positions.
Immediate Critical Issue Areas	We have no critical issues at this time.
Long-Term Critical Issue Areas	We are anticipating that the funding for our office in the coming year will not be sufficient to maintain the present level of services. One of the solutions would be a reduction in services program.

THE 25TH JUDICIAL DISTRICT
PUBLIC DEFENDERS' OFFICE
PLAQUEMINES (POINT-A-LA-HACHE)

DISTRICT DEFENDER: MATTHEW ROBNETT
208 AVENUE G.
BELLE CHASSE, LA 70037
(504) 297-5236

25TH JUDICIAL DISTRICT : PLAQUEMINES PARISHES

Matthew Robnett
District Defender
208 Avenue G
504-297-5236

During Calendar Year 2015, the 25th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 1,113 cases. The office received $191,852 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 72% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

Since the inception of Act 578 (2012), local revenues associated with court costs have been unstable and erratic apparently due to irregular remittance schedules as shown in the graph below. Revenues have often fallen below the 25% expected increase and then again exceeded it with no apparent pattern.

The 25th Judicial District office has nearly exhausted its fund balance as the office's expenditures exceed the office's revenues. Insufficient personnel and fiscal resources forced the 25th Judicial District office to begin restricting services September 2015.

In the 25th Judicial District, public defense attorneys maintain caseloads in excess of the recommended caseload limit for each attorney yet below the state average.

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

Does this District Use an Intake Form? (If So, Please Attach to Hard Copy)	Yes

Brief Explanation of Intake Process	Before the Judge comes to the court the PDO interviews all the clients and determines whether they qualify. After Judge has completed the magistrate, the attorney located in our office conducts a first jail visit/interview with that client. Client is then taken back to prison unless able to bond out. The attorney in our office answers all questions that need to be answered and provides any additional help that the client needs at this time. ## 26th JUDICIAL DISTRICT : BOSSIER AND WEBSTER PARISHES

Pamela G. Smart
Interim District Defender
211 Burt Boulevard
Benton, LA 71006
318-965-0630

During Calendar year 2015, the 26th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 15,013 cases. The office received $1,576,715 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 53% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

Since the passage of Act 578 (2012) in the 26th Judicial District, the expected 25% increase in local revenues has never materialized.

The 26th Judicial District office has nearly exhausted its fund balance as the office's expenditures exceed the office's revenues. Insufficient personnel and fiscal resources forced the 26th Judicial District office to begin restricting services March 4, 2015, effectively closing the gap between expenditures and revenues.

In the 26th Judicial District, public defense attorneys maintain caseloads more than four times the recommended caseload limit for each attorney.

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

Explain District's Method of Assigning Lawyers to Cases in Courts/Sections	Felony cases are assigned to the attorney for the division to which the case is assigned. LWOP cases are specially assigned to the attorney best suited for the case. In some instances, if it better serves the client, a case is specially assigned to an attorney other than the division attorney. Misdemeanor cases are now assigned to a division like the felony cases so the attorney assignment for those cases are now the same as for felony cases. Conflict cases are assigned to a contract conflict attorney in Webster parish and one of two contract conflict attorneys in Bossier. If those three attorneys are ineligible, the private bar gets appointed.

Does the Location of Detention Facilities Affect Quality of Representation or Budget? If So, How?	We no longer reimburse staff for mileage effective July 1, 2014. The jails are in rural locations so travel time is at least 20' to many facilities and longer if housed in a surrounding parish facility.
Do your courts routinely bring juveniles before the judge in shackles if they are being held in detention or secure custody at the time of the hearing? If not, please describe your courts' shackling policy and procedure.	Yes.
Has Your District Experienced Any Difficulty Accessing Detained Clients at Any Detention Facility? If So, Please Describe	No

When is Assignment/Appointment of Counsel Made?	Non-capital felonies and misdemeanors - upon appointment of PDO. Capital cases - district office notifies LPDB staff who make assignment.
What steps does your office take to ensure conflict – free representation	Support staff receives appointment list prior to initial appearance for obvious conflicts then immediately after appointment, investigator and/or attorneys run conflict checks in data base. Motion to relieve PDO and appoint conflict counsel is filed immediately. Since the office has been in ROS, conflict cases are monitored for appointment of counsel by the DD and other support staff as well.
Initial Client Intake Conducted By Whom? (Name and Title)	Bossier District Court: Amanda Roberts (Data Entry Specialist/Secretary), Karen Robinson (Secretary), Nancy Cooper (Secretary). Bossier City Court: Amanda Roberts (Data Entry). Webster District, Springhill City, Minden City, and all Webster Juvenile Courts: LaKeia Taylor (Secretary/Receptionist), Jasmine Crew (Secretary/Receptionist), Elaine Skinner (Juvenile Secretary). All client interviews are conducted by the attorney to whom the case is assigned.
Does this District Use an Intake Form? (If So, Please Attach to Hard Copy)	Yes
Brief Explanation of Intake Process	When notice of appointment is received (incarcerated clients through jail appointment list and bond clients through court minutes), the information is entered into the database, a file is generated, and the case is assigned to the appropriate attorney. Since ROS, conflict motions are filed requesting either contract conflict or private bar. The conflict cases are opened in the database where the cases are either assigned to the conflict contract attorney or closed as "withdrawn" if private counsel is appointed.

Does the Court Assess the Mandatory Special Cost (Court Fee) in Every Case Resulting in Conviction? If Not, Explain.	If a client is convicted of multiple offenses at the same time, the court may order the court costs to be concurrent. Sometimes the court may waive court costs if there are special circumstances.
What, If Any, Accounting Documentation is Provided to You Regarding Fees Assessed and by Whom is it provided?	The agencies from whom we receive fees itemize as far as how much money was collected for bond fees, mandatory assessments, etc. However, we only receive a list of defendants who were assessed the mandatory assessment from Minden City Court.
Who Collects the Assessed Court Fees?	Bossier City Court - Terri Spence; Bossier Sheriff - Mike Rabinowitz; Webster Sheriff - Kaye Taverner; Minden City Court - Tammy Frye; Springhill City Court - Judy Smith.
What, If Any, Accounting Documentation is Provided to You Regarding Fees Collected and by Whom is it Provided?	The person at each agency that writes the check for the fees either submits the itemization form provided by LPDB or itemizes the amounts on the check stub.
Who Remits the Court Fees Collected?	Bossier City Court - Terri Spence; Bossier Sheriff - Mike Rabinowitz; Webster Sheriff - Kaye Taverner; Minden City Court - Tammy Frye; Springhill City Court - Judy Smith.
What, If Any, Accounting Documentation is Provided to You Regarding Fees Remitted to You and by Whom is it Provided?	The person at each agency that writes the check for the fees either submits the itemization form provided by LPDB or itemizes the amounts on the check stub.

What, If Any, Accounting Documentation is Provided to You Regarding Fees Assessed and by Whom is it Provided?	We must rely on court minutes and attorneys in court to keep track of this information.
Who Collects the Assessed Partial Payments?	Generally, the PDO collects the partial payments. Occasionally, money is received via DOC through P&P.
What, If Any, Accounting Documentation is Provided to You Regarding Fees Collected and by Whom is it Provided?	We collect it in the office. However, we do receive some money from DOC. Those are individually documented.
Who Remits the Partial Payments Collected?	The client sends it directly to the PDO. Sometimes we receive money from DOC through P&P.
What, If Any, Accounting Documentation is Provided to You Regarding Fees Remitted to You and by Whom is it Provided?	None. The office receives the payments directly.
Amount, If Any, of Partial Indigence Payments Received by the Office in CY15	18,245
Does Your Office Have a Private Practice Policy? If So, Is the Policy in Writing?	The written policy is contained in the Employee Manual. Attorneys may take very minimal private cases outside the jurisdiction as long as full-time hours required by the PDO are fulfilled. However, the Chief Defender must be informed of the private case to make sure there is no conflict. Most attorneys that do private practice do routine wills, curatorships, some private criminal in other jurisdictions, and some appointed cases in federal court or through the Department of Corrections.

For the Contract Attorneys in Your District, Is There a Written Contract For His/Her Services? If So, Please Provide a Blank Copy of the Standard Contract	Yes
Primary Immediate Needs	More office space in Bossier, new rented office space in Webster, more staff, full conflicts panel, money to reimburse attorneys for travel to rural jails, funding for training.
Was your office in ROS at any time during 2015	Yes
If you were not in ROS in 2015, do you foresee the possibility of the district entering a Restriction of Services in the coming year, and if so, what are your initial preparatory steps to address this issue?	The 26th entered ROS March 4, 2015 and does not appear to be coming out of it completely in the near future.
In CY15, have you instituted any downsizing of staff in response to a revenue-expenditure gap your district may have anticipated? If so, please list staff terminated.	The conflict attorneys' contracts were terminated when we entered ROS. We immediately contracted with two attorneys, one for each parish, to handle the more serious conflict cases. In December, we were able to add a conflict attorney to Bossier to handle the incarcerated defendants on a waitlist. However, we are still need more conflict attorneys.
Immediate Critical Issue Areas	New office in Webster due to conditions of the building, more staff attorneys, support staff, more office space in Bossier, conflict panel.
Long-Term Critical Issue Areas	Funding for travel, seminars, memberships to professional organizations, etc.
Please List All New Hires in 2015 (Name and Title)	Kerry Hill (Staff Attorney), Laurie Wilson (Juvenile Supervisor), Kendra Joseph (Staff Attorney), Felicia Hamilton (Conflict Attorney), J Florence (City Court Misdemeanor Attorney), Dell Harville (CINC Conflict Attorney), Jasmine Crew (Secretary).
Please List All Promotions in 2015 (Name and Title)	0
2015 Media Coverage and/or Major Accomplishments	Mostly special news coverage about funding issues with the PDO.
Number of Expected New Attorney Hires in 2016	One contract attorney for Webster to add to the contract attorney that is presently acting as conflict attorney in Webster. This would allow the staff attorneys to not have to travel to Webster resulting in a decrease in caseloads and a drastic decrease in workload.
Do You Provide Training, Coaching, or Mentoring for New Attorneys? If So, Describe	New attorneys shadow staff attorneys for a couple of weeks to observe court, jail visits, etc. The "buddy system" is used on all cases proceeding to trial and on certain cases due to the nature and the complexity of the case as a tool to learn the possible ways an investigator may be used, motion practice, etc.
Does Your District Office Provide Employee Manuals or Handbooks? (Yes or No - Do Not Attach)	Yes

Describe Supervisory Structure in Your District (For Attorneys and Non-Attorneys)	The district court attorneys are supervised by the LWOP attorney and the Chief District Defender who observe court, discuss cases with attorneys, and generally act as mentors. Juvenile court attorneys and support staff are supervised by a senior attorney assigned to juvenile. Another senior attorney handles collection of time sheets, sign-in sheets, and issues that might arise with all staff. The support staff is supervised by the office manager (general human resource issues) and the Data Entry Specialist (monitors the database).
Have Any New Job Titles Been Added to Your District Office in 2015? (Please List Name and Title)	No
Please Attach Your Office Organizational Chart	Attached.
Any Policy for Caseload/Workload Reduction for Supervisory Staff, Please Describe	The LWOP attorney who primarily supervises the attorneys regarding client representation has a lesser caseload.

Number of Cases Involving Children Under Age 17 in Your District in Which a Transfer of a Child to Adult Court Was Denied	0
Please Describe Any Procedures That Are in Place For Assigning Attorneys Experienced With Juvenile Defendants to Transferable or Transferred Cases	When a juvenile defendant is transferred to adult court he/she is specially assigned to the more experienced attorneys that handle LWOP cases.
Please Provide the Names of All State Representatives and Senators from Your District	Representatives: Dodie Horton, Cedric Glover, Thomas G. Carmody Jr., James H. Morris, H. Eugene Reynolds, Mike Johnson. Senators: Ryan Gatti, Barrow Peacock.
Other than funding issues, what External Factors (outside of your control) Negatively Affect the Delivery of Services in Your District?	District has grown and PDO has evolved for the better but criminal justice system as a whole remains static. Operating procedures should evolve with the growing population.

What Changes Have You Implemented in Your District Office in 2015 That Have Improved the Delivery of Public Defender Services?	More staff meetings, major factor in hiring of attorneys is now consideration of indicators that the potential hire exhibited a strong interest in public defender work/criminal law prior to applying for a PDO position i.e. participation in litigation clinics.

DISTRICT DEFENDER: EDWARD JAMES LOPEZ

27th JUDICIAL DISTRICT : ST. LANDRY PARISH

Edward James Lopez
District Defender
125 West Landry Street
337-942-3003

During Calendar Year 2015, the 27th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 5,595 cases. The office received $997,779 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 66% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

With the exception of a few anomalies, the 27th has generally failed to realize the 25% increase in local funds that was expected to materialize as a result of Act 578 (2012).

The 27th Judicial District office has relied heavily on its fund balance. Without a significant increase in revenues or reduction in expenditures, the office is expected to become insolvent during FY16.

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

28th JUDICIAL DISTRICT : LASALLE PARISH

Derrick Carson
District Defender
3170 N. 1st St
318-992-0881

During Calendar Year 2015, the 28th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 761 cases. The office received $206,137 in total revenues to handle these cases. Local funds derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs are insufficient to support client representation, as approximately 70% of the district's revenues came from state funding.

Since the inception of Act 578 (2012), local revenues associated with court costs have been unstable due to erratic remittance patterns. Revenues have fallen below the 25% expected increase quite often.

Although the office received additional state supplemental assistance during FY15, insufficient personnel and fiscal resources forced the 28th Judicial District office to begin restricting services on February 16, 2015.

District 28 PDO Average Caseload per Atty FTE

In the 28th Judicial District, public defense attorneys maintain caseloads three times the recommended average caseload limit for each attorney as staff reductions have increased attorney workloads. The 28th Judicial District is a rural district that handles only a small number of cases each year, making comparisons difficult. However, public defense attorneys have benefited from the training and supervision offered by LPDB.

District 28 PDO Average Caseloads Compared to State Average & State Standard Maximums

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

29th JUDICIAL DISTRICT : ST. CHARLES PARISH

Victor E. Bradley, Jr.
District Defender
15621 Airline Highway, Suite B
985-764-2338

During Calendar Year 2015, the 29th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 2,014 cases. The office is self-reliant as 100% of its revenues were derived from local funding which came primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

Since the passage of Act 578 (2012) the 29th Judicial District has historically been one of the only districts in the state to almost consistently meet or exceed the expected 25% increase in local revenues. However, during FY15, local revenues only met or exceeded expectations six months of the calendar year.

Between CY10 and CY14, the Judicial District Office's local revenues continued to increase, however during CY15 the district saw a 28% reduction in revenues. It is unclear if 2015 was an anomaly or represents a downward trend for this district. The district and LPDB will continue to monitor the office's revenues. Consistent revenues have allowed the District Defender to provide living wages to support staff and public defense attorneys, while also maintaining attorney caseloads near the recommended caseload limits.

29th JUDICIAL DISTRICT : ST. CHARLES PARISH

Victor E. Bradley, Jr.
District Defender
15621 Airline Highway, Suite B
985-764-2338

In the 29th Judicial District, public defense attorneys maintain caseloads near the recommended caseload limit for each attorney and well below the state average.

Through increased training and supervision, client outcomes have significantly improved over the last six years.

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capially certified counsel on staff, but the district has adequate funds to contract with certified counsel outside the district.

Tony Tillman
District Defender

Leesville, LA 71496
337-392-3077

During Calendar Year 2015 the 30th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 2,203 cases. The office received $589,809 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 77% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

Since the inception of Act 578 (2012), local revenues associated with court costs have been unstable and erratic. As shown in the graph below, revenues have fallen below the 25% expected increase more than fifty percent of the time.

The 30th Judicial District office has nearly exhausted its fund balance. Insufficient personnel and fiscal resources forced the 30th Judicial District office to begin restricting services January of 2015.

District 30 PDO Average Caseload per Atty FTE

In the 30th Judicial District, public defense attorneys maintain caseloads nearly twice the recommended caseload limit for each attorney.

Although caseloads remain high due to insufficient revenues, through increased training and supervision, adult client outcomes have significantly improved over the last six years.

District 30 PDO Average Caseloads Compared to State Average & State Standard Maximums

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

The majority of misdemeanor counsel is assigned at arraignment. In an effort to get applicants into the system sooner, the district defender created a Notice which the Sheriff mails to the defendants along with the Notice of arraignment advising the defendants to apply for counsel PRIOR to the day of arraignment. This has helped, and about half of the defendants come in before arraignment, the balance is dealt with at arraignment.
What steps does your office take to ensure conflict – free representation	During interview clients are asked if they were arrested with anyone or if they have any co defendants. If they have co defendants we then make a note so that at time of appointment they won't be assigned same attorney.

Primary Immediate Needs	Additional funds to obtain an investigator, a social worker, and additional staff. We are having difficulties getting current data into the system, and I think the only effective solution is to have all the data input by the district defenders office directly rather than rely on the individual contract attorneys. One employee can Not do all the intake, bookkeeping, bill paying, office administration, etc, and do all the data input.
If you were not in ROS in 2015, do you foresee the possibility of the district entering a Restriction of Services in the coming year, and if so, what are your initial preparatory steps to address this issue?	We are still in ROS at this time with no date in the future of getting out of ROS.
In CY15, have you instituted any downsizing of staff in response to a revenue-expenditure gap your district may have anticipated? If so, please list staff terminated.	We had two attorneys resign and one that was terminated. After the termination one of the attorneys that resigned took his cases. Misty Smith resigned. Bradley Hicks terminated. Wesley Bailey resigned then returned.
Immediate Critical Issue Areas	Data input is a critical area for us-since the budget is dependent on the data, our district will continue to get short changed until I can solve this problem. The attorneys continually complain that they do Not mind the legal work; it is the data collection they complain about.
Long-Term Critical Issue Areas	Need of office space and staff, particularly an investigator and social worker. With a drug court and extensive OCS caseload, a social worker would greatly benefit our clients
Please List All New Hires in 2015 (Name and Title)	D. Wayne Bush

Does Your District Office Provide Employee Manuals or Handbooks? (Yes or No - Do Not Attach)	Yes
Describe Supervisory Structure in Your District (For Attorneys and Non-Attorneys)	With only 2 full time employees supervising them is easy- they both are in offices next to mine, and I am in their offices multiple times a day. The attorneys are all on contract and have their own offices. I see them in court regularly, and meet with the judges and the DA and ask for observations about the attorneys' performances. I have met with individually with each attorneys to discuss issues, i.e. need to document client contact, need to do more frequent jail visits, ect.

David E. Marcantel
District Defender
300 North State Street, Room 203
337-824-4900

During Calendar Year 2015, the 31st Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 1,721 cases. The office received $424,673 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 84% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

Since the passage of Act 578 (2012), the 31st has generally failed to realize the 25% increase in local funds that was expected to materialize.

As local revenues have declined, the 31st Judicial District Office has relied heavily upon its fund balance. While it is too early to project when the 31st Judicial District Office will exhaust its fund balance, without an increase in revenues or reduction in expenditures the fund balance will continue to decline and the office will eventually become insolvent.

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

During Calendar Year 2015, the 32nd Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 4,944 cases. The office received $1,356,970, 68% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

With the exception of a few anomalies, the 32nd has generally failed to realize the 25% increase in local funds that was expected to materialize as a result of Act 578 (2012).

The 32nd Judicial District office has nearly exhausted its fund balance as expenditures typically exceeded the office's revenues. The office is expected to become insolvent near the end of FY16.

As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

Primary Immediate Needs	As mentioned on this item in previous reports, this office once employed two attorneys for each district court division. One attorney handled all cases involving violations of control dangerous substance statutes. The other attorney handled all other cases. Three years ago, before the State Board adopted the restriction of service protocol rules, this office cut the five positions for handling drug violation cases. Even with the legislation for increase of court costs, we have not realized the type of revenue that would allow for the reinstatement of those positions. Reinstatement of these positions would help substantially in the reduction of caseloads for the remaining five division attorneys.
Was your office in ROS at any time during 2015	No
If you were not in ROS in 2015, do you foresee the possibility of the district entering a Restriction of Services in the coming year, and if so, what are your initial preparatory steps to address this issue?	Yes. District Defender met with judges in August, 2015 to advise of the possibility of ROS and the need for cooperation by the judges on assessing all local funding available by law. Further, the judges were advised of the possibility that the office would no longer be able to pay conflict counsel.
In CY15, have you instituted any downsizing of staff in response to a revenue-expenditure gap your district may have anticipated? If so, please list staff terminated.	In January 2015, the office lost the 1st assistant public defender, Amanda Mustin, to Office of the District Attorney. She was the highest paid assistant. The office hired a new assistant at a reduced salary and continued to employ one other assistant, Tanner Magee, to assist in training the newest assistant. The training assistant, Magee, resigned midyear to engage in what turned out to be a successful bid for State Representative. The loss of these assistants resulted in a decrease in salary paid by the office.

Chad Guidry
District Defender
400 West Sixth Ave Courthouse Bldg

During Calendar Year 2015, the 33rd Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 468 cases. The office received $208,288 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 83% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

With the exception of a few anomalies, the 33rd has generally failed to realize the 25% increase in local funds that was expected to materialize as a result of Act 578 (2012).

The 33rd Judicial District office avoided service restriction during FY15 after the resignation of the former district defender who was elected to the judiciary. His resignation reduced the office's salary-related expenditures for several months. However, now that a new district defender has been hired, the office is again facing insolvency and will enter service restrictions in either February or March of 2016.

District 33 PDO Average Caseload per Atty FTE

In the 33rd Judicial District, public defense attorneys maintain caseloads which are in compliance with the recommended caseload limit for each attorney.

The 33rd Judicial District is a rural district that handles only a small number of cases each year, making comparisons difficult. However, public defense attorneys have benefited from the training and supervision offered by LPDB.

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

504-278-4438

During Calendar Year 2015, the 34th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 2,912 cases. The office received $330,105 in total revenues to handle these cases. As local funding is largely insufficient, approximately 42% of revenues came from local funding.

The 34th has failed to realize the 25% increase in local funds that was expected to materialize as a result of Act 578 (2012), in fact revenues are generally lower than pre-Act 578 levels.

The 34th Judicial District office has nearly exhausted its fund balance as the office's expenditures exceed the office's revenues. Insufficient personnel and fiscal resources forced the 34th Judicial District office to begin restricting services on January 1, 2016.

District 34 PDO Average Caseload per Atty FTE

In the 34th Judicial District, public defense attorneys maintain caseloads more than three times the recommended caseload limit for each attorney.

Although caseloads remain high due to insufficient revenues, through increased training and supervision, client outcomes have significantly improved over the last five years.

District 34 PDO Average Caseloads Compared to State Average & State Standard Maximums

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

THE 35TH JUDICIAL DISTRICT PUBLIC DEFENDERS' OFFICE GRANT (COLFAX)

DISTRICT DEFENDER: ROBERT L. KENNEDY
COLFAX, LA 71417
(318) 627-3255

35TH JUDICIAL DISTRICT : GRANT PARISH

Robert L. Kennedy
District Defender
352 Second Street
318-627-3255

During Calendar Year 2015, the 35th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 753 cases. The office received $257,504 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 57% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

With the exception of a few anomalies, the 35th has generally failed to realize the 25% increase in local funds that was expected to materialize as a result of Act 578 (2012).

The 35th Judicial District office nearly exhausted its fund balance during FY14. However, increased local revenues and state supplemental assistance have allowed the office to remain solvent.

35TH JUDICIAL DISTRICT : GRANT PARISH

Robert L. Kennedy
District Defender
352 Second Street
318-627-3255

In the 35th Judicial District, public defense attorneys maintain caseloads more than two times the recommended caseload limit for each attorney.

The 35th Judicial District is a rural district that handles only a small number of cases each year, making comparisons difficult. However, public defense attorneys have benefited from the training and supervision offered by LPDB.

District 35 PDO Average Caseloads Compared to State Average & State Standard Maximums

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

David L. Wallace
District Defender
518 North Pine Street
DeRidder, LA 70634
337-462-8891

During Calendar Year 2015, the 36th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 1,028 cases. The office received $345,817 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 82% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

With the exception of a few anomalies, the 36th Judicial District has generally failed to realize the 25% increase in local funds that was expected to materialize as a result of Act 578 (2012).

Over the past three years, revenues have exceeded or kept pace with expenditures, and the fund balance has remained low but fairly stable since CY14.

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

PUBLIC DEFENDERS' OFFICE
CALDWELL (COLUMBIA)

DISTRICT DEFENDER: LOUIS CHAMPAGNE

37th JUDICIAL DISTRICT : CALDWELL PARISH

Louis Champagne
District Defender
301 Wall Street
318-649-2626

During Calendar Year 2015, the 37th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 481 cases. The office received $194,112 in total revenues to handle these cases. As local funding is largely insufficient, approximately 80% of revenues came from state funding. With the exception of those months when no local funds were remitted in the baseline year of 2012, the 37th has generally failed to realize the 25% increase in local funds that was expected to materialize as a result of Act 578 (2012). The fund balance has hovered near zero since CY11 leaving the district in need of emergency funding.

Additional state supplemental assistance during FY15 prevented insolvency, however without a reliable increase in revenues or reduction in expenditures, the 37th Judicial District office will deplete its relatively small fund balance and eventually become insolvent.

District 37 PDO Average Caseload per Atty FTE

In the 37th Judicial District, public defense attorneys maintain caseloads more than three times the recommended caseload limit for each attorney.

The 37th Judicial District is a rural district that handles only a small number of cases each year, making comparisons difficult. However, public defense attorneys have benefited from the training and supervision offered by LPDB.

District 37 PDO Average Caseloads Compared to State Average & State Standard Maximums

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

During Calendar Year 2015, the 38th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 225 cases. The office received $79,117 in total revenues to handle these cases, 100% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

During Fiscal Years 2013 and 2014, the office generally failed to realize the 25% increase in local funds that was expected to materialize as a result of Act 578 (2012). However, during FY15, revenues met or exceeded projections for eight months in that fiscal year.

The 38th Judicial District office is not currently engaged in deficit spending and maintains a fund balance which exceeds annual expenditures.

During Calendar Year 2015, the 39th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 595 cases. The office received $139,743 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 43% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

With the exception of a few anomalies, the 39th Judicial District has generally failed to realize the 25% increase in local funds that was expected to materialize as a result of Act 578 (2012).

The 39th Judicial District office nearly exhausted its fund balance however additional support from the local police jury and judiciary prevented service restrictions during Calendar Year 2015.

La Place, LA 70068

During Calendar Year 2015, the 40th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 3,243 cases. The office has traditionally been self-reliant as 100% of its revenues were derived from local funding which came primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

Since the passage of Act 578 (2012) in the 40th Judicial District, the expected 25% increase in local revenues has failed to materialize with the exception of eight months over the past three years.

Between CY11 and CY13, the 40th Judicial District Office's local revenues had decreased, falling well short of covering expenditures. Local revenues had decreased to the extent that in FY14, the State began providing an appropriation to help cover the gap between the district's revenues and expenditures (which accounts for the increase in CY14 revenues.) In FY15, the office once again received state supplemental assistance.

In the 40th Judicial District, public defense attorneys maintain caseloads in excess of recommended caseload limits for each attorney.

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

Are Your Office Accounting Services Handled In-House? (If not, name the third party who provides these services)	Yes; except that the annual audit is handled by Keith M. Rivere, CPA
Courts and Locations	District Court is located in Edgard (West Bank); Annex Courthouse is located in La Place (East Bank).
Number of Divisions/Sections of Criminal Court for Each Court in District (Include City Court, Municipal Court, etc.)	Three Divisions of Court. Each Division holds court in both the District and Annex Courthouses.

Explain District's Method of Assigning Lawyers to Cases in Courts/Sections	According to a pre-set grid or table, the cases are generally divided among the lawyers based on the division of court and the last digit of the case number. Example: In each division of court, the cases that end in an odd digit are normally assigned to one attorney and those ending in an even digit are assigned to another. When a defendant has more than one case in a division of court, the same lawyer is assigned to all such cases. When there are more than two clients in any case, the lawyers who handle cases in another division of court are assigned according to that grid. A copy of the grid has been attached to the electronic version of the district narrative.
Name of Adult Detention Facilities in This District	1. Sherman Walker Correctional Center; 2. St. John the Baptist Parish Jail ("old jail"); Both are located in La Place.
Name of Adult Detention Facilities Outside the District Which Hold Clients	For security reasons, some St. John inmates are housed in other parishes, including Nelson Coleman Correction Center in St. Charles Parish, Tangipahoa Parish Jail, and Concordia Parish Correctional Center.
Name of Juvenile Detention Facilities In This District	None
Name of Juvenile Detention Facilities Outside the District Which Hold Clients	Assumption Parish Youth Detention Center; Napoleonville, Louisiana.
Does the Location of Detention Facilities Affect Quality of Representation or Budget? If So, How?	Yes; to get to the Youth Detention Center from the Public Defenders Office requires approximately 2 hours and is a 85.2 miles round trip.
Do your courts routinely bring juveniles before the judge in shackles if they are being held in detention or secure custody at the time of the hearing? If not, please describe your courts' shackling policy and procedure.	No; due to the efforts of the juvenile Public Defenders, this practice has stopped. The juveniles are transported to the courthouse shackled, but they are unshackled for the court appearances.
Has Your District Experienced Any Difficulty Accessing Detained Clients at Any Detention Facility? If So, Please Describe	Yes; Attorney/Client visitation areas are very unsatisfactory. They are noisy and communications between attorneys and clients can be heard outside of the immediate area. The hours for attorney visitation are restricted, limited to only 6 hours per day, 3 hours in the morning and 3 hours in the afternoon, with a 2 hour break in between. Attorney visitation during weekends and holidays is also restricted and requires advanced permission from the warden.
District Attorney	Bridget Dinvaut
Chief Judge of Criminal District Court	Rotates annually; 2015 = Judge Mary Hotard Becnel; 2016 = Judge J. Sterling Snowdy; 2017 = Judge Madeline Jasmine.
Juvenile Court Judges (Specify District of City Court)	Division A- Judge Madeline Jasmine; Division B= Judge Mary Hotard Becnel; Division C= Judge Sterling J. Snowdy; All are District Court Judges
Drug Court Judges	Judge Madeline Jasmine
Mental Health Court Judges	None
Other Specialty Court	Yes

Name of Specialty and Brief Description:	Truancy Court. The judge reviews the attendance of juveniles registered in schools of St. John the Baptist Parish, including absences and tardiness. Nearly 80% of cases are resolved during the initial stage, where the judge orders that both the juvenile and the parent comply with the attendance policy of the school. At a subsequent date, if the juvenile is not in compliance, the FINS coordinator files a truancy petition alleging that the juvenile is either not attending school or has a substantial amount of tardiness. If the District Attorney determines that the parent is at fault, a misdemeanor charge of improper supervision may be filed against him/her and a trial may be held in truancy or misdemeanor court. Judge Mary Hotard Becnel presides over Truancy Court.
Indigency Determined by Whom and How?	Every Thursday, during office hours, the Public Defender Office takes applications from persons who are not incarcerated and who are seeking a public defender. The applicant is questioned using a standardized application form, which may be longer depending on the financial circumstances. The sworn application is reviewed by the District Defender who then either assigns counsel or files a certification of ineligibility. Both the "Affidavit of Poverty and Application for Public Defender Services" (short form) and the "Application for Public Defender Services" (long form) have been attached to the electronic version of the district narrative. Also the "Notice of Assignment of Counsel" and the "Certification Regarding Eligibility for the Services of a Public Defender" have been attached to the electronic version of the district narrative.
When is Assignment/Appointment of Counsel Made?	Within 72 hours after arrest, the duty judge speaks to the inmates by telephone or by video. An order appointing counsel is faxed to the PDO. The District Public Defender is appointed by name to all cases. He or an investigator does the initial jail visit to assign a line defender, generally within 3 judicial days. The incarcerated client is given a paper with information about applying for services upon release on bail and the name and phone number (free, not collect, calls) of the line defender who is assigned. That information is also filed into the court record. For those who post bail, counsel is assigned after a formal application is made (see previous answer).
What steps does your office take to ensure conflict – free representation	At intake, item numbers are cross-checked to determine whether more than one party is charged. We review police documents for names of witnesses and victims to see if they are charged in cases assigned to the PDO. We require that the lawyers immediately report if they perceive a conflict of any type. Members of the private bar have agreed to accept cases when the District Defender anticipates a conflict requiring "outside counsel."

Initial Client Intake Conducted By Whom? (Name and Title)	When the order appointing counsel is received at the PDO, or after formal application, the information is entered into the database by either Ashley A. Bogac, secretary, Erica N. Carter, secretary, or Diana G. Tambunga, secretary.
Does this District Use an Intake Form? (If So, Please Attach to Hard Copy)	The lawyers have access to a multi-page interview sheet to use when conducting client interviews at the jail. The first jail visit is done by the District Defender, during which data is entered into the database and notes are made. In most misdemeanor cases, no formal interview sheet is used for initial interviews. A copy of the interview sheet has been attached to the electronic version of the district narrative, labeled Exhibit A.
Brief Explanation of Intake Process	The lawyers have access to a multi-page interview sheet to use when conducting client interviews at the jail. The first jail visit is done by the District Defender, during which data is entered into the database and notes are made. A line defender is assigned by the District Defender. A copy of the interview sheet has been attached to the electronic version of the district narrative, labeled Exhibit A.
$40 Application Fees (per R.S. 14:175)
Does the Office Collect the $40 Application Fee?	Yes
How Many Applications for Services Were Received?	Approximately 454
How Many Application Fees Were Waived?	Unknown; the requirements that applications be made and application fees be paid are waived while defendants are incarcerated. It is also waived when a defendant has applied and been approved in an open, pending case, and is subsequently charged in a new case. Only then is the fee waived in the second case.
How Many Application Fees Were Reduced?	None
Total Application Fee Dollars Collected in 2015	$12,223
Does Another Agency Collect This Fee On Your Office's Behalf? If So, Which Agency Collects These Fees?	No; except when reported as delinquent debt to the Office of Debt Recovery. Only then is the application fee collected by the Louisiana Department of Revenue.
$45/$35 Special Cost (Court Fees, per R.S.15:168 )
Total Revenue from $45/$35 Special Costs Received in 2015	$741,258 (approximately 86% of PDO's revenue in 2015).
Does the Court Assess the Mandatory Special Cost (Court Fee) in Every Case Resulting in Conviction? If Not, Explain.	Yes; except in some cases, where a term of incarceration, without suspension, is actually imposed. If a client is arrested for failing to appear in court to prove that they have paid the court costs, the appointed lawyer may request credit for time served, in lieu of payment, in which case, the money is not collected. However, lately, the DA opposes this and the judges will then not grant the request.

What, If Any, Accounting Documentation is Provided to You Regarding Fees Assessed and by Whom is it provided?	In those cases handled by a Public Defender, information is received from the line defender or by review of the court minutes, which is routinely done by the clerical staff. Ordered fees, over and above the mandatory $45 court fee, are entered into the database from this information. A collection letter is then sent out to the client and followed up by a report to the Louisiana Department of Revenue's Office of Debt Recovery if said fees are not paid in a timely manner.
Who Collects the Assessed Court Fees?	As to the mandatory $45 court fee, the sheriff collects the funds and distributes them monthly. Other court ordered fees are collected directly from the clients at the Public Defender Office or by a probation officer.
What, If Any, Accounting Documentation is Provided to You Regarding Fees Collected and by Whom is it Provided?	As to the mandatory $45 court fee, a monthly statement is received from the sheriff specifying the amount collected. The Sheriff provides a form similar to that created by the LPDB. The District Attorney provides a print-out of costs collected in connection with bond forfeitures.
Who Remits the Court Fees Collected?	Court Costs, including the mandatory $45 court fee, are distributed by the sheriff.
What, If Any, Accounting Documentation is Provided to You Regarding Fees Remitted to You and by Whom is it Provided?	As to the mandatory $45 court fee, a monthly statement is received from the sheriff specifying the amount distributed. Ordered fees, over and above the mandatory $45 court fee, are entered into the database when received.
Partial Indigence Payments (per R.S.15:175/Ch.C.Art. 321)
Method for Determining Reduced Rate Charged For Legal Services if Client is Deemed Capable of Partial Payment	At the time of application, if the answers to the financial inquiries indicate that the defendant is partially indigent, he/she is requested by the District Defender to pay a set amount based on the type of case ($550 for a felony, $250 for a misdemeanor) to defray the costs of representation by the PDO, if that can be paid without creating a substantial financial hardship to him/herself or to his/her dependent(s).
What, If Any, Accounting Documentation is Provided to You Regarding Fees Assessed and by Whom is it Provided?	A record is made at the time of the application and certification is submitted to the judge. # THE 41ST JUDICIAL DISTRICT PUBLIC DEFENDERS' OFFICE ORLEANS (NEW ORLEANS)

DISTRICT DEFENDER: DERWYN D. BUNTON

NEW ORLEANS, LA 70119

Derwyn D. Bunton
District Defender
2601 Tulane Avenue; Suite 700
504-821-8101

During Calendar Year 2015, the 41st Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 21,184 cases. The office received $6,496,752 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 60% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs, as well as a significant investment from the City of New Orleans in the form of a non-statutorily-required appropriation.

With the exception of a few anomalies, the 41st Judicial District has generally failed to realize the 25% increase in local funds that was expected to materialize as a result of Act 578 (2012).

Despite significant investments made by the City of New Orleans, the 41st Judicial District office nearly exhausted its fund balance and was forced to officially begin restricting services on December 1, 2015.

The 41st Judicial District Public Defenders Office designates attorney representation based on attorney practice level. The office's fiscal crisis has led to significant attrition amongst the office's most experienced attorneys. While as an agency, the average attorney caseload is near LIDB standard maximums, the most experienced attorneys exceed both caseload and workload standards as the 41st district has the highest trial rate in the state. Attrition has forced the office to develop a wait list in some of the district's more serious felony cases to ensure ethical representation as there are simply not enough qualified attorneys to handle these cases.

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has limited capacity to accept capital cases as it does not have two certified counsel or otherwise does not have capacity to provide core team members as required by the Capital Performance Standards. Further, the Board passed a Resolution in 2015 to prohibit districts in restriction of services from accepting new capital appointments. As a result, all capital cases in this high-volume capital prosecution districts fall to the state to supply capital representation because the district is facing Restriction of Services.

Explain District's Method of Assigning Lawyers to Cases in Courts/Sections	Once appointed to the case by a judicial officer, after an initial conflict analysis, OPD assigns the case to either the OPD trial division, the OPD conflict division, or the OPD conflict panel. Within each of these, a case is assigned to an individual attorney based on the type of case/charge and the practice level of the attorney. OPD does continuous representation of all clients from appointment through the final disposition of the case. In the OPD Trial Division, case assignments are also made based on the initial allotment of the section of court for the case. In Municipal Court, all cases are misdemeanors and are at the same practice level. During 2015, OPD has been staffing Municipal Court both with full time Municipal Lawyers and through a "rotation" of attorneys in their first or second year of practice. OPD employs one part-time attorney for Traffic Court and all traffic cases go to that attorney. Juvenile Court work is mostly handled independently by the Louisiana Center for Children's Rights (formally Juvenile Regional Services) through a contract between LCCR and the Louisiana Public Defender Board. In 2015, OPD began representing conflict cases in juvenile court. OPD also continued to represent juvenile clients who face the possibility of either discretionary or mandatory transfer from Juvenile Court to Criminal District Court. There is continuous representation of juvenile transfer clients -- starting from the clients initial continued custody through disposition of the case in either Juvenile or Criminal District Court.
Name of Adult Detention Facilities in This District	Until September 2015, the facilities included: Orleans Parish Prison, Templeman Phase V, Conchetta, Tents, Temporary Detention Center, and Central Lockup. In September, 2015, the Orleans Sheriff opened up the "Orleans Justice Complex" to replace and closed all remaining facilities for males. Females continue to be housed at the Temporary Detention Center.
Name of Adult Detention Facilities Outside the District Which Hold Clients	Orleans Parish may house many pre-trial clients outside the parish -- for what is claimed to be lack of capacity at the new "Orleans Justice Complex" (despite housing non pre-trial inmates at the center). Pre-trial clients are housed throughout the state at various facilities - and create great difficulties for attorney client consultation and time needed to travel and visit clients. In addition, OPD clients with acute mental illness are housed at the Hunt Correctional Facility. Other OPD clients are housed in St. Charles Parish.
Name of Juvenile Detention Facilities In This District	Youth Study Center and the Orleans Parish Prison.
Name of Juvenile Detention Facilities Outside the District Which Hold Clients	N/A
Does the Location of Detention Facilities Affect Quality of Representation or Budget? If So, How?	OPD is not able to adequately represent clients held at facilities outside Orleans Parish. The quality of representation is significantly impaired. In addition, the time necessary to travel out of parish to visit clients taxes already thin staff resources and adds budget costs for travel costs.

Do your courts routinely bring juveniles before the judge in shackles if they are being held in detention or secure custody at the time of the hearing? If not, please describe your courts' shackling policy and procedure.	Yes
Has Your District Experienced Any Difficulty Accessing Detained Clients at Any Detention Facility? If So, Please Describe	Due to difficulties seeing our detained clients in Orleans Parish Prison - long wait-times, lack of confidential and private meeting areas, irregular visitation hours - OPD sued Sheriff Marlin Gusman in Orleans Parish Civil District Court in 2010. OPD entered into a stipulated judgment -- which improved visitation conditions. However with the new jail, there are less visitation rooms and longer wait times. For instance, there are only 2 contact visitation rooms in the entire male facility. Also, a significant number of clients have been housed out of parish in 2015 -- making access more difficult.
District Attorney	Hon. Leon Cannizzaro
Chief Judge of Criminal District Court	Hon. Laurie A. White

Other Specialty Court	Re-entry Court, Judge Laurie White "A"; Veteran's Court, Judge Authur Hunter "K"; and Homeless Court, Judge Paul Sens "A" Municipal Court.
Name of Specialty and Brief Description:	The Re-entry Court is designed to assist clients returning to the community after longer term incarceration in State correctional facilities. Veterans Court is designed to assist military veterans gain access to programming and support designed to assist them and prevent criminal involvement. Domestic Violence Court is an intensive probation. Homeless Court is designed to assist the homeless receive much needed treatment and services.
Indigency Determined by Whom and How?	In Criminal District Court, the judicial officer at first appearance determines indigency for arrestees - often with the assistance of information gathered by interviews of the arrestee by New Orleans Pretrial Services. Often, there is also a colloquy between the arrestee and the judicial officer before the determination is made. If an arrestee has not been deemed indigent at first appearances, the arrestee is then set for a hearing to determine counsel (HTDC) within a week. If the arrestee is still incarcerated at the HTDC, and has not secured private counsel, the arrestee is deemed indigent and appointed to OPD. In Criminal District Court, judges routinely revisit indigency determinations at arraignment. In Municipal Court, first appearance and arraignment occur simultaneously. Incarcerated arrestees are presumed indigent by the court. After consultation with OPD in 2015 regarding indigency determination process, most Municipal Courts changed their process. Those not in custody who cannot afford to hire attorneys are preliminary assessed by the Court and if deemed indigent, are referred to OPD staff, who conduct an application for OPD services.

When is Assignment/Appointment of Counsel Made?	OPD assigns counsel after an indigency and appointment determination is made by the Court. For the majority of assignments, OPD assigns an attorney to the case on the same day OPD is assigned to the case. When appointment is made at night or weekends, OPD assigns the case to an attorney within 24 hours.
What steps does your office take to ensure conflict – free representation	OPD has developed both a conflict division and a conflict panel. Before an attorney is assigned a case, a conflict review is done by administrative staff. If a case is deemed a conflict for the trial division, the case is either assigned to the conflict division or the conflict panel. If a potential conflict appears or is discovered after initial assignment a query is sent to either the Deputy Chief Defender or Chief Defender who then determines whether the conflict exists.
Initial Client Intake Conducted By Whom? (Name and Title)	At First Appearances, initial client intake is conducted either by the magistrate attorney or by a client advocate from OPD's Client Services Division. After appointment, the attorney assigned does the initial interview. If the OPD client is incarcerated, the initial interview is conducted by the assigned attorney within 72 hours of appointment.
Does this District Use an Intake Form? (If So, Please Attach to Hard Copy)	Yes
Brief Explanation of Intake Process	OPD and the judges of the Orleans Parish Criminal District Court entered into an agreement to work cooperatively to carry out the mandates of La. R.S. 15:1758. On June 3, 2011, the judges met en banc and approved a plan to assist OPD in the collection of the $40.00 application fee. If a defendant is deemed to be indigent at arraignment, the judge will order the defendant to pay the application fee of $40 to the cashier on the first floor of Criminal District Court. In Municipal Court, any application fee is paid to OPD staff.
$40 Application Fees (per R.S. 14:175)
Does the Office Collect the $40 Application Fee?	Yes, the OPD collects the application fee in Municipal Court. No, the OPD does not collect the application fee in Criminal District Court. The fee is paid to the CDC's cashier.
How Many Applications for Services Were Received?	Once the court determines a defendant to be indigent and appoints OPD to represent the defendant, there is no additional application that the defendant must complete in order to receive representation. The defendant may complete a brief client questionnaire with contact information, medical issues, and other issues the defendant may want to bring to the attention of the assigned attorney.
How Many Application Fees Were Waived?	Pursuant to an agreement entered into with the Criminal District Court, the court will not order pretrial detained, indigent defendants to pay the $40 application fee. In other words, the fee is practically waived for incarcerated, indigent defendants.
How Many Application Fees Were Reduced?	Pursuant to an agreement entered into with the Criminal District Court, the application fee is not reduced. The defendant must pay the full $40.
Total Application Fee Dollars Collected in 2015	$24,224

Does Another Agency Collect This Fee On Your Office's Behalf? If So, Which Agency Collects These Fees?	OPD does not physically collect the $40 fee from the indigent defendant in Criminal District Court. The defendants are ordered by the court to pay the fee to the Cashier's Office in the Criminal District Court. The defendants are provided with a payment slip which they are to bring to the Cashier's Office. The Criminal District Court charges a 25% collection fee.
$45/$35 Special Cost (Court Fees, per R.S.15:168 )
Total Revenue from $45/$35 Special Costs Received in 2015	$2,318,851
Does the Court Assess the Mandatory Special Cost (Court Fee) in Every Case Resulting in Conviction? If Not, Explain.	Every time there is a conviction, judges assess court costs. Included in the court costs is the mandatory special cost. Many judges do not specify on the record that they are assessing the mandatory special cost. Thus, the understanding is the special cost is included in the total court costs that is assessed to each convicted defendant.
What, If Any, Accounting Documentation is Provided to You Regarding Fees Assessed and by Whom is it provided?	In a monthly remittance from Traffic, Municipal and Criminal District Court, a payment summary is included with the payment. The payment summary includes: the defendants name, section and case number, date the costs are assessed and collected, amount of assessment and actual collection.
Who Collects the Assessed Court Fees?	The Cashier's Offices in the courts collect all court fines, fees and costs.
What, If Any, Accounting Documentation is Provided to You Regarding Fees Collected and by Whom is it Provided?	The Judicial Administrators are responsible for providing documentation to OPD on a monthly basis.
Who Remits the Court Fees Collected?	The Judicial Administrator's Office under the direction of the judges en banc.
What, If Any, Accounting Documentation is Provided to You Regarding Fees Remitted to You and by Whom is it Provided?	In a monthly remittance from Traffic Court, Municipal Court, the Sheriff's office (quarterly) and Criminal District Court, a payment summary is included with the payment. The payment summary includes: the defendants name, section and case number, date the costs are assessed and collected, amount of assessment and actual collection.
Partial Indigence Payments (per R.S.15:175/Ch.C.Art. 321)
Method for Determining Reduced Rate Charged For Legal Services if Client is Deemed Capable of Partial Payment	The judges will determine whether a defendant is indigent or partially indigent. If the defendant is partially indigent, the judges will assess a representation fee to the defendant. The judges do not provide any documentation to the defendant but orders the defendant to pay the Indigent Defender Fund either by the next court date or by the end of the case.
What, If Any, Accounting Documentation is Provided to You Regarding Fees Assessed and by Whom is it Provided?	N/A
Who Collects the Assessed Partial Payments?	The defendant is ordered to pay the Indigent Defender Fund directly. The defendant then comes to OPD and makes a payment or a payment arrangement with the administrative staff.
What, If Any, Accounting Documentation is Provided to You Regarding Fees Collected and by Whom is it Provided?	Since this fee is collected by OPD directly, OPD is responsible for accounting this money.
Who Remits the Partial Payments Collected?	Again, since this fee is collected by OPD directly, OPD is responsible for accounting this money from collection to remittance.

What, If Any, Accounting Documentation is Provided to You Regarding Fees Remitted to You and by Whom is it Provided?	Again, since this fee is collected by OPD directly, OPD is responsible for accounting this money from collection to remittance.
Amount, If Any, of Partial Indigence Payments Received by the Office in CY15	150

When a transferable charge enters juvenile court, our office is notified and we send one of these attorneys to juvenile court to do the continued custody/transfer hearing. The assigned OPD attorney then stays on the case through disposition.
Please Provide the Names of All State Representatives and Senators from Your District	See: http://house.louisiana.gov/H_Reps/By_Deleg/H_Reps_Deleg_Orleans.asp
Other than funding issues, what External Factors (outside of your control) Negatively Affect the Delivery of Services in Your District?	Excessive caseloads and depleted staff are the biggest issues regarding our representation. The District Attorney accepts a significantly increased number of cases and pursues harsh, multiple bill sentences even for non-violent offenders. There is still an ongoing issue regarding jail visitation and contact/confidential visits affects delivery of services. There is also hostile and unprofessional reaction to zealous advocacy for our clients, especially in the presence of our clients, affects our delivery of services. The inability to meaningfully consult with and interview clients after appointment and before first appearances continues to affect our advocacy for our clients at First Appearances.
What Changes Have You Implemented in Your District Office in 2015 That Have Improved the Delivery of Public Defender Services?	2015 has been a difficult year at OPD due to funding cuts. Staffing has had to be reduced through attrition and a hiring freeze. Many of the previous changes and reforms have had to be scaled back and/or restricted due to reduced funding. At the same time, OPD has (without development staff) has worked hard to fill gaps with outside grants and other sources of funding. OPD did its second year of a privately funded investigator fellowship. OPD sought and received grant funding for two social workers and a client advocate. In addition, OPD conducted a nation-wide fundraising effort to reduce pending furloughs for staff. Despite reductions, OPD has instituted a bond review project to identify low risk clients who are unable to make a bond and to increase bond advocacy. In addition OPD has been able to increase social service and social work services for its Municipal Court Client. One highlight of these efforts in 2015 has been coordinating Municipal Court sessions at The Mission -- a local homeless shelter. There, OPD did massive coordination and assisted hundreds of homeless clients with their attachments, pending cases, and referrals for social services.

THE 42ND JUDICIAL DISTRICT
PUBLIC DEFENDERS' OFFICE
DE SOTO (MANSFIELD)

DISTRICT DEFENDER: STEVEN R. THOMAS
111 NORTH WASHINGTON AVENUE
MANSFIELD, LA 71052
(318) 872-6250

42nd JUDICIAL DISTRICT : DESOTO PARISH

Steven R. Thomas
District Defender
111 North Washington
318-872-6250

During Calendar Year 2015, the 42nd Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 1,452 cases. Traditionally self-reliant, the 42nd PDO's local revenues have slowly increased since FY11, primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

From FY11 to FY15 expenditures have remained fairly constant and revenues have consistently exceeded expenditures, resulting in fund balance accruals. By virtue of a Cooperative Endeavor Agreement with the 11th PDO following the creation of the 42nd, the fund balance of both districts are shared. The shortfalls in the 11th are depleting gains in the 42nd.

Since the passage of Act 578 (2012) in the 42nd PDO, aside from a few anomalies the district has generally failed to realize the 25% increase in local revenues that was expected to materialize as a result of Act 578.

42nd JUDICIAL DISTRICT : DESOTO PARISH

Steven R. Thomas
District Defender
111 North Washington
318-872-6250

In the 42nd Judicial District, public defense attorneys maintain caseloads two and a half times the recommended caseload limits for each attorney.

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, but the district has adequate funds to contract with certified counsel outside the district.

In CY15, have you instituted any downsizing of staff in response to a revenue-expenditure gap your district may have anticipated? If so, please list staff terminated.	I did terminate Shante' Wells who was only handling misdemeanors and that did not fit the model that is most economical for us. Additionally, I had many complaints about his job performance so I trimmed the dead wood.
Immediate Critical Issue Areas	Uncertainty in revenue source makes it difficult to plan and impossible to grow/improve my program. Poor revenue from Sabine is getting progressively worse and any reduction in DAF would force us to reconsider the fairness of the agreement and the practical/moral basis for continuing it.

Other than funding issues, what External Factors (outside of your control) Negatively Affect the Delivery of Services in Your District?	There seems to be little or no balance between the 307 board and staff's ever increasing demand for reports and data, micro management and recognition that these increase time and demands that should be devoted to representing indigent accused people. # LOUISIANA PUBLIC DEFENDER BOARD

John Bel Edwards
Governor

C. Frank Holthaus
Chairman

James T. Dixon, Jr.
State Public Defender

EQUAL JUSTICE FOR ALL

January 20, 2017

During the 2016 calendar year, the Louisiana Public Defender Board has experienced major changes. Entering this year, an increasing number of districts were either in or facing fiscal crisis. This was due to the fact that public defense in Louisiana has been persistently underfunded since its inception. Despite efforts by the legislature to increase funds due to the local districts from $35 to $45 pursuant to R.S. 15:16 in 2012, the shortfall in public defense funding remained. With 14 districts in restriction of services, the Board acted and increased the LPDB budget share to the districts from around 49% to 65% of the Louisiana Public Defender Fund. This was later formalized and converted into a statutory mandate in Act 571 of the 2016 Regular Session. It was hoped that by increasing the District Assistance Fund (DAF) to 65%, the Board could address the financial stress experienced by the districts and assist them to withdraw from ROS.

While there have been some improvements in the financial status of many districts, problems remain. Districts still rely on funds raised locally to provide for a majority of their budget. This local funding source, primarily through traffic tickets, remains unreliable, unstable and insufficient. The instability, unreliability, and insufficiency of these funds have manifested themselves in various manners throughout the state. In the 40th Judicial District, we have seen local funds plummet during this fiscal year because the Sheriff discontinued a traffic ticket-writing program. This is not brought up to criticize the Sheriff, rather to illustrate the fact that the public defender office has no control over its funding sources. The historic flood from this past August has adversely affected many districts in south Louisiana. When natural disasters occur, traffic tickets are a very low priority and rightly so. The fact remains, however, that we expect local funds from traffic tickets, the primary source of local funds for public defenders, to drop in districts hit by the floods. We are particularly concerned for 19th (East Baton Rouge), 13th (Evangeline), 21st (Livingston/Tangipahoa/St. Helena), 15th (Lafayette/Acadia/Vermillion), and the 23rd (St. James/Ascension/Assumption) Judicial District Public Defender Offices. Finally, the public defender office for the 25th Judicial district experienced such a drastic decrease in funding, it had to briefly shutdown and close its doors last Spring until the LPDB was able to provide emergency funds allowing the office to remain open for the balance of the fiscal year. Even the increased funding to the districts cannot eliminate the financial pitfalls created by an unstable, unreliable, and insufficient local funding source, especially when that funding is the source of a majority of the district's funding.

Unfortunately, the additional funding to the districts comes at a cost. The increased funding to the districts has come from other areas of the LPDB budget. In particular, there has been a corresponding decrease in the administrative budget and in services provided by non-profit organizations that contract with the LPDB to provide particularized representation for the poor of this state.

The reduction in the LPDB administrative budget has resulted in a curtailing of training for public defenders throughout the state. This directly and adversely impacts a line defender's ability to adequately represent the poor. We have had to discontinue our contracts with attorneys to provide representation in Sex Offender Assessment Panels throughout the state. This allowed for specialized representation in these matters, at no cost to the districts, and provided a service that ensured these cases would move efficiently through the criminal justice system. These cases must now be handled by the individual district offices, adding a new burden upon them and requiring them to handle cases for which they have no particular expertise.

We have had to reduce the contracts for all of our non-profit programs. Non-capital appeals have been reduced and non-profit programs have had to dismiss appellate attorneys. This program has historically taken the burden of criminal appeals from the districts. We do not want this duty to fall to the districts, again. We are now experiencing wait lists in death penalty trials. We are effectively institutionalizing an ineffective assistance of counsel claim in all of these cases, as there is no representation on the merits of these cases while on a wait list and there is risk of key evidence being lost waiting for a defendant to be represented. Also jeopardized is representation in death penalty appeals and post-conviction, juvenile representation, and non-capital post-conviction cases.

Public defense in Louisiana remains under-funded. While budgeting additional funds to the districts was necessary, it has not solved the funding issues in public defense, rather it has simply shifted the problem to other areas of representation. We can expect litigation, alleging a lack of adequate funding for representation of the poor in Louisiana's criminal justice system. In fact, it has already begun and we can expect new cases in the coming year. Rather than spending funds on the representation of the poor, we can expect to pay for attorneys to defend the state due to its lack of funding for representation of the poor.

It is also important to note that the increased funding to the districts is only a temporary fix. As stated above, the primary funding problem facing the districts is a local one. The majority of local funds are derived from traffic tickets. LPDB has no control over traffic enforcement, prosecution, or collection. Law enforcement can unilaterally reduce traffic enforcement, for good or bad reasons, or no reason whatsoever. Traffic cases can be diverted so that no proceeds reach the public defender in the district. These funds can be reduced by severe weather, elections and other political vagaries, judicial action, reductions in road traffic, and the lack of interstate or major highways in a particular jurisdiction. Further, district offices are entirely reliant upon their counterparts in the criminal justice system to collect and remit the fines and fees needed to operate their respective offices.

For the district defender offices to receive any funds from traffic tickets, there must be a filing of the case in court. We now have data from the Louisiana Supreme Court that establishes a marked decrease in the filing of ticket cases in both city and district courts. This has been a steady decrease from 2009 to 2014. During that period, there was a 24% decrease in ticket filings in district courts throughout the state, for an aggregate total of 117,691 fewer filings. There has been a 31% decrease in ticket filings in city courts, statewide, for a decrease of 237,808 filings. In total, there has been a decrease of 29% in ticket filings with an aggregate decrease in filings of 355,499. Pursuant to R.S. 15:176, the districts are to receive $45 per conviction in traffic cases. If tickets are not filed, revenue cannot be generated. In 2014, we know that the local districts collected on about 47% of the tickets filed. When we compare the ticket filings in 2009 to those in 2014, we are able to determine that the districts lost approximately $7,518,803 in revenues due to the decrease in ticket filings, in 2014 alone. In 2015, there was an additional decrease of 396,921 tickets filed. That year, the local districts collected on about 47.5% of the tickets filed. When we compare the ticket filings in 2009 to those in 2015, we are able to determine that the districts lost approximately $8,484,186 in revenues due to the decrease in ticket filings, in 2015. Over a two- year period, that is a loss of $16,002,989. These losses in revenues would be sufficient to avoid restrict of services in the districts. We expect that decline in court filings continued through 2016 with an even greater loss in revenue. Eventually, this trend will erase the shift in funding from programs and administration to the districts and we will again find ourselves with failing districts and an increased number entering restriction of services. These districts, once again, will not have sufficient funding to provide all of the services they have provided in the past and will, therefore, limit or eliminate some of those services. Unless we are able to find a stable, reliable, and sufficient funding source for the district defender offices, the decrease in ticket filings will result in another financial crisis in the districts.

With respect to the decrease in the funding for the non-profit, we can expect to see an impact this year. The State is now exposed to legal attack and litigation regarding the right to counsel. We will see funding litigation under State v. Citizen, 2004-1841, (La.4/1/05), 898 So.2d 325. Citizen allows the court to stop prosecutions in the event of inadequate funding to provide a defense. In extreme cases, it could result in the release of those charged with crimes, due to a lack of funding. This could become a public safety issue. We are also concerned that the lack of funding for public defense could result in federal litigation, resulting in the creation of a federal remedy imposed and overseen by the federal courts.

We actively seek out our partners in the criminal justice system and in state government to inform them of the upcoming crisis and to discuss possible solutions to the situation. We have contacted the Governor's Office, the Louisiana Supreme Court, State Senators and Representatives, District Attorneys, Judges, local government officials, and civic groups in an attempt to avoid this calamity. We will continue to work with all interested parties in finding a solution to protect our clients and our community.

Thank you,

James T. Dixon, Jr.
State Public Defender
Louisiana Public Defender Board

LPDB CY 2016 RECOMMENDATIONS FOR NEEDED CHANGES IN THE LAW

- 1) Creation of a stable, reliable, sufficient funding source for public defense
  - a. Stable, reliable, sufficient funding for public defense, including access to investigative resources, expert witnesses, and the appeals process helps ensure that the innocent are not convicted of crimes or delinquent offenses;
  - b. Access to social workers and other multidisciplinary professionals allow public defenders to connect clients to needed and appropriate services, including mental health care, job training and education, employment, transportation assistance, housing, and other protective factors that decrease recidivism, violations of probation, parole, conditions of bond, and expeditious, successful, and permanent reunification of families in the child welfare system.

- 2) Explicitly provide that case-specific information and case-specific records obtained by executive staff are privileged, confidential, and protected from disclosure or discovery.

- 3) Reclassification of misdemeanors

In conjunction with the Louisiana State Bar Association's 2015 Mid-Year Meeting of the House of Delegates and the passage of Resolution 8 and the 2010 LSBA resolution, the Louisiana Public Defender Board urges the legislature to refer the study of reclassification of certain misdemeanors to the Louisiana Law Institute. In light of the cost of representation, the extensive collateral consequences of misdemeanor convictions and their impact on citizens' ability to join or remain in the workforce, reclassification of selected misdemeanors potentially could save the state millions of dollars.

- 4) Eliminate indiscriminate shackling of children in delinquency cases

In keeping with modern neuroscience and adolescent development theory, and with applicable principles of Due Process, the LPDB staff recommends the legislature add the following language to an appropriate article in the Children's Code:

1. Instruments of restraint, such as handcuffs, chains, irons, or straitjackets, cloth and leather restraints, and other similar items, may not be used on a child during a court proceeding and must be removed prior to the child being brought into the courtroom and appearing before the court unless the court finds that:

(A) The use of restraints is necessary due to one of the following factors:

- (i) Instruments of restraint are necessary to prevent physical harm to the child or another person;
- (ii) The child has a history of disruptive courtroom behavior that has placed others in potentially harmful situations or presents a substantial risk of inflicting physical harm on himself or herself or others as evidenced by recent behavior; or

LPDB CY 2016 RECOMMENDATIONS FOR NEEDED CHANGES IN THE LAW

- (iii) There is a founded belief that the child presents a substantial risk of flight from the courtroom; and
  - (B) There are no less restrictive alternatives to restraints that will prevent flight or physical harm to the child or another person, including, but not limited to, the presence of court personnel, law enforcement officers, or bailiffs.
- 2. The above findings may be made in a summary or contradictory proceeding, but must be made based on facts and circumstances particular to the child. The court shall provide the juvenile's attorney an opportunity to be heard before the court orders the use of restraints. If restraints are ordered, the court shall make written findings of fact in support of the order.
- 3. Any restraints shall allow the child limited movement of the hands to read and handle documents and writings necessary to the hearing. Under no circumstances shall a child be restrained using fixed restraints to a wall, floor or furniture.
- 5) Amend La. R.S. 15:151 to provide that a majority of board members shall constitute a quorum for transacting business.
- 6) Reform of expungement procedures in Title VIII of the Children's Code to provide for streamlined or automatic expungement of juvenile adjudications such that youth are not inhibited from pursuing post-secondary education, employment, or other benefits or services.
- 7) Amend 15:529.1(c) to provide for a shortened cleansing time for prior convictions to be used to enhance sentences.

After earning a doctorate, he taught Mass Communication Technology and Journalism at Nicholls State and served as the first Director of the Office of Distance Education, implementing compressed video and web-based technologies and applications for adult learners. From 2000-2005, Dr. Stilling worked in California at Holy Names University and as Dean at Expressions College for the Digital Arts, both in the Silicon Valley.

Dr. Stilling returned to Louisiana in December 2005 after Hurricane Katrina to help with reconstruction efforts and helped develop a data collection and analysis system as part of the MacArthur Models for Change program in the Jefferson Parish Department of Juvenile Services. This system was used to determine evidence-based alternatives to formal processing of juveniles facing detention and adjudication. He earned his Bachelor's Degree in Communications from Loyola University in New Orleans in 1987 and was awarded his Doctorate in Mass Communication from the University of Tennessee-Knoxville in 1992.

Aliseia Williams, Administrative Coordinator/Payroll

Aliseia Williams joined LPDB in June of 2014. Prior to joining LPDB, Ms. Williams worked as an Administrative Coordinator and a Contracts/Grants Reviewer for the state of Louisiana. She has over ten years of administrative experience. Ms. Williams serves as the agency's payroll purchasing, procurement, travel, and fleet administrator.

LOUISIANA PUBLIC DEFENDER BOARD CONTRACT PROGRAMS (CY16)

Although the Louisiana Public Defender Board has a legislative mandate to provide representation in a number of areas, it does not have authority to provide direct client representation or to hire public defender staff. In order to meet the state's constitutional duty to provide legal representation to indigent clients, the Board has contracted with a number of non-profit 501(c)(3) organizations, as permitted by La. R.S. 15:147 (C)(1), to represent indigent defendants in delinquency, capital, and appellate cases where conflicts or caseload limits prevent the local district defender office from handling the case. In addition, the Board is required by La. R.S. 15:169 and 15:178 to appoint counsel for appellate and post-conviction cases in which a death sentence has been imposed at the trial level. It should be noted that each of the directors of these programs handles a caseload as well as the administrative responsibilities.

The LPDB's contracts with each program office contain provisions for monthly reporting to the LPDB and for audits by the Legislative Auditor. They also provide for compliance with performance standards enforceable by the Board, and for termination of the contracts for failure to meet Board requirements. These requirements include adhering to the ethical rules of the Louisiana Supreme Court, violations of which may result in termination of the contracts.

The programs are as follows:

Louisiana Center for Children's Rights

Formerly known as Juvenile Regional Services (JRS), the Louisiana Center for Children's Rights (LCCR) is a nonprofit law office whose mission is to "defend the right of every Louisiana child to fairness, dignity, and opportunity." LCCR is the juvenile public defender in New Orleans, providing holistic, client-driven advocacy for more than 1,000 indigent young people in the city's juvenile justice system every year. LCCR also provides post-disposition representation to detained juveniles from the parishes around Orleans.

Statewide, LCCR works to protect and expand the right of every Louisiana child to high-quality legal representation and advocates for a fairer, more compassionate, and genuinely rehabilitative, juvenile justice system. LCCR's strategies include legislative advocacy, litigation, training and technical assistance for Louisiana's juvenile defender community. LCCR'S Executive Director is Aaron Clark-Rizzio.

Louisiana Appellate Project (LAP)

The Louisiana Appellate Project provides appellate representation for indigents in all non-capital felony appeals arising in all of the districts. This includes felony-grade adjudications for juveniles. All district public defender offices have contracted with LAP to provide these appellate services. There is no cost to the district public defender for these services as it is a form of supplemental assistance provided by the Board. Jim Looney is the director who supervises and contracts with appellate attorneys around the state to handle the appeals.

LOUISIANA PUBLIC DEFENDER BOARD CONTRACT PROGRAMS (CY16)

Handling the appeals in non-capital cases includes work in the appellate courts and, when appropriate, filing for writs to the Louisiana Supreme Court. It also includes specifically those cases appealed by the state, such as when a statute is declared unconstitutional.

Baton Rouge Capital Conflict Office (BRCCO)

Under the leadership of David Price, BRCCO employs the team approach to capital defense as required by the Capital Guidelines. The office brings a team of lawyers and investigators to each client's case. Specialized training in the field of capital defense allows the team members to work intensively with the client. The team does an exhaustive mitigation and fact investigation with the goal of reaching a fair resolution of the case. With full time salaried employees, the office is able to work multiple cases in judicial districts around the state in a cost efficient manner.

BRCCO represents capital defendants in all parts of the state in order to ensure that all defendants facing the death penalty are represented by capital certified counsel. The office represents capital defendants in districts without capital certified counsel and in multiple defendant cases. In addition, BRCCO serves as counsel for the limited purpose of protecting the rights of persons facing the death penalty, and who are not otherwise represented by counsel.

Louisiana Capital Assistance Center (LCAC)

Richard Bourke serves as director of LCAC and employs a staff of lawyers, mitigation specialists and investigators. Founded 22 years ago in its current form, this program provides leadership, mentoring, and guidance to the capital defense community. With its adherence to high quality representation, LCAC has influenced capital representation after the restoration of the death penalty in the South. Based on its reputation, LCAC attracts interns, law students, and lawyers from around the world to volunteer their services to LCAC and its clients.

LCAC provides direct services in representation in capital cases at the trial level statewide and also provides representation in motion for new trial proceedings and, in some cases, direct appeal proceedings in capital cases. Pursuant to its contract, LCAC serves as resource counsel to provisionally certified defense lawyers pursuant to Capital Defense Guideline 915(G)(2). This service is essential to educating, mentoring and overseeing the work of provisionally certified counsel to ensure the delivery of quality legal representation. Following the termination of the LPDB contract with CAPOLA, at the state office's request, LCAC opened an office in Shreveport with two locally based staff members.

LCAC has also been active in serving as counsel for the limited purpose of protecting the rights of persons facing the death penalty who are not otherwise represented by counsel. In addition to direct services, LCAC provides general support services to other organizations and often is able to ameliorate crises faced by counsel.

Capital Defense Project of Southeast Louisiana (CDPSELA)

The Capital Defense Project of Southeast Louisiana was formed in 2002 to provide trial level representation in capital cases throughout Louisiana, with its primary focus being on the judicial districts in the southeastern portion of the State. Kerry P. Cuccia serves as its executive director. Originally created as a conflict/overflow office, CDPSELA became the first-call provider for Orleans Parish in 2006 and, in recent years, the first-call provider for the 22nd Judicial District. Currently, CDPSELA represents defendants in the parishes of Caddo, East Baton Rouge, Jefferson, Orleans, St. John the Baptist, St. Martin, St. Tammany, Lafayette, and West Feliciana. And, when called upon by the Office of the State Public Defender, CDPSELA serves as counsel for the limited purpose of protecting a capital defendant's rights until trial counsel can be provided.

CDPSELA and its staff are recognized as providing representation at the highest levels of competence. Its ability to aggressively investigate cases at an early stage and concentration on preliminary examination practice appears to be a factor in many first degree arrests being formally charged as lesser offenses such as second degree murder. When that occurs, the case is usually transferred to the local public defender office.

Capital Post Conviction Project of Louisiana (CPCPL)

This organization handles capital post-conviction representation of indigent defendants whose cases have progressed through the trial and appellate levels. The staff lawyers who handle cases as they become eligible have successfully represented a number of defendants whose cases were overturned for such reasons as ineffective assistance of counsel at the trial or appellate level, failure by prosecutors to disclose important evidence, newly discovered evidence of innocence, and evidence adduced as a result of junk science.

CPCPL also handles direct capital appeals when the Capital Appeals Project has a conflict of interest or there are co-defendants both on death row in a single case.

Gary Clements is the director of CPCPL and has his staff working on as many cases as they can ethically handle at any particular time. The program also monitors cases in the pipeline in order to keep track of future needs and caseloads.

Capital Appeals Project (CAP)

Christopher Murell is the director of the Capital Appeals Project which handles all capital appeals for indigents who have been sentenced to death. The staff includes additional attorneys who work out of their New Orleans office, as their cases automatically go to the Louisiana Supreme Court as a matter of law. This non-profit organization has had several cases with national impact because of favorable decisions by the U. S. Supreme Court.

LOUISIANA PUBLIC DEFENDER BOARD CONTRACT PROGRAMS (CY16)

Some of the cases which have been overturned were handled or are being handled in the trial court by the CAP lawyers. CAP has also agreed to handle post-conviction cases wherein CPCPL is ineligible due to conflicts. CAP acts as resource counsel to public defenders across the state.

Innocence Project New Orleans (IPNO)

The Louisiana Public Defender Board has a contract for partial funding of the Innocence Project New Orleans, to handle that portion of each non-capital post-conviction case in which the right to counsel attaches. Since its inception, IPNO has won the freedom or exoneration of 43 wrongfully convicted Louisiana prisoners who have served a total of nearly 709 years in prison. All except two of IPNO's freed clients were sentenced to life without parole and eight were teenagers when they were wrongly arrested. IPNO has also investigated and reported on systemic problems in Orleans Parish involving the suppression of crucial evidence by prosecutors and police. Emily Maw is the director of IPNO. The office attracts student interns from around the world and is in the forefront of Louisiana in the use of DNA evidence.

Budget Division

January 2016

The Louisiana Public Defender Board was awarded a grant from The Laura and John Arnold Foundation in the amount of $119,551. The grant is to aid in conducting a workload study. The study will focus on the number of different types of cases that a Louisiana public defender can represent consistent with Louisiana Rules of Professional Conduct and a lawyer's duty to provide reasonably effective assistance of counsel in accordance with prevailing professional standards. A BA-7 was presented at the Joint Legislative Committee on the Budget and approved without question.

February 2016

The Division of Administration's Office of Planning and Budget presented staff with the recommended budget for FY17 on February 4, 2016. The recommendation for FY17 was $12,838,824; this was a decrease of $20,837,858 from the FY 16 budget. The breakdown is as follows:

May 2016

The initial LPDB budget of approximately $13 million in the original House Bill 1 was amended by the Governor. At this point, the Governor has recommended our budget be maintained at a rate comparable to previous LPDB budgets or $33,781,707. This is tremendous news and allows us to better address many of the fiscal issues facing our district defenders.

The Budget Committee met for six-hours on April 28th. The Committee was presented with three appropriation scenarios to the districts: 60%, 62.5% and 65% of our budget. After lengthy discussion and input from the districts and programs, the Committee recommended 62.5% of the budget be disbursed to the districts to assist them in alleviating the ROS crisis.

June 2016

LPDB staff was able to make a scrub of its FY16 budget. In accordance with the Board's recommendation, disbursements totaling $223,710 in DAF funds were provided to the districts.

July 2016

The staff was notified in early July that the General Appropriation Bills, HB 1 of the 2016 Regular and HB Session, had become Act 17 and HB 69 of the 2016 Second Extraordinary Session, has become ACT 14. ### Compliance Division – Trial Level

Pursuant to La.R.S. 15:157, the Trial Level Compliance Officer coordinated LPDB's oversight efforts using the agency's comprehensive site visit protocol, formally adopted by the Board in 2014, and the agency's Restriction of Services protocol, promulgated by the Office of the Governor, Public Defender Board in 2012. These protocols include a combination of database and reporting review, court observation, file review, employee and stakeholder surveys and input, and interviews with the District Defender and district office staff. In 2016, staff conducted site visits in the 1st, 5th, 16th, 22nd, 27th, 32nd, and 33rd districts. Many of these site visits came as a direct result of anticipated Restriction of Services (ROS). Compliance assisted districts with developing and modifying ROS plans and drafted guidelines for districts exiting ROS.

The Trial Level Compliance Officer also coordinated implementation of and compliance with the United States Supreme Court's decisions in Miller v. Alabama (prohibiting mandatory life sentences for juveniles under the age of 18 convicted of homicide offenses and requiring individualized sentencing hearings) and Montgomery v. Louisiana (holding that Miller was fully retroactive and limiting the class of juvenile offenders eligible for a life without parole sentence). Compliance prepared and distributed summary materials providing guidance on the requirements of Miller and Montgomery to district offices, met with District Defenders in the 1st, 5th, 9th, 14th, 19th, 22nd, and 24th judicial districts, conducted trainings for staff in the 9th and 14th judicial districts and conducted two regional trainings (one in Monroe and one in Baton Rouge) in partnership with the Louisiana Center for Children's Rights on Sentencing and Resentencing pursuant to Miller and Montgomery. In addition, pursuant to La.R.S. 15:148(B)(10), Compliance coordinated efforts to draft standards and guidelines for defenders representing children facing life without parole sentences.

Pursuant to La.R.S. 148(B)(1), Compliance participated in coordination of the Weighted Workload Study commissioned by LPDB and being conducted by the American Bar Association and Postlethwaite and Netterville. It is anticipated that the final report on this study will be released early next year.

DIVISIONAL OFFICER ANNUAL SUMMARY REPORTS (CY16)

Compliance participated in the interview process for selection of District Defenders in the 26th (Bossier and Webster Parishes), 9th (Rapides Parish) and 25th (Plaquemines Parish) Judicial Districts.

Pursuant to La.R.S. 15:148(4) and Board policy, the Trial Level Compliance Officer reviewed, investigated and responded to client complaints that the Board received from around the state.

Compliance participated in the Children's Code Committee of the Louisiana Law Institute and the Raise the Age Commission convened by the Louisiana Legislature. In addition, Compliance also participated in Board, Budget Committee, Policy Committee, and District Defender Advisory Council meetings.

Along with Capital Case Coordinator Jean Faria, Compliance coordinated the Capital Defender Training and the NACDL Trial Skills Reboot Training. Both were multi-day trainings that were attended by defenders from around the state.

Information and Technology Management (ITM) Program Development and Resource Management Division (PDRM)

The ITM division has a broad array of responsibilities falling under the headings of Information Management, Technology Development, Deployment and Management, and Program Development and Resource Management. Per the requirements of the Public Defender Act, the Division implemented online or otherwise automated technologies to assist district-level management with mandatory uniform reporting on financial, personnel compensation and budget requests, as well as programs and technologies to promote state- and local-level data-driven decision-making.

The division's director, Dr. Erik Stilling, also serves at the national level as Technology and Data Analytics advisor to the NLADA-American Council of Chief Defenders, and to the National Association of Public Defenders, and in 2016, made his second national presentation (including organizing an entire panel session) to the 2016 American Society of Criminologists' national conference. Most recently, Dr. Stilling had a paper on Technology Development and Deployment Techniques accepted by the 8th Annual International Multiconference on Informatics and Cybernetics.

A highly research-intensive division, ITM produced scores of quantitative analyses, many of which focused on individual attorney caseloads and district caseloads, salary ranges, capital-case capacity and capital-case historical trends by district, and dozens of fiscal solvency analyses -- most of which provided the Board with insight into financial insolvency and most vitally, into changes in local revenues. Many of these studies also contributed to a deeper and broader understanding of district office capacity for representation in the face of fiscal crisis and the resulting Restriction of Services (ROS).

DIVISIONAL OFFICER ANNUAL SUMMARY REPORTS (CY16)

These fiscal analyses included an on-going series of solvency projections by district on a monthly basis with expected dates of shortfall and amounts of emergency funding needed to avoid shortfall. Other fiscal analyses included a variety of DAF disbursement scenarios and related solvency projections following each of the DOA's Spring 2016 funding level estimates which ranged from just $12M in state funding to $20M and finally to the current FY17 $33M. During the Spring and Special Sessions, the division also produced analytics for fiscal notes in response to several proposed legislative acts regarding funding and disbursement. In response to several massive public records requests, the division produced dozens of hours-worth of reports and other analyses to the Southern Poverty Law Center and the American Civil Liberties Union. At the beginning of the year, the Division compiled and produced the LPDB annual report totaling more than 800 pages between January 1 and January 30.

In concert with the LPDB Capital Case Coordinator Jean Faria, the division took a leadership role assisting the American Bar Association and the econometrics firm of Postlethwaite & Netterville in "The Louisiana Project: A Case Weighting-Time Keeping Study" funded by the Laura and John Arnold Foundation. In service of this project, the division developed and deployed a new time-keeping component to the database and developed a uniform charge code table of statute types which is a more refined list of case types than the previous case types based on the older LIDB standards. The new charge code table, with multiple levels of felonies and misdemeanors, is based on maximum sentence and case complexity and has been retrofitted into the LPDB database.

After more than nine months of negotiations and applications, in Spring of 2016, the division completed the database re-bid and acquisition process navigating the highly regulated and complicated state procurement process, securing a new five-year contract for the software-as-a-service Case Management System and Financial Management System database.

Juvenile Division

The Juvenile Division has been staffed by Deputy Public Defender – Director of Juvenile Defender Services (DPD-DJDS) Richard M. Pittman and Director of Legislative Affairs - Juvenile Justice Compliance Officer (DLA-JJCO) Dr. Tiffany Simpson, for the entire calendar year 2016.

DPD-DJDS Pittman and DLA-JJCO Simpson have participated in a number of stakeholder groups during the year, including the Juvenile Justice Act Implementation Commission, the Raise the Age Commission, the Pelican Center Training Committee, the Children Justice Act Task Force, the CARE Advisory Committee for the Court Improvement Project, the Child Welfare Representation Commission, the Children's Code Committee of the Louisiana Law Institute, and the Juvenile Detention Alternative Initiative. These organizations have produced a variety of outputs that have benefited defenders, children, and parents, including access to training, and bills passed by the legislature and signed into law. Specifically, these organizations had the following accomplishments:

- Conducted a 3-day multidisciplinary event, the Together We Can conference, for child welfare professionals;

DIVISIONAL OFFICER ANNUAL SUMMARY REPORTS (CY16)

- Supported LPDB's child welfare training through sponsoring the travel budgets for trainers;
- Supported and provided technical assistance to juvenile detention centers seeking to regularize and reform its admittance practices;
- Created a video program for stakeholders in the child welfare system depicting a mock trial, for purposes of teaching the roles of the legal actors and illustrating child welfare concepts;
- Provided parent advocates to parents in the child welfare system in the 15th and 16th districts through The Extra Mile, a nonprofit corporation; and
- Continued to provide support to nearly a dozen public defenders in seeking certification as a child welfare specialist from NACC.

In addition to these state-level stakeholder organizations, Mr. Pittman and Dr. Simpson have been involved in the leadership of national organizations. Mr. Pittman serves on the Advisory Committee of the Southern Juvenile Defender Center (SJDC). He also serves as co-chair of the Juvenile Committee of the National Association for Public Defense. Mr. Pittman serves on the Steering Committee of the American Bar Association's National Parent Representation Project.

This year, the Juvenile Division concluded its Board-directed strategic planning process, intended to create a three-year plan to advance and improve the representation of children in delinquency and FINS cases. The strategic plan calls for the Juvenile Division to pursue the following goals:

- Build a robust and supportive statewide community of juvenile defenders that shares knowledge, skills, and support with each other;
- Create a specialized practice in juvenile delinquency defense, ensuring that all children in the state are represented by an attorney committed to juvenile defense practice;
- Improve representational services throughout the lifetime of the case, particularly in post-dispositional proceedings, by adding legal and multidisciplinary capacity.

The Juvenile Division held its annual Juvenile Defender Training (JDT) on February 18-19, 2016, and February 25-26, 2016. LPDB held separate events for juvenile delinquency defenders and child welfare parent attorneys. Parent attorneys held sessions on Appellate Review, Tying Safety and the Fundamental Right to Parent Together, The Ethical Requirement of Zealousness and Identifying Opportunities to be Zealous for Your Client; Developing a Theory of the Case; Trauma-Informed and Development-Informed Practice; Advancing Your Case Through State Witnesses; Strategies for Promoting Family Autonomy and Cohesion; and Positive Case Plans Through Professional Interactions with DCFS Workers, Prosecutors, and Your Client. LPDB staff was joined as faculty by Diana Rugh Johnson, Ari Mathé, and Stephanie Ledesma. Delinquency defenders held sessions on Adolescent Development, Investigations, Interactions with Probation Officers, Prosecutors, Judges, and Parents, the Fourth Amendment, and Trauma-Informed Practice. The training faculty included local contributors Hector Linares, Jack Harrison, Ariel Test, and Kay Franks; who were joined by Cathryn Crawford of Texas and Eduardo Ferrer of Washington, D.C.

Juvenile Defender Center Leadership Summit. The Agency did not provide travel expenses for any of these conferences.

The Juvenile Division assisted Orleans Public Defenders in obtaining a grant from the Kellogg Foundation to provide a social worker and parent advocates to add multidisciplinary capacity to its parent representation practice. This grant will last for 3 years and will provide OPD with $300,000 in added capacity.

The Juvenile Division has observed juvenile court proceedings in many districts around the state this year, including the 1st, 5th, 9th, and 22nd.

The Juvenile Division has also maintained a list serve hosted by the National Juvenile Defender Center, which has served as an important vehicle for the Division to communicate with the field and for attorneys in the field to seek support or assistance from their peers. In the calendar year 2016, there were more than 288 messages posted to the list serve.

Training Division

Because of budgetary limitations, the Director of Training position has been vacant since early in CY 2015. As a result, the remaining executive staff has worked closely with our Administrative Programming Specialist to try to maintain some of our training programs and collaborated with other organizations to increase training opportunities for public defenders around the state.

On February 18-19, 2016, LPDB began its annual Juvenile Defender Training event with a two-day session for attorneys who represent parents in CINC and TPR cases. Sessions included Appellate Review, Tying Child Safety to the Fundamental Right to Parent, Ethics, Development and Trauma-Informed Representation, Building Your Case Through the State's Witnesses, and Strategies to Preserve Families. LPDB incorporated breakout exercises using a developed fact pattern that weaved through the sessions. 41 defenders attended this session.

On February 25-26, 2016, LPDB continued its Juvenile Defender Training event with a two-day session aimed at delinquency/FINS defense attorneys. Sessions included Investigations, Adolescent Development, Negotiations, Fourth Amendment, and Trauma. The training included breakout exercises developed by the National Juvenile Defender Center as part of its Juvenile Training Immersion Program. 34 Defenders attended this session.

During the summer of 2016 the LPDB conducted a tour of the state to present to juvenile defenders on the changes to the law. DPD-DJDS Pittman presented in the following districts, with neighboring districts also invited to attend:

- 1st (Caddo Parish)
- 4th (Ouachita & Morehouse)
- 9th (Rapides Parish)

LPDB co-sponsored with the Louisiana Center for Children's Rights two trainings on Miller and Montgomery Sentencing and Resentencing in Louisiana. Each was completed in a single day. The first was held on August 26, 2016, at the University of Louisiana at Monroe. The second was held on December 16, 2016, at Southern University in Baton Rouge. The training focused on legal updates, adolescent development, ethical obligations, motions practice, and mitigation in JLWOP (a.k.a. Miller) cases.

LPDB personnel also trained district staff in the 9th and 14th districts on the implications of the Miller/Montgomery decisions.

The 2016 Capital Defender Training event was held in Baton Rouge on October 19-21, 2016. 37 participants, including public defenders, investigators, and mitigation specialists attended the specialized training.

The LPDB Collaborated with the National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers to conduct the LA Trial Skills Re-Boot Camp in Baton Rouge on November 3-4, 2016. This training was funded by a grant from Koch Industries targeted to organizations that have demonstrated a strong commitment to ensuring that every poor criminal defendant is provided with competent, zealous representation.

On December 2, 2016, LPDB conducted a new Defender Institute for juvenile defenders in Gonzales, at the request of the juvenile supervisor in the 23rd district. 21 defenders from multiple districts participated.

Various staff members have presented or served as faculty for trainings or programs sponsored by other in-state and national organizations.

Absent a Director of Training, the Administrative Program Specialist, with assistance from members of the executive staff, has engaged in ongoing efforts to develop and implement LPDB's 5-year Strategic Plan and continue building a library of LPDB training materials.

Capital Division

The capital division is responsible for assigning counsel in capital cases; collecting capital case data at all stages of the proceedings; reviewing and deciding on expert witness applications for funding; overseeing the invoices and payment of the experts; reviewing all applications for certification of attorneys who seek to represent capital defendants and making final recommendations to the State Public Defender; creating and providing Capital Defender Training on an annual basis; assessing the performance of the capital non-profit organizations; reviewing and analyzing the non-profit office's proposed budgets and contracts annually. R.S. 15:148,169.

The Capital Certification Advisory Group discussed the applicants for certification and re-certification in May and December of this year. The current Certification Advisory group members are James Boren, John Di Giulio, Rebecca Hudsmith, Robert Lancaster, John Landis, Denny LeBoeuf, Herschel Richard, and James Swanson. Currently there are 70 capitally certified lawyers. The break-down is as follows: 31 Lead Trial Counsel; 20 Associate Trial Counsel; 17 Lead Appellate Counsel; 10 Associate Appellate Counsel; 19 Lead Post-Conviction Counsel and 11 Associate Post-Conviction Counsel. Note that the sum of all levels of certified counsel is greater than the total number of people certified, as many lawyers are certified in more than one practice area.

The Capital Working Group works with the capital division to promulgate guidelines and performance standards and to address policy considerations regarding capital representation in the state. R.S. 15:148(B) §§(1)(d)-(f),(2)-(3), (7)-(10).

As of December 14, 2016, there were 44 open trial level death penalty cases. Of that number 29 are assigned to the capital programs. In calendar year 2016 there were 77 first degree murder arrests. Of these 77 arrestees, five retained counsel. Several cases were relatively quickly determined to be non-death penalty cases. With the exception of the Jefferson Parish Public Defender Office, the remaining cases were assigned to the capital programs.

Jefferson Parish experienced a significant uptick in capital cases this year and currently has ten cases in the district. Caddo Parish, once a district with no fewer than 8 open cases at any given time, now has only one capital case. St. Tammany and Washington Parishes experienced a similar drop in their capital cases, also as result of the change in the District Attorney.

Originally the Board approved $480,000 for the expert witness fund (down $115,000 from prior years). Mid-Autumn, the fund was cut an additional $100,000. The fund was exhausted as of December 13, 2016. The Capital Case Coordinator (CCC) is responsible for the review of all applications for expert witnesses and invoices to be submitted for payment.

Other Duties

Weighted Case Load Study

DIVISIONAL OFFICER ANNUAL SUMMARY REPORTS (CY16)

The Capital Case Coordinator is the staff member responsible for the statutorily required weighted caseload study. R.S. 15:148 B(1)(a). The work began in July 2015 and is expected to be completed in early 2017. Working with the Laura and John Arnold Foundation, the American Bar Association, and Postlethwaite & Netterville, the grant has been extended to allow adequate time for the accounting firm to draft the report.

DNA Testing Post-Conviction Fund

Pursuant to R.S. 15:147(B)(14) the Capital Case Coordinator (CCC) administers this fund as required under the provisions of Code of Criminal Procedure Article 926.1.

Restriction of Services

In the late spring of 2015, the CCC became involved in the restriction of services process, assisting in site visits, and reviewing the districts' proposed plans prior to adoption. The CCC continues to provide support for this work.

LPDB Website

The CCC has assumed responsibility for the Board's website and updating the information on the site.

Commission on Pre-Trial Release

Serving as the State Public Defender's appointee to the Commission on Pre-Trial Release, the CCC is responsible for representing the defense perspective on pre-trial release and assisting in the identification of a validated pre-trial release instrument.

Litigation Monitor

The state staff is frequently subpoenaed to testify throughout the state and has been both a named defendant and a plaintiff in a number of law suits. Initially, most of these lawsuits involved capital funding and subpoenas duces tecum, directly related the work of the Division. Over time other law suits were filed regarding capital contracts, funding for representation in multi-defendant state RICO cases, among others. The CCC monitors all of the litigation involving the Board and its staff, and coordinates with the law firm representing the Board.

Training

In the absence of a Training Director, the CCC has developed the agendas and trained at two separate events: the Capital Defender Training in October and the LPDB/NACDL training of attorneys with ten or more years of experience in November.

Special Projects Division

DIVISIONAL OFFICER ANNUAL SUMMARY REPORTS (CY16)

The Special Projects Division did not have a Special Projects Advisor on staff during the 2016 calendar year. This position has historically engaged in a variety of projects to promote LPDB's missions and statutory mandates. In the past, the Special Projects Advisor has been responsible for updating the agency's website with relevant announcements, employment opportunities, and local, state, and national public defense news and information. It has also assisted with publication of practice standards, guides, and information relevant for clients.

Because LPDB has been unable to staff the Special Projects Division within its budget, other staff members have assumed these responsibilities, often at the expense of their core duties, on an ad hoc basis as the tasks have become critical. In 2016, LPDB staff has completed the following Special Projects Division tasks that were historically the work of the Special Projects Officer:

- Procured and successfully completed all deliverables for the Louisiana Commission on Law Enforcement and the Administration of Justice (LCLE) Grant ($50,000);
- Procured a grant to contract with an auditor to conduct audits of multiple public defender offices, which included corrective action plans, as appropriate;
- Assisted Orleans Public Defenders in procuring a $300,000 3-year grant to support multidisciplinary practice in child welfare parent representation;
- Conducted activities related to a grant from the Laura and John Arnold Foundation, awarded in CY 2015, to conduct an empirical case weighting study which will implement timekeeping among public defenders and update Louisiana's caseload standards;
- Developed and disseminated educational materials describing the agency's mission, functions, and the effect of the fiscal crisis facing local public defender offices; and
- Developed an application for its website to assist flood-affected clients in re-connecting with their attorneys.

Because of the lack of capacity within the Special Projects division, LPDB did not publish any informational guides as it has in the past and has suspended its monthly newsletter. Given the substantial duties of LPDB staff, LPDB will be unable to regularly perform this division's historical duties.

- Instructed staff to prepare a resolution providing an explicit statement by the Board that the approval of the funds available for capital after 65% distribution to the districts is based solely on what funding is available, and is not a statement that it is sufficient to meet the need for capital representation or to fully staff LPDB.

DISTRICT REPORTS DATA COLLECTION METHODOLOGY (CY16)

The following districts' reports cover each individual Judicial District Public Defenders' Office (PDOs) regarding several factors: basic office information, district structures, caseload information and budget information. This information is reported to LPDB by the District Defenders to the best of their knowledge and belief at the time of the submission. Preceding each district's report is an executive summary produced by LPDB staff using the self-reported information from each district as well as LPDB analytics, including information regarding state and local funding percentages, pre- and post $10 special costs increase revenues changes, revenue and expenditure trends, caseload changes, current district caseloads as compared to LIDB standard maximums, and the statewide average caseload and capital plans. The district report executive summaries are analytics based on each district's self-reported information on their caseload and fiscal activity and can vary in part due to their differing local procedures and environments.

Following the executive summary is first section of each district report. This is a narrative produced by district offices which lists basic contact information, including emergency contact information; descriptions of the structure of the local office and the local criminal justice system, including key figures in the local system; the staffing information and supervisory structure of the local office; contact information for the assistant public defenders; and an inventory of the office's present hardware and software. (It should be noted that district staffing information in the narratives represents a "snap-shot" of the staff collected near year's end, typically in November or December, and is subject to change at any time due to staffing changes and attrition.) With the exception of the district's total population and juvenile population, these data are self-reported by the districts through the web-based annual survey questionnaire distributed to each District Defender near year's end. Population data is captured using the U.S. Census Bureau estimates which are tracked by parish.

The second section reports each public defender district's aggregated new and pending (from prior years) caseloads and outcomes of charges disposed in CY 2016. These data are also self-reported by the district offices, gathered through each district's data entry in the case management system. The data are collected throughout the year by each attorney or the attorney's designee through entry to the LPDB online database. In CY 2011, the LPDB purchased a new case management system and deployed it in June, 2011. Data preceding June 2011 was converted and migrated into the new database from the old database also in June 2011. Data is reported on new cases, closed cases, cases from prior years which are still actively pending, and the total of new and pending cases. Some cases listed as pending have been open for several years yet have been periodically reviewed by the districts to ensure these are truly still open cases, noting that complex cases such as juvenile, felony, capital and life without parole (LWOP) cases may indeed remain active even after several years. Cases which are in fugitive or other dormant status, or which have not been reviewed periodically and confirmed as active cases are not counted as pending cases. Additionally, data is reported on the disposition of charges in a manageable number of very broad categories for presentation purposes, with labels such as "Guilty as Charged", "Dismissed", and “Plea to Lesser Charge”, for example, each of which include numerous outcomes similar and relevant to these broad labels. Nonetheless, the disposition data reported gives an impression of the outcomes of cases and charges. Given the February 1, 2017 deadline for submission of this Calendar Year 2016 annual report, case closings and pending cases may not be completely up-to-date. This is particularly true for cases handled very near the end of the calendar year, as the time-lag between case activity at year's end and case data entry may preclude some activity from being entered in time for this report.

The District CY16 Financial Summary Tables, the third and final section of the districts’ reports, address revenues and expenditures by individual line item in a very granular fashion. All information contained in this section of the districts’ reports was compiled automatically. This was done using the online financial management system report query using data from unaudited monthly financial statements which were submitted online to the Louisiana Public Defender Board by the individual Public Defender Offices on a monthly basis during the preceding calendar year. All monthly reports since August 2012 are reported online, and all prior monthly reports since 2008 were converted and migrated into the database.

Revenues reported in this third and final section show the actual amounts of state funding received in the calendar year regardless of which fiscal year the funds were appropriated. To report the amount of fiscal-year state funds actually received by a district on a calendar year-basis, the state revenue portion of the financial summaries were computed by adding all of the District Assistance and Indigent Parent Representation Funds, along with all other emergency or supplemental state funds disbursed to the district office between January 1 and December 31 of 2016 (the second half of FY16 and the first half of FY17). One might note a difference between the total revenues reported in District CY16 Financial Summary Tables and the total revenues presented on the pie chart in the LPDB Executive Summaries preceding each district’s report. This is because the different counts are intended to answer different questions. The CY16 Financial Summary Tables report all state funds received in a calendar year whereas the Executive Summary pie charts report those portions of state funds from FY16 and FY17 intended for use in CY16. The pie charts are essentially using fiscal year data to draw calendar year conclusions.

During Calendar Year 2016, the 1st Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 17,325 cases. The office received $2,870,152 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 47% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

The district's pattern of failing to realize the 25% increase in local funds that was expected to materialize as a result of the $10 increase to special court costs associated with Act 578 (2012) continued and actually worsened. During FY16 (solid green line) local remittances were generally lower than any point since FY12 with the district receiving $220,929 less than CY 15.

Due to the office's inability to obtain the appropriate financial and personnel resources to provide ethical representation to it's clients, the 1st Judicial District remains in service restriction which was implemented on April 1, 2015.

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation. Further, the Board passed a Resolution in 2015 to prohibit districts in restriction of services from accepting new capital appointments. As a result, all capital cases in this high-volume capital prosecution districts fall to the state to supply capital representation because the district is in Restriction of Services.

Method for Determining Reduced Rate Charged For Legal Services if Client is Deemed Capable of Partial Payment	When a client completes an application, a determination is made if partial reimbursements are appropriate for that particular client. These amounts may be reduced or altogether waived upon request by the client. Reductions and waivers are determined by the chief defender on a case by case basis by reference to the federal poverty guidelines and the ability of the client to pay. Additionally, some judges, after making a determination of indigency, will assess some money to offset representation if it is believed the client can afford to pay it.

For the Contract Attorneys in Your District, Is There a Written Contract For His/Her Services? If So, Please Provide a Blank Copy of the Standard Contract	Yes
Primary Immediate Needs	More attorneys to handle the caseloads in all courts, Westlaw, more local training.
Was your office in ROS at any time during 2016	Yes
If you were not in ROS in 2016, do you foresee the possibility of the district entering a Restriction of Services in the coming year, and if so, what are your initial preparatory steps to address this issue?	While we were able to get a conflicts panel August 1, 2016, we still need more attorneys to handle the voluminous caseloads in district, juvenile, and city courts. The situation is being closely monitored.
In CY16, have you instituted any downsizing of staff in response to a revenue-expenditure gap your district may have anticipated? If so, please list staff terminated.	District Court Staff Attorneys - Eddie Brossette, LaLeshia Walker, Kathryn Bloomfield. Juvenile Secretary - Kelly Sanders. Although not terminated for funding shortfall, Sarah Smith and Jasmine Henderson, both excellent district court staff attorneys, resigned for other positions due to the worry of losing their jobs.

Immediate Critical Issue Areas	More attorneys for all three courts, the ability to hold some reserve for emergencies because, without it, we are constantly constrained in implementing improvements to services provided. Additionally, we need to get our juvenile staff out of Red River Parish so that our staff can focus on Caddo's cases.
Long-Term Critical Issue Areas	Stability for all full-time staff and contract staff to stop the cycle of hiring/firing.
2016 Media Coverage and/or Major Accomplishments	Funding issues, staffing changes, effects of both on clients, implementation of clothes closet to provide clothing for indigent clients who are proceeding to jury trial.
Do You Provide Training, Coaching, or Mentoring for New Attorneys? If So, Describe	Any new attorneys will shadow staff attorneys for a couple of weeks to observe court, jail visits, etc. If that is not possible due to needing to get the new attorney in his/her courtroom, the senior staff attorneys will be available in the courtroom and assist during the first few weeks. All attorneys will be encouraged to use the "buddy system" whereby two attorneys will be in all jury trials.
Please identify all public defenders in your office who completed six hours of training relevant to the representation of juveniles this year	Heather Courtney, Kia Richardson, Phillip Prejean, George Harp
Does Your District Office Provide Employee Manuals or Handbooks? (Yes or No - Do Not Attach)	Yes
Describe Supervisory Structure in Your District (For Attorneys and Non-Attorneys)	The Chief Defender supervises all staff. The Senior Staff Attorneys supervise the staff attorneys in his/her section. The Office Manager supervises the support staff, including the secretaries, and investigators. The Juvenile court supervisor oversees all Juvenile staff. The City Court supervisor oversees entire City Court staff.
Any Policy for Caseload/Workload Reduction for Supervisory Staff, Please Describe	Prior to the reduction in workforce due to ROS, the senior staff attorneys had a disproportionate number of cases compared to the staff attorneys. When each district court section was reduced by one attorney, the caseloads among staff attorneys and senior attorneys were evened out somewhat for workload purposes as well as morale. With the addition of a contract attorney in each section, the caseloads are beginning to decline although not significantly yet.
Medical Benefits for Any Staff, Please Describe, Noting Who Pays For the Benefit	PDO pays 75% of health premium for employees and 25% for family. Coverage for other types of health-related insurance is made available but the employee pays 100% of those premiums.
Regular Meetings for Any Staff, Please Describe	Regular meetings are conducted but we are trying some new ways to promote interaction and camaraderie among staff and contract attorneys of three courts.
Number of Appeals Your District Handled in 2016 (As Opposed to Those Cases Transferred to CAP or LAP for Appellate Representation)	0
Number of Writs Your District Filed in 2016	2

Number of Cases Involving Children Under Age 17 in Your District That Were Directly Filed in Adult Court or Transferred to Adult Court in 2016	7
Number of Cases Involving Children Under Age 17 in Your District in Which a Transfer of a Child to Adult Court Was Denied	0
Please Describe Any Procedures That Are in Place For Assigning Attorneys Experienced With Juvenile Defendants to Transferable or Transferred Cases	The senior attorneys will be assigned to these cases.
Number of trial level Juvenile Life Without Parole (Miller) cases handled by your office in CY 2016	4
Number of remanded Juvenile Life Without Parole (Montgomery) cases pending in your office	2
Number of remanded Juvenile Life Without Parole (Montgomery) sentencing hearings conducted in your district in CY 2016	1
Please Provide the Names of All State Representatives and Senators from Your District	Senators: John Milkovich, Barrow Peacock, Greg Tarver. Representatives: Cedric Glover, Thomas Carmody, Jim Morris, Barbara Norton, Alan Seabaugh, Sam Jenkins, Larry Bagley
Other than funding issues, what External Factors (outside of your control) Negatively Affect the Delivery of Services in Your District?	Court schedules - We are trying to get each judge to arrange schedule where attorneys will have a designated time in which he/she will not be in court and can conduct jail or office interviews.
What Changes Have You Implemented in Your District Office in 2016 That Have Improved the Delivery of Public Defender Services?	More guidance of attorneys as to how clients are represented, more explanation of the importance of implemented policies so there is not as much resistance, now handle finances through payroll service and Quickbooks so there is less worry on the staff as to whether we are going broke or not.

THE 2ND JUDICIAL DISTRICT PUBLIC DEFENDERS' OFFICE

(318) 355-2413

2ND JUDICIAL DISTRICT:
BIENVILLE, CLAIBORNE, & JACKSON PARISHES

Donald L. Kneipp
District Defender
208 Courthouse, 100 Courthouse Drive
318-355-2413

During Calendar Year 2016, the 2nd Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 2,068 cases. The office received $493,609 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 74% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

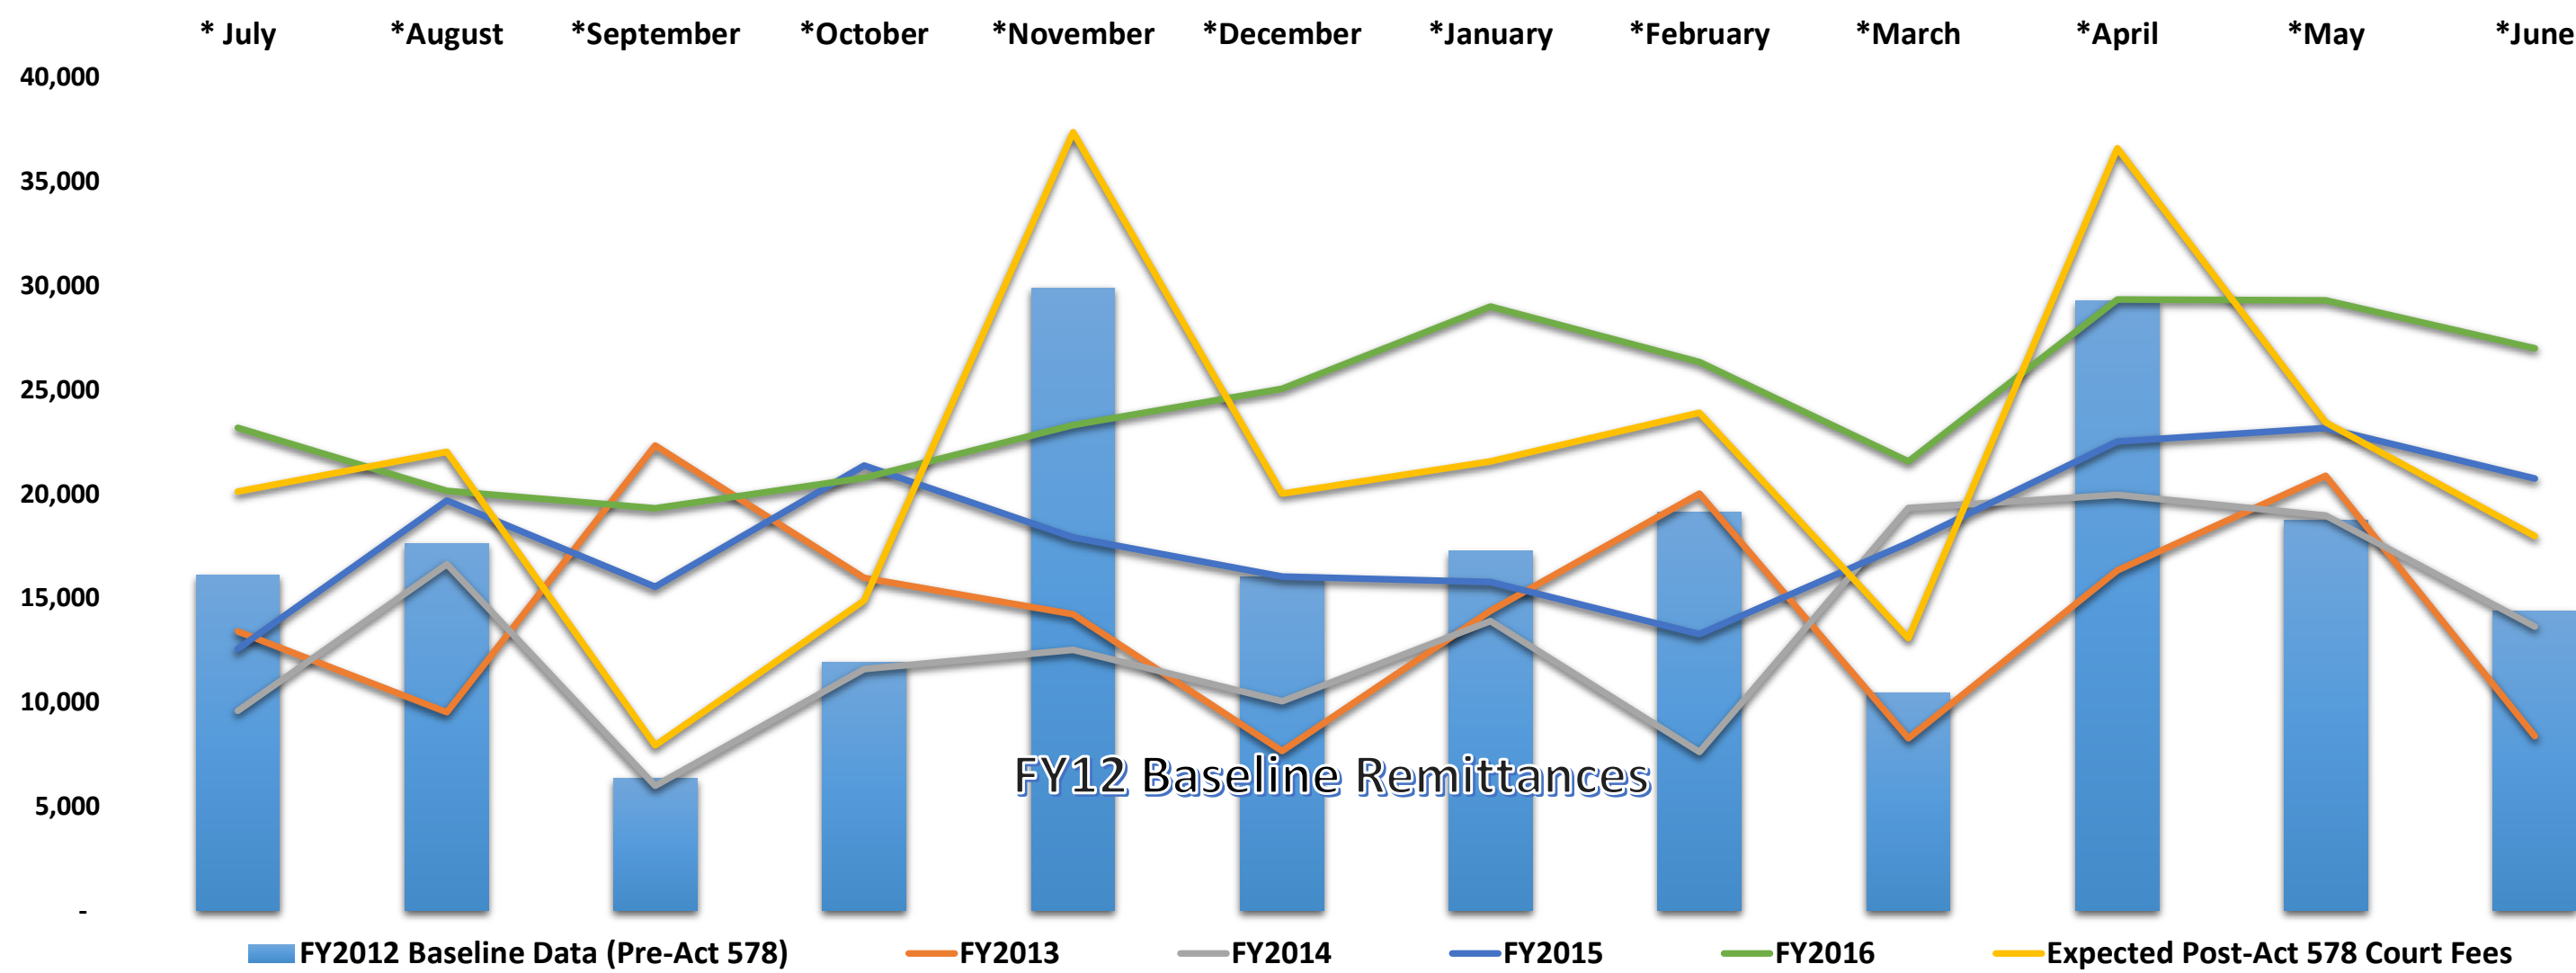

Although the 2nd Judicial District public defender's office has generally failed to realize the 25% increase in special court costs associated with Act 578 (2012), in 2016, the office's local revenues increased by 28% over 2015 revenues.

The 2nd Judicial District office nearly exhausted its fund balance during 2014 . However, increases in local revenues have allowed the office to remain solvent.

2ND JUDICIAL DISTRICT:

Donald L. Kneipp
District Defender
208 Courthouse, 100 Courthouse Drive
318-355-2413

In the 2nd Judicial District, public defense attorneys maintain caseloads one and a half times the recommended caseload limit for each attorney, additionally caseloads in the office have risen every year since 2014.

The 2nd Judicial District is a rural district that handles only a small number of cases each year, making generalizations difficult. However, public defense attorneys have benefited from the training and supervision offered by LPDB.

District 2 PDO Average Caseloads Compared to State Average & State Standard Maximums

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

3RD JUDICIAL DISTRICT: LINCOLN AND UNION PARISHES

Rick L. Candler
District Defender
505 South Vienna Street
318-254-0070

During Calendar Year 2016, the 3rd Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 3,461 cases. The office received $741,446 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 73% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

Although the 3rd Judicial District public defender's office has generally failed to realize the 25% increase in special court costs associated with Act 578 (2012), in 2016, the office's local revenues increased by 58% over 2015 revenues.

For the first time since 2013, the 3rd Judicial District office's revenues exceeded the office's expenditures. This increase in local revenues allowed the office to increase its fund balance.

In the 3rd Judicial District, public defense attorneys maintain caseloads 1.7 times the recommended caseload limit for each attorney, an increase from prior year caseloads.

Since its inception in 2007, LPDB has continually strived to improve the quality of representation through supervision, adherence to standards of representation, and training. These improvements to representation are the cornerstones which lead to improved outcomes for clients.

District 3 PDO Average Caseloads Compared to State Average & State Standard Maximums

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

4TH JUDICIAL DISTRICT : OUACHITA AND MOREHOUSE PARISHES

Michael A. Courteau
District Defender
714 St. John Street
Monroe, LA 71201
318-322-6643

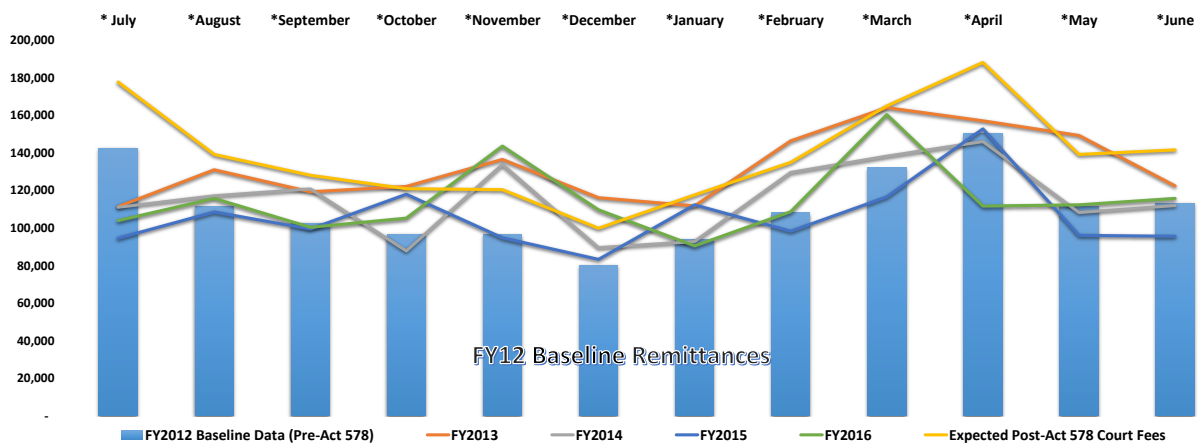

During Calendar Year 2016, the 4th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 10,382 cases. The office received $2,282,095 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 64% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

Overall in the 4th Judicial District, FY16 remittances were similar to FY15 remittances. However, FY15 remittances were generally at their lowest levels since 2012. With the exception of eight months in the past four years since special court costs were increased by $10 (Act 578, 2012 R.L.S.), the 4th has failed to realize the 25% increase in local funds that was expected to materialize.

During Calendar Year 2016, the 5th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 2,173 cases. The office received $437,988 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 65% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

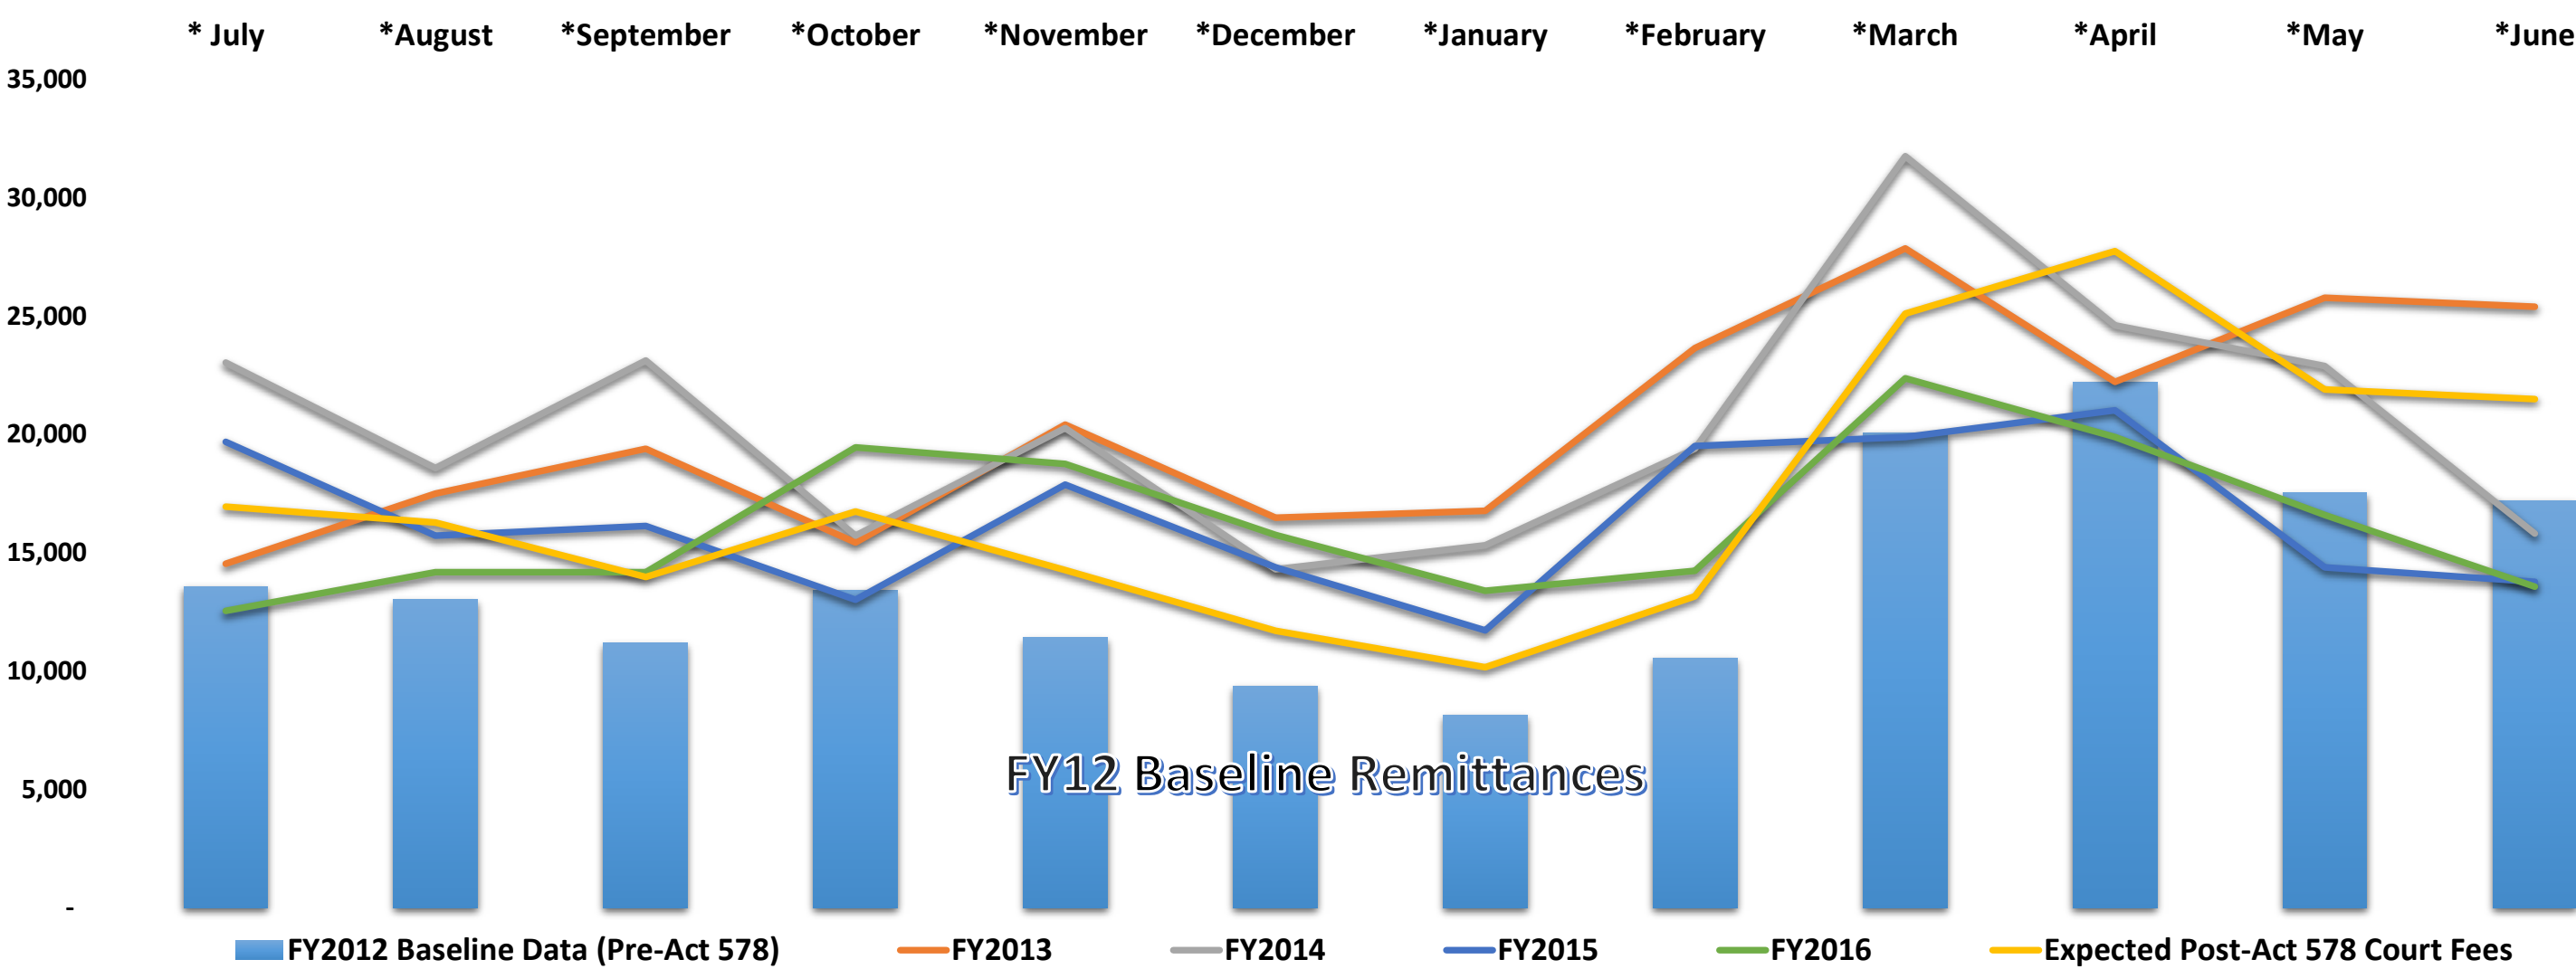

Since the inception of Act 578 (2012), local revenues have generally increased at a rate equal to or greater than expected, however the expenditures of the 5th Judicial District office continue to exceed revenues since CY10 each year, with the exception of CY12 and CY16.

Depletion of the district's fund balance required the office to briefly restrict services during Calendar Year 2015.

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

During Calendar Year 2016, the 6th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 1,571 cases. The office received $572,516 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 75% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

With the exception of a few anomalies, the 6th has generally failed to realize the 25% increase in local funds that was expected to materialize as a result of the $10 increase to special court costs associated with Act 578 of the 2012 Regular Legislative Session.

In the 6th Judicial District, public defense attorneys maintain caseloads twice the recommended caseload limit for each attorney.

The 6th Judicial District is a rural district that handles only a small number of cases each year, making comparisons difficult. However, public defense attorneys have benefitted from the training and supervision offered by LPDB.

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

7TH JUDICIAL DISTRICT :
CATAHOULA, CONCORDIA PARISHES

Derrick Carson
District Defender
4001 Carter Street, Room 4
318-336-7548

During Calendar Year 2016, the 7th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 3,345 cases. The office received $372,073 in total revenues to handle these cases. The district is heavily reliant on supplemental state funding as only 45% of the office's funding came from traffic tickets and special court costs.

As shown in the graph below, since the inception of the $10 increase associated with Act 578 (2012), local revenues associated with court costs have been unstable and erratic.

An increase in total revenues over the last two years has allowed the 7th Judicial District office to avoid insolvency.

In the 7th Judicial District, public defense attorneys maintain caseloads almost four and a half times the recommended caseload limit for each attorney.

The 7th Judicial District is a rural district that handles only a small number of cases each year, making comparisons difficult. However, reliance on insufficient revenues has resulted in caseloads that by far exceed established caseload limits. Excessive cases limit each defender’s ability to provide effective assistance of counsel to their clients.

District 7 PDO Average Caseloads Compared to State Average & State Standard Maximums

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

8TH JUDICIAL DISTRICT : WINN PARISH

Herman A. Castete
District Defender
116 West Main Street
Winnfield, LA 71483
318-628-3592

During Calendar Year 2016, the 8th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 650 cases. The office received $237,396 in total revenues to handle these cases. As local funding is largely insufficient, approximately 68% of revenues came from state funding.

With the exception of a few months, the 8th Judicial District Office has generally failed to realize the 25% increase in local funds that was expected to materialize as a result of the $10 increase to special court costs associated with Act 578 (2012).

The 8th Judicial District remains in service restriction which was implemented on April 1, 2015 due to insufficient personnel and fiscal resources.

In the 8th Judicial District, public defense attorneys maintain caseloads in excess of the recommended caseload limit for each attorney. Caseload averages do not include two felony cases received during CY16 which are currently on a waitlist.

The 8th Judicial District is a rural district that handles only a small number of cases each year, making comparisons difficult. However, public defense attorneys have benefited from the training and supervision offered by LPDB.

District 8 PDO Average Caseloads Compared to State Average & State Standard Maximums

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

During Calendar Year 2016, the 9th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 8,046 cases. The office received $890,178 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 66% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

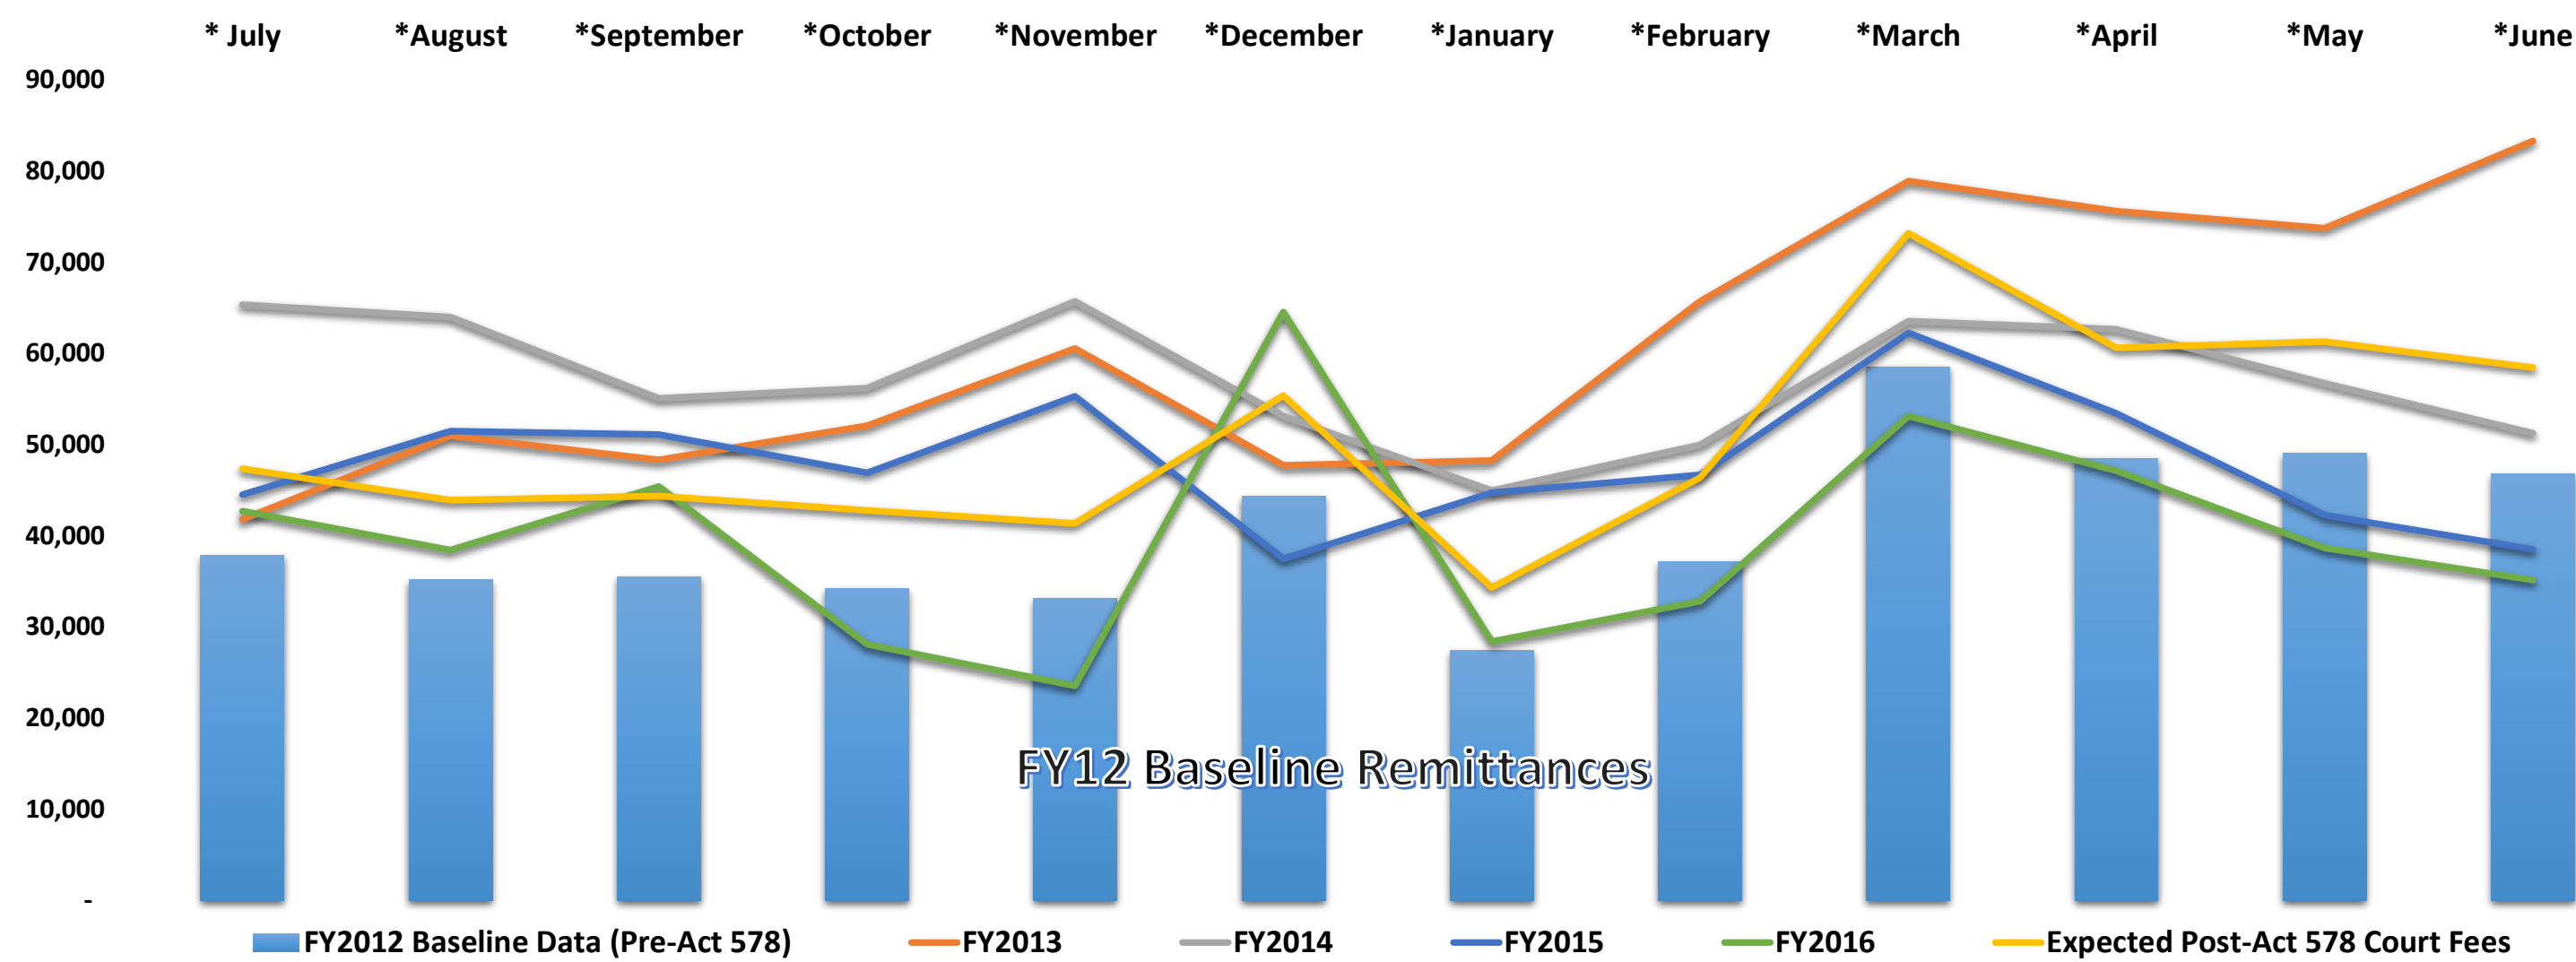

With the exception of Fiscal Year 2013, the year following the passage of Act 578 which increased special court costs by $10, local revenues associated with court costs have often fallen below the 25% expected increase.

During CY16, the 9th Judicial District office experienced a 14.5% reduction in local revenues from the previous year, amounting to $100,000 fewer revenues for the office.

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

Brett Brunson

710 Third Street
Natchitoches, LA 71457
318-352-9311

During Calendar Year 2016, the 10th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 1,453 cases. The office received $536,813 in total revenues to handle these cases. As local funding is largely insufficient, approximately 58% of revenues came from state funding.

Since the inception of the $10 increase in special court costs associated with Act 578 (2012), local revenues associated with court costs have fallen below the 25% expected increase fifty percent of the time.

The 10th Judicial District office nearly exhausted its fund balance during Calendar Years 2013 and 2014, however through proper fiscal stewardship and increased revenues the office was able to avoid insolvency and is now accruing a fund balance.

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

District Defender

During Calendar Year 2016, the 11th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 1,662 cases. The office received $261,246 in total revenues to handle these cases. As local funding is largely insufficient, approximately 77% of revenues came from state funding compared to the statewide average of 35%.

The 11th has failed to realize the 25% increase in local funds that was expected to materialize as a result of the $10 increase in special court costs associated with Act 578 (2012), in fact revenues are generally lower than pre-Act 578 levels.

The 11th Judicial District office’s expenditures exceed the office’s revenues. The district has remained solvent only due to a cooperative endeavor agreement with the 42nd Judicial District.

In the 11th Judicial District, public defense attorneys maintain excessive caseloads which are more than three times the recommended caseload limit for each attorney.

Reliance on insufficient revenues has resulted in caseloads that by far exceed established caseload limits. Excessive cases limit each defender’s ability to provide effective assistance of counsel to their clients.

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

Bradley P. Dauzat
District Defender
110 E Mark Street
Marksville, LA 71351
318-253-0091

During Calendar Year 2016, the 12th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 2,668 cases. The office received $341,480 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 55% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

Since the inception of the $10 increase in special court costs associated with Act 578 (2012), local revenues associated with court costs have fallen below the 25% expected increase more than fifty percent of the time.

The 12th Judicial District office has nearly exhausted its fund balance. Additional state supplemental assistance in previous years has prevented insolvency, however without a reliable increase in revenues or reduction in expenditures, the office will deplete its small fund balance and eventually become insolvent.

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

During Calendar Year 2016, the 13th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 1,960 cases. The office received $236,743 in total revenues to handle these cases. As local funding is largely insufficient, approximately 67% of revenues came from state funding.

With the exception of a few months, the 13th has generally failed to realize the 25% increase in local funds that was expected to materialize as a result of the $10 increase in special court costs associated with Act 578 (2012).

With the exception of CY15, the 13th Judicial District office's expenditures have exceeded revenues every year since CY10, resulting in a minimal fund balance for the office.

District 13 PDO Average Caseload per Atty FTE

In the 13th Judicial District, public defense attorneys maintain caseloads more than two and a half times the recommended caseload limit for each attorney.

The 13th Judicial District is a rural district that handles only a small number of cases each year, making comparisons difficult. However, public defense attorneys have benefited from the training and supervision offered by LPDB.

District 13 PDO Average Caseloads Compared to State Average & State Standard Maximums

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

Harry Fontenot
District Defender

Lake Charles, LA 70601
337-436-1718

During Calendar Year 2016, the 14th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 13,413 cases. The office received $2,222,178 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 55% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

The 25% increase in local funds expected as a result of the $10 increase in special court costs associated with Act 578 (2012) has never materialized in the 14th Judicial District.

The 14th Judicial District office is not currently engaged in deficit spending. However revenues are largely insufficient, resulting in attorney caseloads which exceed client representation standards.

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

His court is in session while the division who is scheduled for Crim II (misdemeanor and arraignments) is holding court at the same time. What steps does your office take to ensure conflict – free representation	We do an initial review of the intake/interview forms to look for potential co-defendants, victims and witnesses. If a conflict is discovered, the case is referred to conflict free counsel. A secondary search is conducted after discovery is received on a case to verify there are no other potential conflicts that may not have been known to the client or discovered in our initial investigation. We also run that list of individuals against each of the conflict attorneys to ensure there are no potential conflicts with the conflict attorney who is appointed on a particular case.

During Calendar Year 2016, the 15th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 18,281 cases. The office received $3,614,300 in total revenues to handle these cases. Approximately 65% of revenues came from local funding which was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

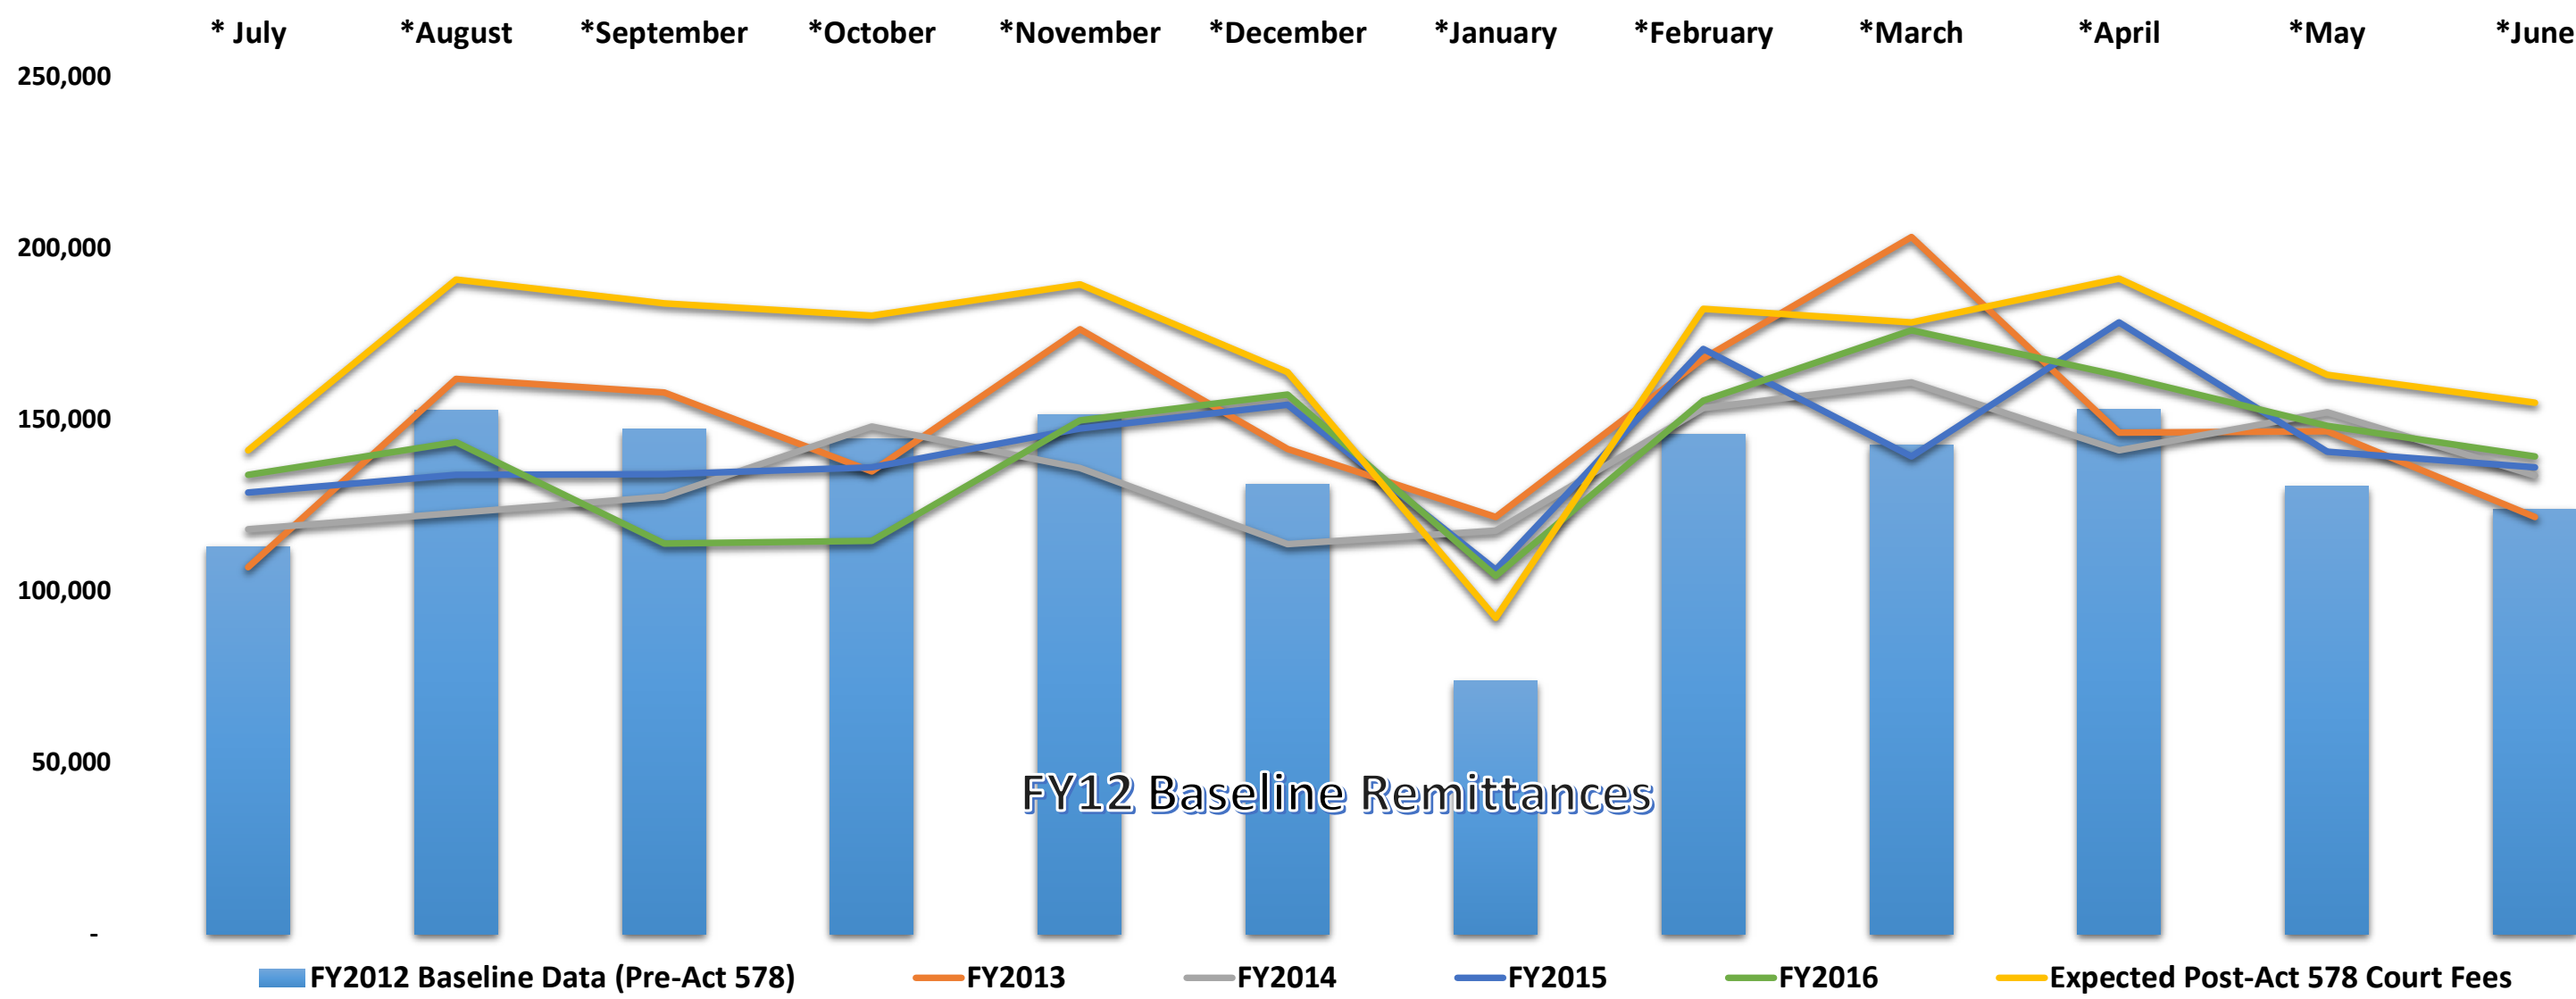

The 15th Judicial District has only realized the 25% increase in local funds that was expected to materialize as a result of the $10 increase in special court costs associated with Act 578 (2012) four times over the last four years.

The 15th Judicial District office exhausted its fund balance and began restricting services on January 1, 2016.

In the 15th Judicial District, public defense attorneys maintain caseloads more than twice the recommended caseload limit for each attorney. These caseload averages do not include the 463 felony, two juvenile, 82 misdemeanor cases and 61 traffic-related cases received during CY16 which were still on the office's waitlist in January 2017.

The district also had thousands of cases received prior to CY16 which were moved to the waitlist due to attorney layoffs.

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has capitally certified counsel on contract to handle the cases that arise in the district, however, the Board passed a Resolution in 2015 to prohibit districts in restriction of services from accepting new capital appointments. As a result, the responsibility for staffing capital cases in this district is transferred to the State, until such time as the district exits Restriction of Services.

Describe Supervisory Structure in Your District (For Attorneys and Non-Attorneys)	ROS has been destructive of systemic growth, and we have lost a portion of full time and part time felony defense. Any Policy for Caseload/Workload Reduction for Supervisory Staff, Please Describe	FAIL due to ROS, which increased workload even with case assignment reductions by weakening controls, increasing inefficiencies, litigation over ROS status.

Other than funding issues, what External Factors (outside of your control) Negatively Affect the Delivery of Services in Your District?	State Board prior to 2016 Legislation was tilted toward funding outside agencies. New board membership may resolve some favoritism and lack of objectivity for policymaking at state level.
What Changes Have You Implemented in Your District Office in 2016 That Have Improved the Delivery of Public Defender Services?	None during ROS. Things are worse due to overloaded lawyers, loss of client goodwill, turnover of lawyers in full time, disorganization due to workflow overload and other factors.

During Calendar Year 2016, the 16th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 8,500 cases. The office received $1,752,775 in total revenues to handle these cases.

Approximately 63% of the office's revenues came from local funding which was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

With the exception of a few anomalies, the 16th has generally failed to realize the 25% increase in local funds that was expected to materialize as a result of Act 578 (2012).

Due to diminishing financial resources which prevented the office from providing the personnel resources necessary to provide effective assistance of counsel, the office began restricting services on May 27, 2016.

In the 16th Judicial District, public defense attorneys maintain caseloads almost two times the recommended caseload limit for each attorney. These caseload averages do not include the three felony cases received during CY16 which were still on the waitlist in January 2017.

District 16 PDO Average Caseloads Compared to State Average & State Standard Maximums

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

During Calendar Year 2016, the 17th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 5,114 cases. The office received $819,930 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 62% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

With very few exceptions, the 17th has generally failed to realize the 25% increase in local funds that was expected to materialize as a result of the $10 increase in special court costs associated with Act 578 (2012).

Since CY14, the 17th Judicial District office’s revenues have slightly surpassed or been equal to the office's expenditures. As a result, the fund balance is growing modestly.

In the 17th Judicial District, public defense attorneys maintain caseloads almost three times the recommended caseload limit for each attorney.

Reliance on insufficient revenues has resulted in caseloads that by far exceed established caseload limits. Excessive cases limit each defender’s ability to provide effective assistance of counsel to their clients.

District 17 PDO Average Caseloads Compared to State Average & State Standard...

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

During Calendar Year 2016, the 18th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 2,277 cases. The office has traditionally been self-reliant as 100% of its revenues were derived from local funding which came primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs. Between FY11 and FY14, local revenues have decreased to the extent that in FY14, for the first time, the State began providing financial assistance to help cover the gap between the district's revenues and expenditures. During FY16, 83% of the district's revenues were derived from local funding.

Since the passage of the $10 increase in special court costs associated with Act 578 (2012), the expected 25% increase in local revenues (solid gold line, below) has never materialized in the 18th Judicial District office. As shown in the graph below, during August 2012, almost immediately following the passage of Act 578, local revenues plummeted to their lowest levels in four years (orange line).

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

225-389-3150

During Calendar Year 2016, the 19th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 14,747 cases. The office received $4,300,299 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 66% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

The 19th Judicial District has generally failed to realize the 25% increase in local funds that was expected to materialize as a result of the $10 increase in special court costs associated with Act 578 (2012). Office revenues have only met or exceeded projections five times in four years.

The 19th Judicial District office nearly exhausted its fund balance and was forced to begin restricting services on March 1, 2015.

In the 19th Judicial District, public defense attorneys maintain caseloads in excess of recommended caseload limits for each attorney. A twenty-eight percent reduction in cases handled by the office from CY15 to CY16 may account for the office's reduction in average caseload per attorneys although attorney positions were eliminated as part of the office's restriction of services plan.

The 19th district public defender's office had one felony-life without parole case and 31 other felony cases received during CY16 which were still on the waitlist in January 2017.

District 19 PDO Average Caseloads Compared to State Average & State Standard Maximums

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has limited capacity to accept capital cases as it does not have two certified counsel or otherwise does not have capacity to provide core team members as required by the Capital Performance Standards. Further, the Board passed a Resolution in 2015 to prohibit districts in restriction of services from accepting new capital appointments. As a result, all capital cases in this high-volume capital prosecution districts fall to the state to supply capital representation because the district is facing a Restriction of Services.

During Calendar Year 2016, the 20th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 1,164 cases. The office received $310,866 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 63% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

The 20th Judicial District has only realized the 25% increase in local funds that was expected to materialize as a result of the $10 increase in special court costs associated with Act 578 (2012) on one occasion. In fact, revenues have been generally lower than 2012 levels almost every month since passage of the legislation.

The 20th Judicial District office nearly exhausted its fund balance which had been in steep decline since CY10 forcing the office to enter service restriction on January 1, 2015. Expenditure reductions and increased revenues have allowed the district to begin accruing a fund balance. LPDB and the 20th district PDO will continue to monitor the office's revenues and expenditures to determine if the office can exit service restriction.

In the 20th Judicial District, public defense attorneys maintain caseloads more than two times the recommended caseload limit for each attorney.

The 20th Judicial District is a rural district that handles only a small number of cases each year, making comparisons difficult. However, public defense attorneys have benefited from the training and supervision offered by LPDB.

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capittaly certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

During Calendar Year 2016, the 21st Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 14,014 cases. The office received $2,955,077 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 51% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

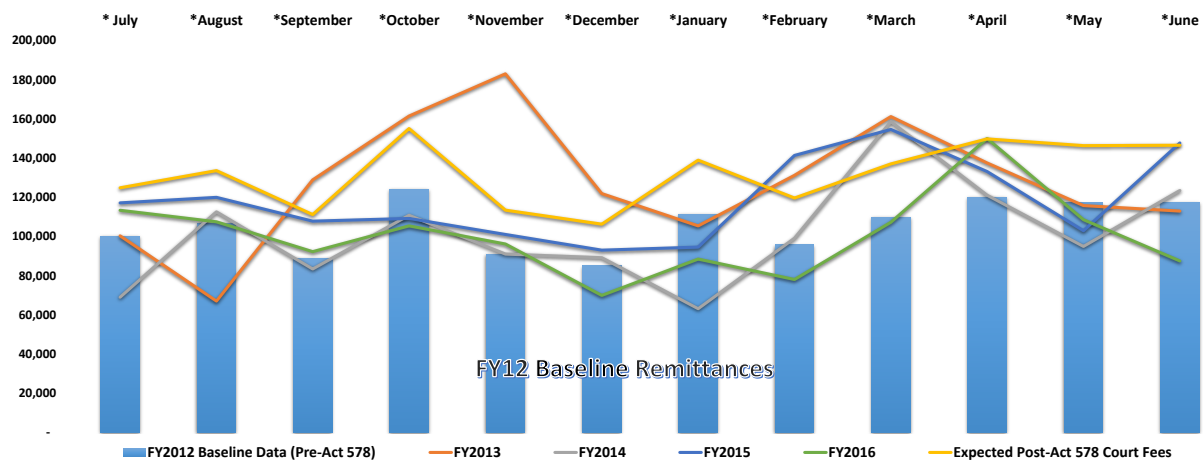

With the exception of a few anomalies, the 21st has generally failed to realize the 25% increase in local funds that was expected to materialize as a result of the $10 increase in special court costs associated Act 578 (2012).

During Calendar Year 2016, the 21st Judicial District office's expenditures exceeded the office's revenues.

District 21 PDO Average Caseload per Atty FTE

In the 21st Judicial District, public defense attorneys maintain caseloads more than twice the recommended caseload limit for each attorney.

Although caseloads remain high due to insufficient revenues, through increased training and supervision, client outcomes in CINC cases have significantly improved over the last six years.

District 21 PDO Average Caseloads Compared to State Average & State Standard Maximums

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has limited capacity to accept capital cases as it does not have two certified counsel or otherwise does not have capacity to provide core team members as required by the Capital Performance Standards.

During Calendar Year 2016, the 22nd Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 15,148 cases. The office received $2,681,933 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 55% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

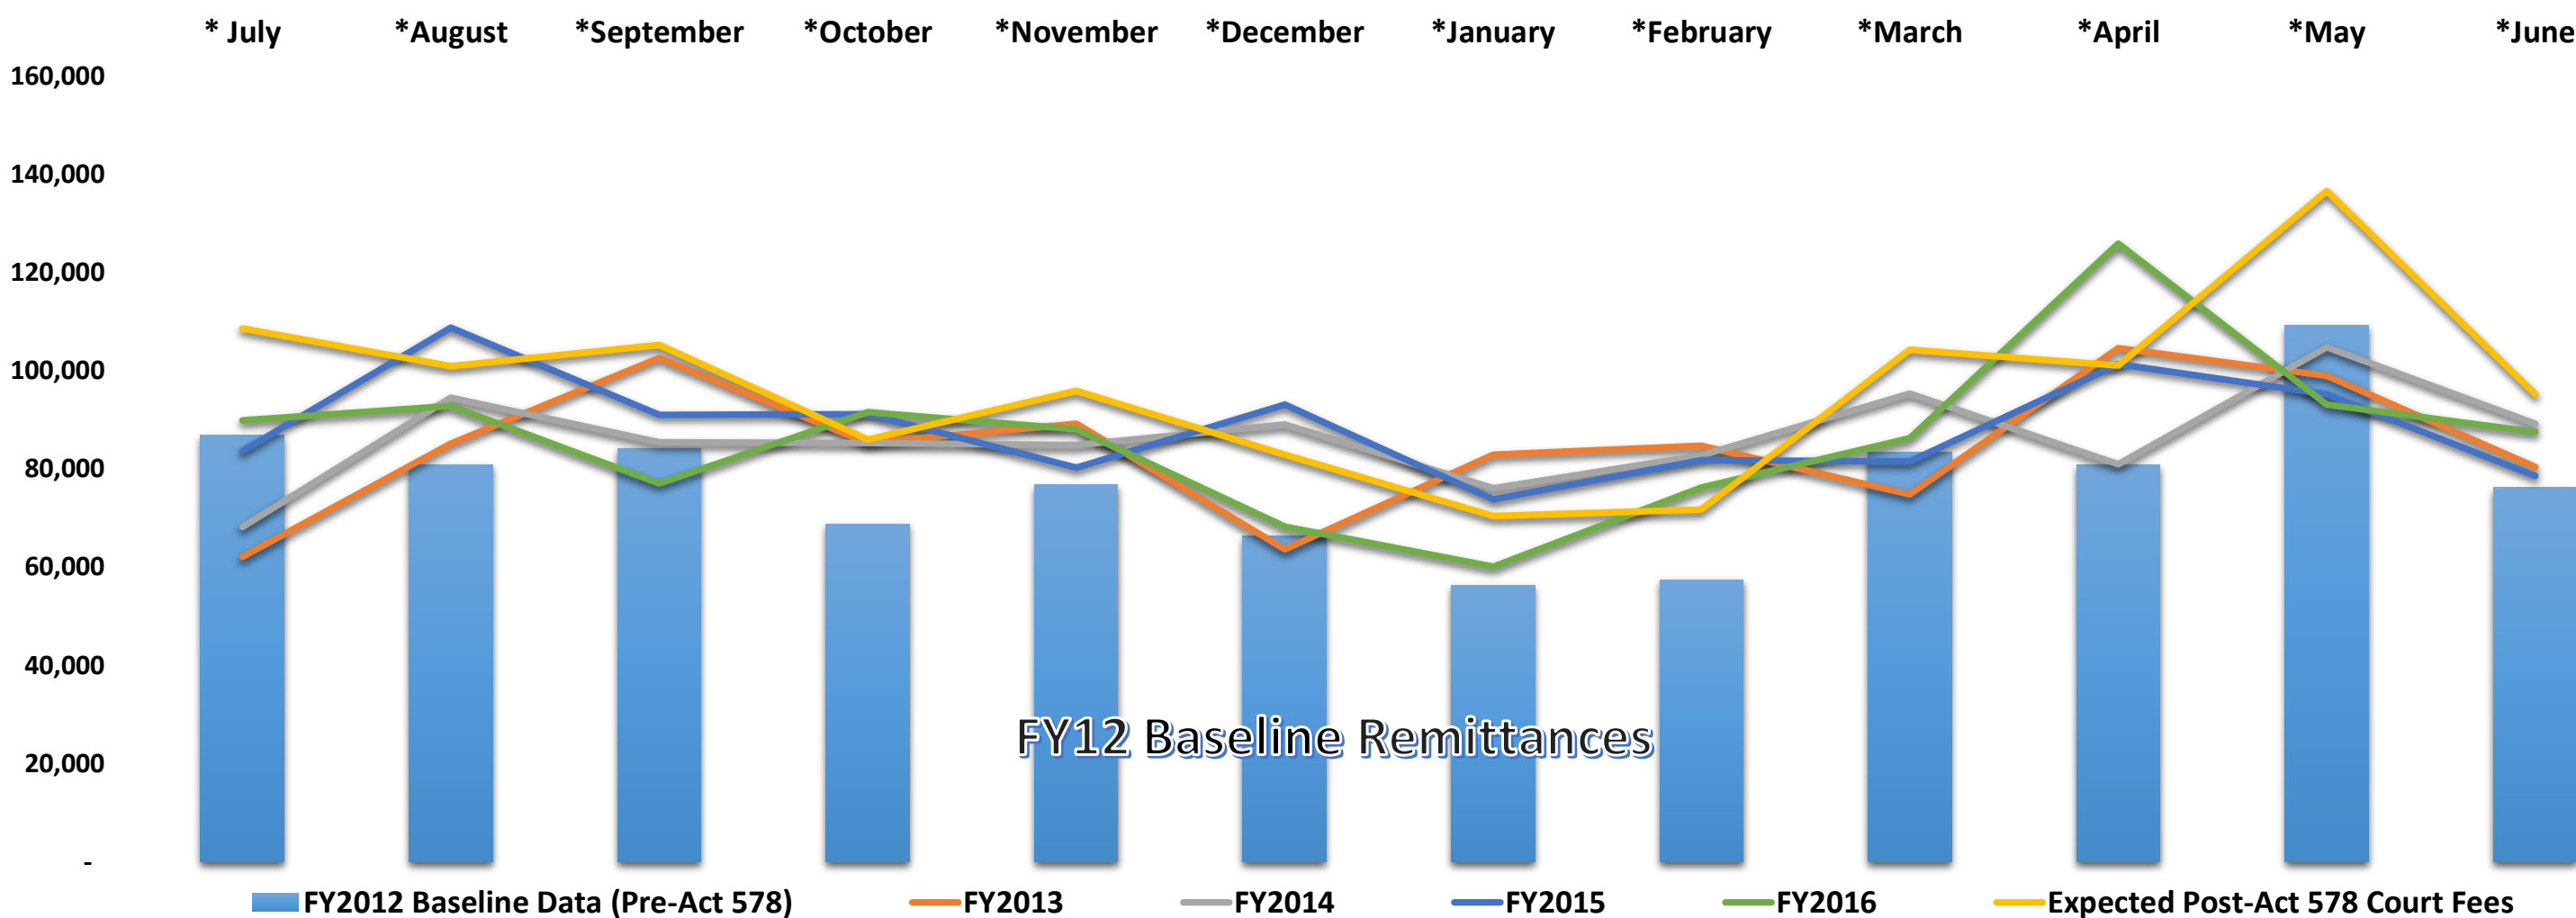

Since the special court costs associated with Act 578 (2012) were increased by $10, local revenues have been higher than in past years, but remain below the 25% expected increase in all but a very few months.

The 22nd Judicial District office has nearly exhausted its fund balance as expenditures typically exceeded the office’s revenues. The office was expected to become insolvent towards the end of FY16, however revenues slightly exceeded expenditures during CY16 because of expenditure reductions made by the office.

Name of Specialty and Brief Description:	Sobriety Court: specifically designed for clients with 3rd and 4th offense DWI. Re-Entry Court: designed for clients facing substantial sentences because of mandatory minimum sentences and/or multiple offender status. Client is sent to Angola for two years and assigned to mentor (LWOP inmate) Must complete training program and counseling. Upon release is monitored by court in a setting similar to Drug Court. Drug court offers an alternative to incarceration for nonviolent, less serious, substance abusing offenders. Drug court is designed to rehabilitate offenders through regular and intense judicial supervision, substance abuse treatment, mandatory drug testing, educational opportunities, and appropriate sanctions and incentives. The goals of drug court are successful rehabilitation of drug court clients and reduced recidivism. Court appointed case managers assist each client through the two year program. Family Re-unification Court assists families who are involved with the Department of Child and Family Services (DCFS). The Juvenile Drug Court serves clients currently in juvenile court. . The adult program serves St. Tammany and Washington Parishes while the juvenile program serves West St. Tammany Parish. Over 300 adults and 25 juveniles are served monthly by the drug court programs in the 22nd Judicial District. The 22nd Judicial District Behavioral Health Court, commenced July 1, 2013, is intended to provide an alternative sentencing option for offenders with mental health disorders or co-occurring disorders. We are performing services with monthly court funded contributions totaling $50,000 per year per contractual arrangement. Through this specialty court, participation in which is a special condition of probation, offenders will be judicially supervised and will be provided community services, including mental health treatment, to prevent the recurrence of behaviors that lead to justice system involvement.
Indigency Determined by Whom and How?	Commissioner makes preliminary indigency determination at 72 hour hearing. Application is then reviewed in-house to determine if client meets eligibility criteria. If client posts bond prior to 72 hour hearing, judge makes initial determination of indigency, orders client to make application and application is reviewed in-house to determine eligibility.
When is Assignment/Appointment of Counsel Made?	Representation begins either at the 72-Hour hearing process and/or upon the divisional allotment procedure. Our felony staff is organized as a divisional basis and all other attorneys are assigned on a area of responsibility e.g. Misdemeanors, Non-Support, Juvenile, Fins, and CINC arenas.
What steps does your office take to ensure conflict – free representation	Conflict check is performed once file is received. Any conflicts are assigned to conflict panel as soon as possible.

Brief Explanation of Intake Process	Jail clients are interviewed by Investigators and screened at the 72-hour processes by Investigators or Attorneys throughout the 22nd JDC system. The potential clients are referred to reporting to the respective office for application processing or accepted as incarcerated clients. Additionally walk-in clients are processed in each office by staff personnel. Information is reviewed as to qualifying for services and shared with the potential client. During Calendar Year 2016, the 23rd Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 6,295 cases. The office received $923,330 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 75% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

With the exception of two occasions, the 23rd has always failed to realize the 25% increase in local funds that was expected to materialize as a result of the $10 increase in special court costs associated with Act 578 (2012).

The 23rd Judicial District office has nearly exhausted its fund balance as the office's expenditures exceed the office's revenues annually. Insufficient personnel and fiscal resources forced the 23rd Judicial District office to begin restricting services on December 1, 2015.

During Calendar Year 2016, the 24th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 9,645 cases. The office received $3,365,929 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 80% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

Since the passage of Act 578 (2012) , which increased special court costs by $10 per filing, the 25% expected increase in local revenue have failed to materialize more than fifty percent of the time.

The 24th Judicial District Office reported receiving revenues in excess of expenditures for the first time in more than six years in Calendar Year 2015 and again in 2016. This has allowed the office to increase its fund balance each of the last two years.

Has Your District Experienced Any Difficulty Accessing Detained Clients at Any Detention Facility? If So, Please Describe	The Jefferson Parish Sheriff's Office stated that they are having severe staffing problems which has limited the number of prisoners kept at the local jail. This staffing problem also gives rise to other issues regarding visitation by private investigators. Therefore, they instituted a rule by which the investigators will not be allowed into the jail without the presence of the attorney who is assigned to that defendant. My first impulse was to attempt to institute some type of legal action, however I consider this a blessing in disguise in that it is requiring lawyers to visit the jail more frequently. Other than the usual delays, the attorneys themselves have no problems having access to their clients in jail.

Indigency Determined by Whom and How?	If incarcerated, by Magistrate Judge at 72 hour hearing. If on bond, at arraignment by Commissioner at Commissioner Court.

When is Assignment/Appointment of Counsel Made?	Magistrate orders appointment of Magistrate PD at 72 hour hearing, then Commissioner, at arraignment, orders PDO appointment for both in-jail and out-of-jail clients.
What steps does your office take to ensure conflict – free representation	Upon entering a client, our data system alerts us if a docket number already exists. At that time we are able to choose another attorney that is not affiliated with that case.

Since the inception of Act 578 (2012), local revenues associated with court costs have been unstable and erratic apparently due to irregular remittance schedules as shown in the graph below.

The 25th Judicial District office exhausted its fund balance as the office's expenditures exceed the office's revenues. Insufficient personnel and fiscal resources forced the 25th Judicial District office to begin restricting services September 2015. Although the office implemented several procedures to reduce expenditures and attempt to increase revenues, the office faced a fiscal crisis and was briefly forced to close it's doors in February of 2016. The office reopened after receiving emergency bail out funds from the state office.

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

Explain District's Method of Assigning Lawyers to Cases in Courts/Sections	Magistrate is held Monday, Wednesday and Friday. An attorney from this office attends all hearings. Judge questions defendant to inquire as to their representation and gives them the option of a PDO attorney. PDO attorney interviews defendant for qualification purposes. If they qualify, the questionnaire is brought back to the office. Assignment of cases are rotated between all Attorneys.

Name of Juvenile Detention Facilities Outside the District Which Hold Clients	St. Bernard Detention Facilities.
Does the Location of Detention Facilities Affect Quality of Representation or Budget? If So, How?	Due to a lack of funding, the office is currently understaffed. This creates the problem of a lack of resources to represent clients in distant facilities.
Do your courts routinely bring juveniles before the judge in shackles if they are being held in detention or secure custody at the time of the hearing? If not, please describe your courts' shackling policy and procedure.	Juveniles are often transported in shackles if in custody. Once transported, Judge will generally order shackles to be removed or deputy will remove at attorney's request.
Has Your District Experienced Any Difficulty Accessing Detained Clients at Any Detention Facility? If So, Please Describe	Our Detained Clients are housed at Plaquemines Parish Prison in Davent, LA. This sometimes makes it very difficult to drive the two hour round trip to access our Detained Clients. Additionally, the sheriffs office is understaffed which causes delays in transporting clients to the meeting area.

What steps does your office take to ensure conflict – free representation	Review initial reports at magistrate bond setting for obvious conflict. Attorneys then self-report conflicts as they arise. If funds are available, outside conflict counsel is retained. If not, Client is put on a waiting list maintained in accordance with ROS standards.

Brief Explanation of Intake Process	Before the Judge comes to the court the PDO interviews all the clients and determines whether they qualify. I complete all the information sheet that contains questions we need for the PDO computer and I sign them up. After Judge has completed the magistrate, the attorney located in our office conducts a first jail visit/interview with that client. Client is then taken back to prison unless able to bond out. The attorney in our office answers all questions that need to be answered and provides any additional help that the client needs at this time. The attorney also will typically obtain all the facts from the client on the charges client has been arrested for.

During Calendar year 2016, the 26th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 13,582 cases. The office received $1,600,158 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 54% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

Since the passage of the $10 increase in special court costs associated with Act 578 (2012) in the 26th Judicial District, the expected 25% increase in local revenues has never materialized.

The 26th Judicial District office nearly exhausted its fund balance as the office's expenditures exceeded the office's revenues. Insufficient personnel and fiscal resources forced the 26th Judicial District office to begin restricting services March 4, 2015, effectively closing the gap between expenditures and revenues.

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

Explain District's Method of Assigning Lawyers to Cases in Courts/Sections	Felony and misdemeanor cases are assigned a Division. Each Division has a staff attorney assigned. LWOP cases are usually handled by the attorney assigned to the Division with the assistance of another attorney. Sometimes LWOP cases are specifically assigned to a senior attorney. Bossier Parish conflict cases are assigned to 3 conflict attorneys. Webster cases are contracted to 3 attorneys. Each conflict attorney in Bossier and each contract attorney in Webster are contracted to serve as conflict attorneys in either parish if needed. Staff attorneys in Bossier can serve as conflict in Webster since the 3 attorneys in Webster are contract and not PDO employees.

Indigency Determined by Whom and How?	The judges barely screen. At 72 hour hearing an bond return date the court will advise of rights to attorney. If the defendant requests an attorney, the judges ask are they employed and if affirmative, they ask what is their weekly take home pay. That is the gist of the courts inquiry. The PDO uses a more detailed application to obtain financial information on the court appointed clients.
When is Assignment/Appointment of Counsel Made?	Clients are assigned a Division by the court. Once the client and division are made known to the PDO, the attorney for that Division is notified by the support staff.
What steps does your office take to ensure conflict – free representation	Support staff receives appointment list at 72 hour hearing. Conflict check is run by staff/counsel. Motion to appoint conflict counsel is prepared and filed. At present, office has reinstated conflict panel, with three (3) conflict attorneys. Each conflict attorney is assigned two (2) judges. Conflict attorneys are notified via email of new appointments.
Brief Explanation of Intake Process	When the court appoints a client to the PDO, the information is entered into the database. The secretary assigned to the attorney with whom the case is assigned makes a file, drafts motion for discovery and notice of rights, places file on attorneys desk. Case that are conflicted to the conflict panel are designated as such in the database as "closed/withdrawn".

During Calendar Year 2016, the 27th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 6,111 cases. The office received $1,044,985 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 67% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

With the exception of a few anomalies, the 27th has generally failed to realize the 25% increase in local funds that was expected to materialize as a result of the $10 increase in special court costs associated with Act 578 (2012).

The 27th Judicial District office has historically relied on its fund balance. For just the second time since 2010, the office's revenues exceeded expenditures during Calendar Year 2016.

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

Derrick Carson
District Defender
3170 N. 1st St
318-992-0881

During Calendar Year 2016, the 28th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 627 cases. The office received $171,651 in total revenues to handle these cases. Local funds derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs are insufficient to support client representation, as approximately 67% of the district’s revenues came from state funding compared to the state average of just 35%.

Since the passage of legislation which increased special court costs by $10 (Act 578, 2012), local revenues have typically increased greater than expectations. However, local revenues in the 28th Judicial District public defender's office continue to be erratic and insufficient as the district is rural with no major highways.

Insufficient personnel and fiscal resources forced the 28th Judicial District office to begin restricting services on February 16, 2015.

In the 28th Judicial District, public defense attorneys maintain caseloads one and a half times the recommended average caseload limit for each attorney. This average does not account for the one felony and one juvenile case received during CY16 which were still on the office's waitlist in January 2017.

The 28th Judicial District is a rural district that handles only a small number of cases each year, making comparisons difficult. However, public defense attorneys have benefited from the training and supervision offered by LPDB.

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

Norco, LA 70079
985-764-2338

During Calendar Year 2016, the 29th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 2,116 cases. The office is essentially self-reliant as only $185 of its revenues were derived from state funding. The office received $853,276 in local funding which came primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

Since the passage of Act 578 (2012) the 29th Judicial District has historically been one of the only districts in the state to almost consistently meet or exceed the expected 25% increase in local revenues. However, during CY16, local revenues only met or exceeded expectations twice, marking a second straight year of decreased revenues.

Between CY10 and CY14, the Judicial District Office’s local revenues continued to increase, however during CY15 the district saw a 28% reduction in revenues. Revenues again decreased by 18% from CY15 to CY16. The district and LPDB will continue to monitor the office's revenues. Consistent revenues have allowed the District Defender to provide living wages to support staff and public defense attorneys, while also maintaining attorney caseloads near the recommended caseload limits.

In the 29th Judicial District, public defense attorneys maintain caseloads equal to the recommended caseload limit for each attorney and well below the state average.

Through increased training and supervision, client outcomes have significantly improved over the last six years.

VERNON PARISH

Tony Tillman
District Defender
501 South Fourth Street
337-392-3077

During Calendar Year 2016 the 30th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 2,514 cases. The office received $617,059 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 81% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

Since the passage of the $10 increase in special court costs associated with Act 578 (2012), local revenues associated with court costs have been unstable and erratic. As shown in the graph below, revenues have fallen below the 25% expected increase more than fifty percent of the time.

The 30th Judicial District office has nearly exhausted its fund balance. Insufficient personnel and fiscal resources forced the 30th Judicial District office to begin restricting services January of 2015.

In the 30th Judicial District, public defense attorneys maintain caseloads nearly twice the recommended caseload limit for each attorney. These caseload averages do not account for the one felony case and seven revocation cases newly opened during CY16 which were still on a waitlist in January 2017. Although caseloads remain high due to insufficient revenues, through increased training and supervision, adult client outcomes have significantly improved over the last six years.

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

When is Assignment/Appointment of Counsel Made?	Approximately half of the felony counsel is assigned immediately following the 72 hour hearing, and the balance at arraignment. The majority of misdemeanor counsel is assigned at arraignment. In an effort to get applicants into the system sooner, the district defender created a Notice which the Sheriff mails to the defendants along with the Notice of arraignment advising the defendants to apply for counsel PRIOR to the day of arraignment. This has helped, and about half of the defendants come in before arraignment, the balance is dealt with at arraignment.
What steps does your office take to ensure conflict – free representation	During interview clients are asked if they were arrested with anyone or if they have any co defendants. If they have co defendants we then make a note so that at time of appointment they won't be assigned same attorney.

For the Contract Attorneys in Your District, Is There a Written Contract For His/Her Services? If So, Please Provide a Blank Copy of the Standard Contract	Yes
Primary Immediate Needs	Additional funds to obtain an investigator, a social worker, and additional staff. We are having difficulties getting current data into the system, and I think the only effective solution is to have all the data input by the district defenders office directly rather than rely on the individual contract attorneys. One employee can Not do all the intake, bookkeeping, bill paying, office administration, etc, and do all the data input.
Was your office in ROS at any time during 2016	Yes
If you were not in ROS in 2016, do you foresee the possibility of the district entering a Restriction of Services in the coming year, and if so, what are your initial preparatory steps to address this issue?	We are currently in still in ROS but conditions were modified to take cases.
In CY16, have you instituted any downsizing of staff in response to a revenue-expenditure gap your district may have anticipated? If so, please list staff terminated.	None
Immediate Critical Issue Areas	Data input is a critical area for us-since the budget is dependent on the data, our district will continue to get short changed until I can solve this problem. The attorneys continually complain that they do Not mind the legal work; it is the data collection they complain about.
Long-Term Critical Issue Areas	Need of office space and staff, particularly an investigator and social worker. With a drug court and extensive OCS caseload, a social worker would greatly benefit our clients
2016 Media Coverage and/or Major Accomplishments	None
Do You Provide Training, Coaching, or Mentoring for New Attorneys? If So, Describe	We send them to CLE and if they need assistance Tony Tillman meets with them alone or with their clients to discuss any problems that they are having. We also pay their LACDL dues.
Please identify all public defenders in your office who completed six hours of training relevant to the representation of juveniles this year	Tony Tillman, Mary Katie Beaird, Tiffany Ratliff
Does Your District Office Provide Employee Manuals or Handbooks? (Yes or No - Do Not Attach)	Yes

Describe Supervisory Structure in Your District (For Attorneys and Non-Attorneys)	With only 2 full time employees supervising them is easy- they both are in offices next to mine, and I am in their offices multiple times a day. The attorneys are all on contract and have their own offices. I see them in court regularly, and meet with the judges and the DA and ask for observations about the attorneys' performances. I have met with individually with each attorneys to discuss issues, i.e. need to document client contact, need to do more frequent jail visits, ect.
Any Policy for Caseload/Workload Reduction for Supervisory Staff, Please Describe	None
Medical Benefits for Any Staff, Please Describe, Noting Who Pays For the Benefit	Jennifer Prewitt - PDO pays monthly co pay after income tax credit.
Regular Meetings for Any Staff, Please Describe	Tony Tillman meets with the office administrator daily, and with all attorneys monthly, and otherwise as needed. Informal meetings at the courthouse happen frequently.
Number of Appeals Your District Handled in 2016 (As Opposed to Those Cases Transferred to CAP or LAP for Appellate Representation)	None
Number of Writs Your District Filed in 2016	1
Number of Cases Involving Children Under Age 17 in Your District That Were Directly Filed in Adult Court or Transferred to Adult Court in 2016	1
Number of Cases Involving Children Under Age 17 in Your District in Which a Transfer of a Child to Adult Court Was Denied	None
Please Describe Any Procedures That Are in Place For Assigning Attorneys Experienced With Juvenile Defendants to Transferable or Transferred Cases	All our attorneys are experienced and capable of handling these cases.
Number of trial level Juvenile Life Without Parole (Miller) cases handled by your office in CY 2016	1
Number of remanded Juvenile Life Without Parole (Montgomery) cases pending in your office	2
Number of remanded Juvenile Life Without Parole (Montgomery) sentencing hearings conducted in your district in CY 2016	2
Please Provide the Names of All State Representatives and Senators from Your District	Senator John Smith, Rep James Armes, Rep Frankie Howard
Other than funding issues, what External Factors (outside of your control) Negatively Affect the Delivery of Services in Your District?	Lack of Resources, lack of qualified personnel in area – i.e., investigators, social workers.
What Changes Have You Implemented in Your District Office in 2016 That Have Improved the Delivery of Public Defender Services?	Worked with attorneys' staff to do better job on motion practice, jail visits, and data input. Met with DA and Judges to stream line court time.

THE 31ST JUDICIAL DISTRICT PUBLIC DEFENDERS' OFFICE

JEFFERSON DAVIS (JENNINGS)

JENNINGS, LA 70546

31ST JUDICIAL DISTRICT : JEFFERSON DAVIS PARISH

David E. Marcantel
District Defender
300 North State Street, Room 203
337-824-4900

During Calendar Year 2016, the 31st Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 2,310 cases. The office received $414,970 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 83% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

Since the passage of the $10 increase in special court costs associated with Act 578 (2012), the 31st has only realized the 25% increase in local funds that was expected to materialize on three occasions over the last four years.

As local revenues have declined, the 31st Judicial District Office has relied heavily upon its fund balance. While it is too early to project when the 31st Judicial District Office will exhaust its fund balance, without an increase in revenues or reduction in expenditures the fund balance will continue to decline and the office will eventually become insolvent.

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capital certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

Houma, LA 70360

During Calendar Year 2016, the 32nd Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 5,010 cases. The office received $1,441,107, 69% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

With the exception of a few anomalies, the 32nd has generally failed to realize the 25% increase in local funds that was expected to materialize as a result of the $10 increase in special court costs associated with Act 578 (2012).

The 32nd Judicial District office nearly exhausted its fund balance during Calendar Year 2015 as expenditures typically exceed the office’s revenues. However, through careful management of financial resources CY16 revenues were greater than expenditures for only the second time since 2010 allowing the office to remain solvent.

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

Primary Immediate Needs	As mentioned on this item in previous reports, this office once employed two attorneys for each district court division. One attorney handled all cases involving violations of control dangerous substance statutes. The other attorney handled all other cases. Three years ago, before the State Board adopted the restriction of service protocol rules, this office cut the five positions for handling drug violation cases. Even with the legislation for increase of court costs, we have not realized the type of revenue that would allow for the reinstatement of those positions. Reinstatement of these positions would help substantially in the reduction of caseloads for the remaining five division attorneys.
Was your office in ROS at any time during 2016	No

In CY16, have you instituted any downsizing of staff in response to a revenue-expenditure gap your district may have anticipated? If so, please list staff terminated.	In March because of a funding crisis, conflict attorneys were let go. They were Robert Pastor, Michael Billiot, Jessica Duet, Jacques Beebe, Carmelita Ratna, Vanessa Zeringue and Craig Stewart. The District Defender and remaining attorneys assumed additional duties, such as drug court, magistrate appearances and initial interviews. The financial crises has ended and some conflict attorneys are back in place.
Immediate Critical Issue Areas	Lack of Needed Personnel.
Long-Term Critical Issue Areas	Shortage of funding for provision of services and resources as required by standards.

Please Describe Any Procedures That Are in Place For Assigning Attorneys Experienced With Juvenile Defendants to Transferable or Transferred Cases	It is very rare that cases are transferred from our City Court which handles all juvenile matters to District Court. In those instances the attorneys who handle felonies in the District Court take over the file, unless the case was originally handled in juvenile court by a contract or conflict attorney, in that instance the case is handled by the same attorney if qualified.

Chad B. Guidry
District Defender
400 West Sixth Ave Courthouse Bldg

During Calendar Year 2016, the 33rd Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 677 cases. The office received $199,917 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 81% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

With the exception of a few anomalies, the 33rd has generally failed to realize the 25% increase in local funds that was expected to materialize as a result of the $10 increase in special court costs associated with Act 578 (2012).

The 33rd Judicial District office avoided service restriction during FY15 after the resignation of the former district defender who was elected to the judiciary. His resignation reduced the office's salary-related expenditures for several months. However, as revenues continued to decline the office nearly depleted its fund balance and began restricting services February 1, 2016.

In the 33rd Judicial District, public defense attorneys maintain caseloads almost twice the recommended caseload limit for each attorney.

The 33rd Judicial District is a rural district that handles only a small number of cases each year, making comparisons difficult. However, public defense attorneys have benefited from the training and supervision offered by LPDB.

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

What Changes Have You Implemented in Your District Office in 2016 That Have Improved the Delivery of Public Defender Services?	I have increased collection of revenue by meeting with every mayor in our district. I have also met with the DA's office to insure that we are collecting out statutory portion of forfeitures collected. I have also implemented new application processes that shorten the time clients get appointed counsel and hopefully we will see an increase in the collection of the $40 app fee as a result as well.

During Calendar Year 2016, the 34th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 1,704 cases. The office received $364,945 in total revenues to handle these cases. As local funding is largely insufficient, approximately 43% of revenues came from local funding compared to the statewide average of 65%.

The 34th has failed to realize the 25% increase in local funds that was expected to materialize as a result of the $10 increase in special court costs associated with Act 578 (2012), in fact revenues are generally lower than pre-Act 578 levels.

The 34th Judicial District office has nearly exhausted its fund balance as the office's expenditures exceed the office's revenues. Insufficient personnel and fiscal resources forced the 34th Judicial District office to begin restricting services on January 1, 2016.

In the 34th Judicial District, public defense attorneys maintain caseloads almost two times the recommended caseload limit for each attorney, although it should be noted that caseloads are significantly lower than 2015 averages.

Although caseloads remain high due to insufficient revenues, through increased training and supervision, client outcomes have significantly improved over the last five years.

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

During Calendar Year 2016, the 35th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 889 cases. The office received $245,789 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 64% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

Historically, the 35th Judicial District public defender's office has failed to realize the 25% increase in local funds that was expected to materialize as a result of the $10 increase in special court costs associated with Act 578 (2012). However, FY16 local revenues increased over previous years, it is too early to tell if FY16 represents an anomaly.

The 35th Judicial District office nearly exhausted its fund balance during FY14. However, increased local revenues and state supplemental assistance have allowed the office to remain solvent.

In the 35th Judicial District, public defense attorneys maintain caseloads more than two times the recommended caseload limit for each attorney.

The 35th Judicial District is a rural district that handles only a small number of cases each year, making comparisons difficult. However, public defense attorneys have benefited from the training and supervision offered by LPDB.

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

During Calendar Year 2016, the 36th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 1,109 cases. The office received $361,362 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 82% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

With the exception of a few anomalies, the 36th Judicial District has generally failed to realize the 25% increase in local funds that was expected to materialize as a result of the $10 increase in special court costs associated with Act 578 (2012).

Over the past four years, revenues have exceeded or kept pace with expenditures, and the fund balance has slightly increased since CY13.

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

Other than funding issues, what External Factors (outside of your control) Negatively Affect the Delivery of Services in Your District?	We constantly work to get bonds set on individuals (even misdemeanor) some may get set several days later, but the jail doesn't get them in and tell the client the amount so they can bond. Also, clients are only allowed one phone call and only to a bondsman. Clients are not allowed to contact a family or friend to assist them. PDO staff has to take the initiative to contact City PD or Sheriff, then Judge to try to get a bond set, this is even on Disturbing the Peace charges etc.
What Changes Have You Implemented in Your District Office in 2016 That Have Improved the Delivery of Public Defender Services?	Our staff meets with the client within 24 hours of appointment to advise them of their rights, who their counsel is and how to contact him/her. Staff makes phone calls for client to contact family for bond assistance or to ask them to bring items the clients that are allowed at the jail.

37th JUDICIAL DISTRICT : CALDWELL PARISH

Louis Champagne
District Defender
301 Wall Street
318-649-2626

During Calendar Year 2016, the 37th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 441 cases. The office received $158,886 in total revenues to handle these cases. As local funding is largely insufficient, approximately 83% of revenues came from state funding compared to the statewide average of 35%.

With the exception of those months when no local funds were remitted in the baseline year of 2012, the 37th has generally failed to realize the 25% increase in local funds that was expected to materialize as a result of the $10 increase in special court costs associated with Act 578 (2012). The fund balance has hovered near zero since CY11 leaving the district in need of emergency funding.

Without a reliable increase in revenues or reduction in expenditures, the 37th Judicial District office will deplete its relatively small fund balance and eventually become insolvent.

District 37 PDO Average Caseload per Atty FTE

In the 37th Judicial District, public defense attorneys maintain caseloads more than two times the recommended caseload limit for each attorney.

The 37th Judicial District is a rural district that handles only a small number of cases each year, making comparisons difficult. However, public defense attorneys have benefited from the training and supervision offered by LPDB.

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

Cameron Parish Courthouse, 3rd Floor, 124 Smith Circle
Cameron, LA 70631

During Calendar Year 2016, the 38th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 177 cases. The office received $97,860 in total revenues to handle these cases, 100% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

With the exception of Fiscal Year 2015, the office has generally failed to realize the 25% increase in local funds that was expected to materialize as a result of the $10 increase in special court costs associated with Act 578 (2012).

The 38th Judicial District office is not currently engaged in deficit spending and maintains a fund balance which exceeds annual expenditures.

In the 38th Judicial District, public defense attorneys maintain caseloads in compliance with recommended caseload limits for each attorney.

The 38th Judicial District is a rural district that handles only a small number of cases each year. However, public defense attorneys have benefited from the training and supervision offered by LPDB.

District 38 PDO Average Caseloads Compared to State Average & State Standard Maximums

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

RED RIVER PARISH

Brian McRae
District Defender
111 N. Washington St.
Mansfield, LA 71052
318-872-2973

During Calendar Year 2016, the 39th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 668 cases. The office received $105,938 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 43% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

With the exception of a few anomalies, the 39th Judicial District has generally failed to realize the 25% increase in local funds that was expected to materialize as a result of the $10 increase in special court costs associated with Act 578 (2012).

The 39th Judicial District office has nearly exhausted its fund balance, however local criminal justice partners have pledged support which may provide additional resources. The district and state offices will continue to monitor the 39th Judicial District public defender's office.

During Calendar Year 2016, the 40th Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 2,928 cases. The office received $778,019 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 96% of which came from local funding compared to the state average of 65%. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

Since the passage of the $10 increase in special court costs associated with Act 578 (2012) in the 40th Judicial District, the expected 25% increase in local revenues has generally failed to materialize .

Between CY11 and CY13, the 40th Judicial District Office’s local revenues decreased, falling well short of covering expenditures. Local revenues had decreased to the extent that in FY14, the State began providing an appropriation to help cover the gap between the district’s revenues and expenditures (which accounts for the increase in CY14 revenues). The state has continued to provide supplemental assistance to the district office.

This PDO has no capitally certified counsel on staff, nor the financial means with which to contract with certified counsel. As such, the district has no capacity to handle a capital case and is wholly reliant on the non-profit-501(c)3 law offices with which LPDB contracts for capital representation.

Other District Office Contact Personnel (Primary Only)	N/A
Name of Owner(s) of Office(s)/Building (i.e., Lessor)	Cypress Property Management, Henry W. Tatje III, Managing Partner (lessor).
Approximate Monthly Rent/Mortgage +Utilities Expenses Incurred by Defender Office	$1200 office space rent; $135 file storage space rent; and $530 utilities, including phone, long distance, electricity, postage, and internet connections.
Are Your Office Accounting Services Handled In-House? (If not, name the third party who provides these services)	Yes; except that the annual audit is handled by Keith M. Rivere, CPA
Courts and Locations	District Court is located in Edgard (West Bank); Annex Courthouse is located in La Place (East Bank).
Number of Divisions/Sections of Criminal Court for Each Court in District (Include City Court, Municipal Court, etc.)	Three Divisions of Court. Each Division holds court in both the District and Annex Courthouses.

Explain District's Method of Assigning Lawyers to Cases in Courts/Sections	According to a pre-set grid or table, the cases are generally divided among the lawyers based on the division of court and the last digit of the case number. Example: In each division of court, the cases that end in an odd digit are normally assigned to one attorney and those ending in an even digit are assigned to another. When a defendant has more than one case in a division of court, the same lawyer is assigned to all such cases. When there are more than two clients in any case, the lawyers who handle cases in another division of court are assigned according to that grid. A copy of the grid has been attached to the electronic version of the district narrative.
Name of Adult Detention Facilities in This District	1. Sherman Walker Correctional Center; 2. St. John the Baptist Parish Jail ("old jail"); Both are located in La Place.
Name of Adult Detention Facilities Outside the District Which Hold Clients	For reasons only known to the sheriff, some St. John inmates are housed in other parishes, including Nelson Coleman Correction Center in St. Charles Parish, Tangipahoa Parish Jail, Tensas Parish Detention Center, and Concordia Parish Correctional Center.
Name of Juvenile Detention Facilities In This District	None
Name of Juvenile Detention Facilities Outside the District Which Hold Clients	Assumption Parish Youth Detention Center; Napoleonville, Louisiana - closed towards the end of 2016; Terrebonne Parish Juvenile Justice Complex; Gray, Louisiana
Does the Location of Detention Facilities Affect Quality of Representation or Budget? If So, How?	Yes; to get to the Youth Detention Center in Napoleonville from the Public Defenders Office requires approximately 2 hours and is a 85.2 miles round trip. The housing of adult inmate clients in other parishes puts a great strain on the lawyers who wish to visit their client. Those round trips take all day.
Do your courts routinely bring juveniles before the judge in shackles if they are being held in detention or secure custody at the time of the hearing? If not, please describe your courts' shackling policy and procedure.	No; due to the efforts of the juvenile Public Defenders, this practice has stopped. The juveniles are transported to the courthouse shackled, but they are unshackled for the court appearances.
Has Your District Experienced Any Difficulty Accessing Detained Clients at Any Detention Facility? If So, Please Describe	Yes; Attorney/Client visitation areas are very unsatisfactory. They are noisy and communications between attorneys and clients can be heard outside of the immediate area. The hours for attorney visitation are restricted, limited to only 6 hours per day, 3 hours in the morning and 3 hours in the afternoon, with a 2 hour break in between. Attorney visitation during weekends and holidays is also restricted and requires advanced permission from the warden. Inexplicably, the sheriff prohibits lawyers from using cell phones in the visiting area. Also, the housing of clients in Concordia and Tensas parishes puts great strain on lawyers who wish to visit their clients. Those round trips take all day.

District Attorney	Bridget Dinvaut
Chief Judge of Criminal District Court	Rotates annually; 2016 = Judge J. Sterling Snowdy; 2017 = Judge Madeline Jasmine; 2018 = Judge Jeffrey Perilloux
Juvenile Court Judges (Specify District of City Court)	Division A- Judge Madeline Jasmine; Division B= Judge Mary Hotard Becnel who resigned at the end of 2016. Jeffrey Perilloux has been elected in Division B; Division C= Judge Sterling J. Snowdy; All are District Court Judges
Drug Court Judges	Judge Madeline Jasmine
Mental Health Court Judges	None
Other Specialty Court	Yes
Name of Specialty and Brief Description:	Truancy Court. The judge reviews the attendance of juveniles registered in schools of St. John the Baptist Parish, including absences and tardiness. Nearly 80% of cases are resolved during the initial stage, where the judge orders that both the juvenile and the parent comply with the attendance policy of the school. At a subsequent date, if the juvenile is not in compliance, the FINS coordinator files a truancy petition alleging that the juvenile is either not attending school or has a substantial amount of tardiness. If the District Attorney determines that the parent is at fault, a misdemeanor charge of improper supervision may be filed against him/her and a trial may be held in truancy or misdemeanor court. Judge Mary Hotard Becnel presides over Truancy Court.
Indigency Determined by Whom and How?	Every Thursday, during office hours, the Public Defender Office takes applications from persons who are not incarcerated and who are seeking a public defender. The applicant is questioned using a standardized application form, which may be longer depending on the financial circumstances. The sworn application is reviewed by the District Defender who then either assigns counsel or files a certification of ineligibility. Both the "Affidavit of Poverty and Application for Public Defender Services" (short form) and the "Application for Public Defender Services" (long form) have been attached to the electronic version of the district narrative. Also the "Notice of Assignment of Counsel" and the "Certification Regarding Eligibility for the Services of a Public Defender" have been attached to the electronic version of the district narrative.

When is Assignment/Appointment of Counsel Made?	Within 72 hours after arrest, the duty judge speaks to the inmates by telephone or by video. An order appointing counsel is faxed to the PDO. The District Public Defender is appointed by name to all cases. He or an investigator does the initial jail visit to assign a line defender, generally within 3 judicial days. The incarcerated client is given a paper with information about applying for services upon release on bail and the name and phone number (free, not collect, calls) of the line defender who is assigned. That information is also filed into the court record. For those who post bail, counsel is assigned after a formal application is made (see previous answer).
What steps does your office take to ensure conflict – free representation	At intake, item numbers are cross-checked to determine whether more than one party is charged. We review police documents for names of witnesses and victims to see if they are charged in cases assigned to the PDO. We require that the lawyers immediately report if they perceive a conflict of any type. Members of the private bar, have in the past, agreed to accept cases when the District Defender anticipates a conflict requiring "outside counsel."
Brief Explanation of Intake Process	The lawyers have access to a multi-page interview sheet to use when conducting client interviews at the jail. The first jail visit is done by the District Defender, after which the data is entered into the database and notes are made. A line defender is assigned by the District Defender. A copy of the interview sheet has been attached to the electronic version of the district narrative, labeled Exhibit A.
$40 Application Fees (per R.S. 14:175)
Does the Office Collect the $40 Application Fee?	Yes
How Many Applications for Services Were Received?	Approximately 399
How Many Application Fees Were Waived?	Unknown; the requirements that applications be made and application fees be paid are waived while defendants are incarcerated. It is also waived when a defendant has applied and been approved in an open, pending case, and is subsequently charged in a new case. Only then is the fee waived in the second case.
How Many Application Fees Were Reduced?	None
Total Application Fee Dollars Collected in 2016	$9,727
Does Another Agency Collect This Fee On Your Office's Behalf? If So, Which Agency Collects These Fees?	No; except when reported as delinquent debt to the Office of Debt Recovery. Only then is the application fee collected by the Louisiana Department of Revenue.
$45/$35 Special Cost (Court Fees, per R.S.15:168 )
Total Revenue from $45/$35 Special Costs Received in 2016	662,094

Does the Court Assess the Mandatory Special Cost (Court Fee) in Every Case Resulting in Conviction? If Not, Explain.	Yes; except in some cases, where a term of incarceration, without suspension, is actually imposed. If a client is arrested for failing to appear in court to prove that they have paid the court costs, the appointed lawyer may request credit for time served, in lieu of payment, in which case, the money is not collected. However, lately, the DA opposes this and the judges will then not grant the request.
What, If Any, Accounting Documentation is Provided to You Regarding Fees Assessed and by Whom is it provided?	In those cases handled by a Public Defender, information is received from the line defender or by review of the court minutes, which is routinely done by the clerical staff. Ordered fees, over and above the mandatory $45 court fee, are entered into the database from this information. A collection letter is then sent out to the client and followed up by a report to the Louisiana Department of Revenue's Office of Debt Recovery if said fees are not paid in a timely manner.
Who Collects the Assessed Court Fees?	As to the mandatory $45 court fee, the sheriff collects the funds and distributes them monthly. Other court ordered fees are collected directly from the clients at the Public Defender Office or by a probation officer.
What, If Any, Accounting Documentation is Provided to You Regarding Fees Collected and by Whom is it Provided?	As to the mandatory $45 court fee, a monthly statement is received from the sheriff specifying the amount collected. The Sheriff provides a form similar to that created by the LPDB. The District Attorney provides a print-out of costs collected in connection with bond forfeitures.
Who Remits the Court Fees Collected?	Court Costs, including the mandatory $45 court fee, are distributed by the sheriff.
What, If Any, Accounting Documentation is Provided to You Regarding Fees Remitted to You and by Whom is it Provided?	As to the mandatory $45 court fee, a monthly statement is received from the sheriff specifying the amount distributed. Ordered fees, over and above the mandatory $45 court fee, are entered into the database when received.

Optional $20 Mayor Court Fee (per La. R.S. 33:441(a)(2))
Did you receive any funding from the optional $20 court costs provisions for Mayor's Courts?	No
From which Mayor Courts did you receive funds from the optional $20 court costs provisions for Mayor's Courts?	N/A
How much funding did you receive from the optional $20 court costs provisions for Mayor's Courts?	N/A
Partial Indigence Payments (per R.S.15:175/Ch.C.Art. 321)
Method for Determining Reduced Rate Charged For Legal Services if Client is Deemed Capable of Partial Payment	At the time of application, if the answers to the financial inquiries indicate that the defendant is partially indigent, he/she is requested by the District Defender to pay a set amount based on the type of case ($550 for a felony, $250 for a misdemeanor) to defray the costs of representation by the PDO, if that can be paid without creating a substantial financial hardship to him/herself or to his/her dependent(s).
What, If Any, Accounting Documentation is Provided to You Regarding Fees Assessed and by Whom is it Provided?	A record is made at the time of the application and certification is submitted to the judge. If the judge orders the payment, it is entered into the database as an ordered fee by either Ashley A. Bogac, Erica N. Carter, or Diana G. Tambunga.
Who Collects the Assessed Partial Payments?	The PDO staff collects the assessed partial payments.
What, If Any, Accounting Documentation is Provided to You Regarding Fees Collected and by Whom is it Provided?	A receipt is given and the payment is entered into the database by PDO staff.
Who Remits the Partial Payments Collected?	The clients, either in person or by mail, remit the payments.
What, If Any, Accounting Documentation is Provided to You Regarding Fees Remitted to You and by Whom is it Provided?	See above.
Amount, If Any, of Partial Indigence Payments Received by the Office in CY16	36,690
Does Your Office Have a Private Practice Policy? If So, Is the Policy in Writing?	Yes; Yes.
For the Contract Attorneys in Your District, Is There a Written Contract For His/Her Services? If So, Please Provide a Blank Copy of the Standard Contract	Yes. Copies of the "Independent Contractor Agreement" effective July 1, 2016 and the "Guidelines for District Personnel Associated with the 40th Judicial District Public Defender Office" effective July 1, 2016 have been attached to the electronic version of the district narrative, both labeled Exhibit B.
Primary Immediate Needs	Reinstatement of expert testing funds for all felonies, increasing traffic ticket issuances and collections to July (2016) levels.
Was your office in ROS at any time during 2016	No

If you were not in ROS in 2016, do you foresee the possibility of the district entering a Restriction of Services in the coming year, and if so, what are your initial preparatory steps to address this issue?	N/A
In CY16, have you instituted any downsizing of staff in response to a revenue-expenditure gap your district may have anticipated? If so, please list staff terminated.	Yes; an investigator's contract was amended from a flat fee to an hourly rate; we did not renew a contract under the same terms for one attorney, who subsequently put in her 2 weeks notice.
Immediate Critical Issue Areas	Sustained decline of locally generated funds since July 1, 2016, particularly court cost (special assessments) and expert funding for cases involving Charles McQuarter III and Dracier Dewey.
Long-Term Critical Issue Areas	Sustained decline of locally generated funds, particularly court cost (special assessments).
2016 Media Coverage and/or Major Accomplishments	2016 media coverage due to the sheriff suddenly and without warning, terminating his participation in the L.A.C.E. program; graduate of phase 1 of Gideon's Promise Program
Do You Provide Training, Coaching, or Mentoring for New Attorneys? If So, Describe	Yes, principally on a case by case basis and at monthly meetings of the District Personnel.
Please identify all public defenders in your office who completed six hours of training relevant to the representation of juveniles this year	Annika K. Mengisen, Eric R. Goza, Fontella Baker, Kevin L. Ambres, Lisa M. Parker
Does Your District Office Provide Employee Manuals or Handbooks? (Yes or No - Do Not Attach)	Yes
Describe Supervisory Structure in Your District (For Attorneys and Non-Attorneys)	In addition to the District Defender, Lisa M. Parker has been given additional supervisory and administrative duties.
Any Policy for Caseload/Workload Reduction for Supervisory Staff, Please Describe	The District Defender has agreed to limit Lisa M. Parker's caseload during 2016.
Medical Benefits for Any Staff, Please Describe, Noting Who Pays For the Benefit	In 2016, none. All dental and medical insurance benefits were eliminated. There was no employer contribution for health insurance in 2016. Effective January 1, 2017, this will change and will be reflected on next years annual district narrative.
Regular Meetings for Any Staff, Please Describe	There is a meeting of the District Personnel usually on the last Wednesday of each month, ten months of the year (excluding November and December).
Number of Appeals Your District Handled in 2016 (As Opposed to Those Cases Transferred to CAP or LAP for Appellate Representation)	0
Number of Writs Your District Filed in 2016	3
Number of Cases Involving Children Under Age 17 in Your District That Were Directly Filed in Adult Court or Transferred to Adult Court in 2016	0
Number of Cases Involving Children Under Age 17 in Your District in Which a Transfer of a Child to Adult Court Was Denied	0

Please Describe Any Procedures That Are in Place For Assigning Attorneys Experienced With Juvenile Defendants to Transferable or Transferred Cases	Initially juvenile defenders are assigned; they coordinate with the adult defenders.
Number of trial level Juvenile Life Without Parole (Miller) cases handled by your office in CY 2016	6
Number of remanded Juvenile Life Without Parole (Montgomery) cases pending in your office	0
Please Provide the Names of All State Representatives and Senators from Your District	State Representatives: Clay Schexnayder, District 81, Gregory A. Miller, District 56, Randal L. Gaines, District 57; State Senators: Troy Brown, District 2, Gary Smith, District 19
Other than funding issues, what External Factors (outside of your control) Negatively Affect the Delivery of Services in Your District?	With only one closed attorney booth at the jail, there is a lack of private facilities for more than one attorney to interview clients at the jail. Also, there are restrictive time limitations at the jail for the attorneys to meet with their clients. Elimination of the Reserve/Edgard Ferry now requires a 48 mile round trip to the Edgard court house from the office. Also, the housing of too many inmates outside of the parish contributes to our funding issues. Additionally, the building where the PDO is currently located is insufficient for our purposes due to the deterioration of the air conditioning system and unreliable elevator service. The air conditioning system fails several times each year and the elevator was out of service for 5 months in 2016. Negotiations have begun with the parish to relocate the PDO to a parish-owned building, but suitable premises may not be available until the end of 2017.
What Changes Have You Implemented in Your District Office in 2016 That Have Improved the Delivery of Public Defender Services?	Monthly monitoring of Sheriff's Office activity regarding traffic ticket issuance and jail visitation conditions; meeting monthly with the District Attorney regarding a broad range of issues including finances and individual cases; and attempting to divide caseload between attorneys based on skill and experience. Additionally, in November 2016, discussions began with the chief financial officer, the parish president, and parish council to have parish funds from a rededicated Juvenile Justice tax assist the PDO in paying the attorneys who represent children in juvenile court. On December 13, 2016, the District Defender appeared before the parish council to make a brief presentation regarding the need and availability of funds from the rededicated tax. At their final meeting on December 27, 2016, the parish council approved 25% of the requested funding for legal services for children represented by the PDO, commencing January 2017.

During Calendar Year 2016, the 41st Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 21,174 cases. The office received $6,820,616 in total revenues to handle these cases, approximately 66% of which came from local funding. This funding was derived primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs, as well as a significant investment from the City of New Orleans in the form of a non-statutorily-required appropriation.

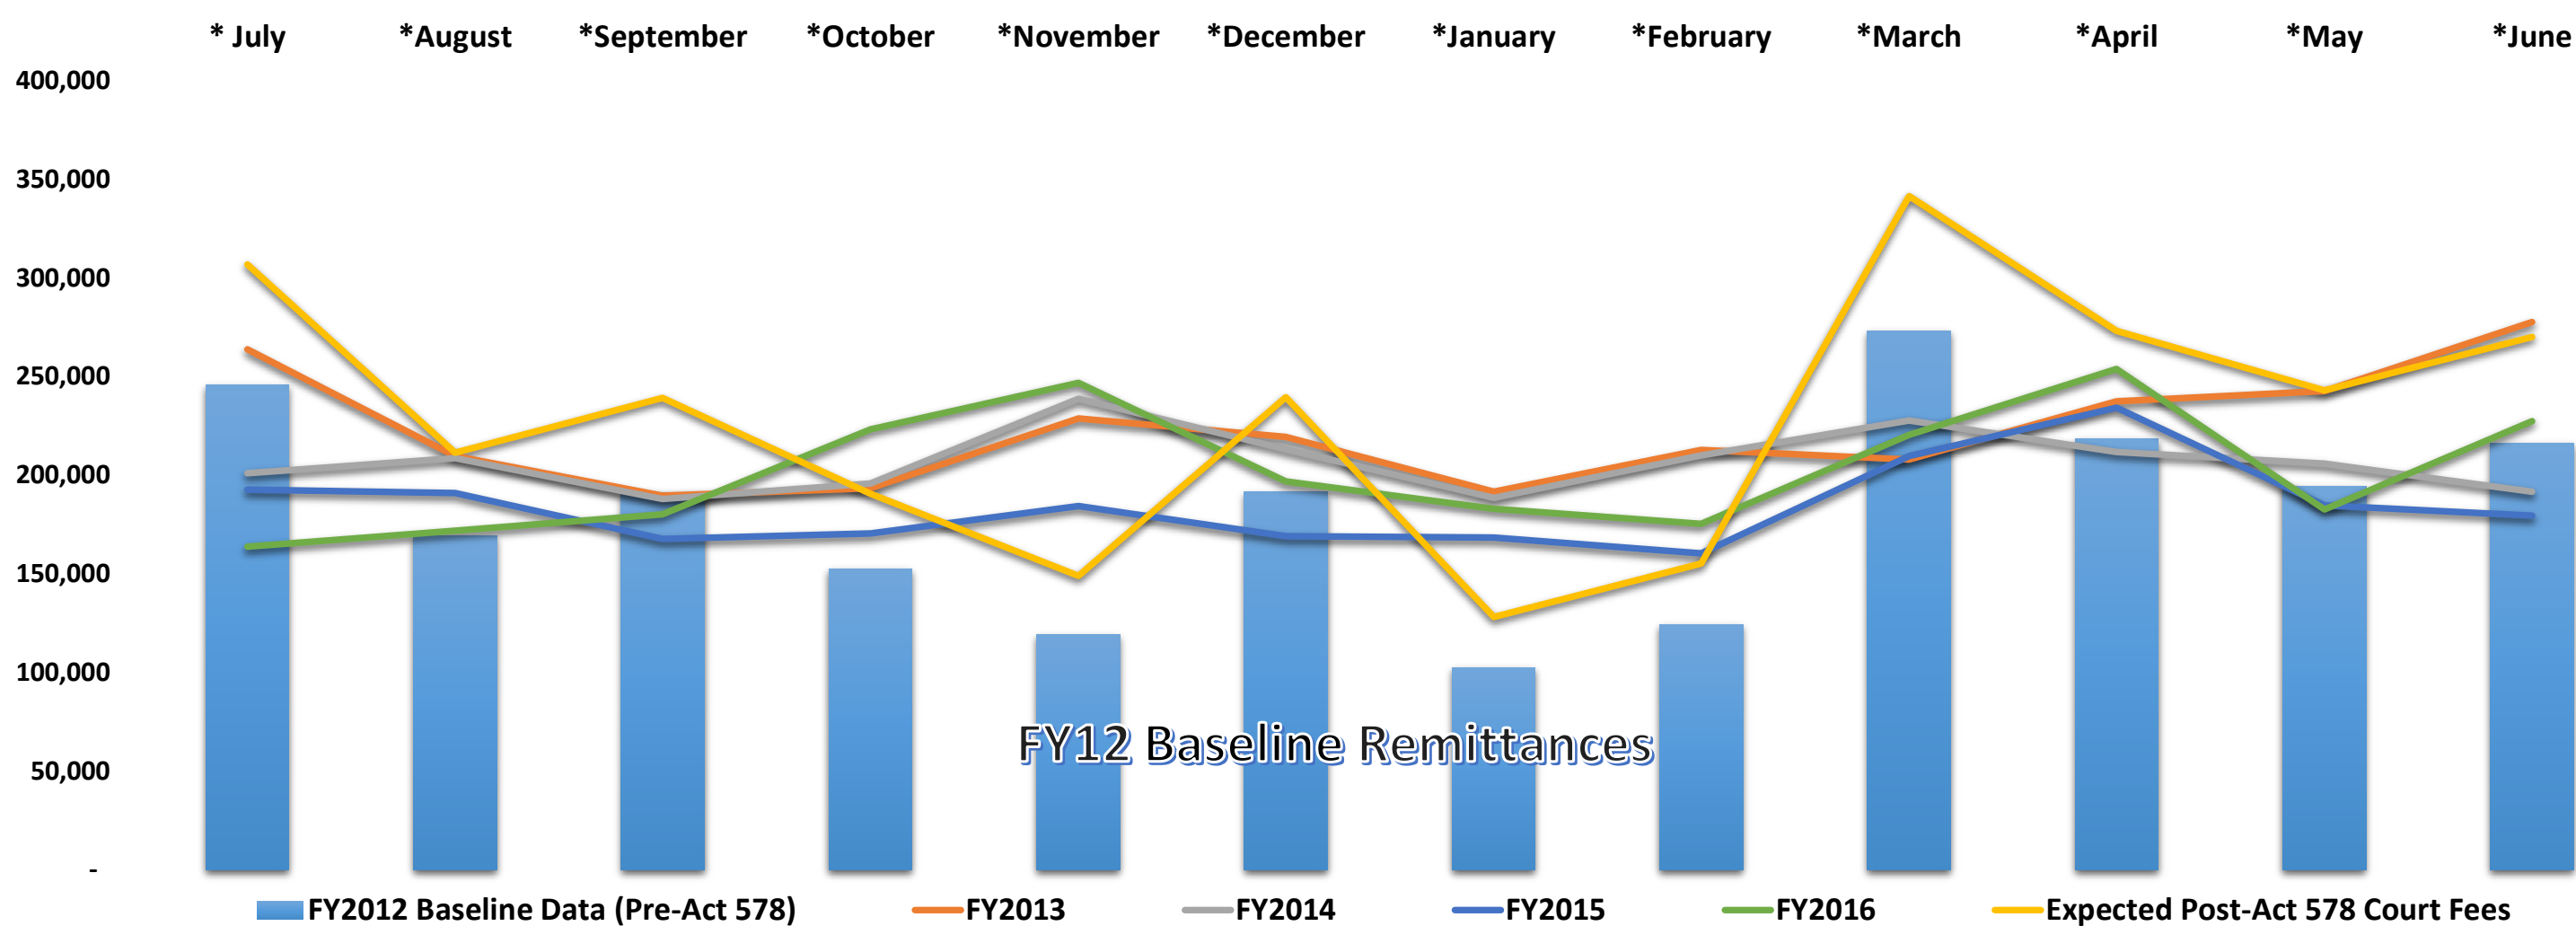

With the exception of a few anomalies, the 41st Judicial District has generally failed to realize the 25% increase in local funds that was expected to materialize as a result of the $10 increase in special court costs associated with Act 578 (2012).

Despite significant investments made by the City of New Orleans, the 41st Judicial District office nearly exhausted its fund balance and was forced to officially begin restricting services on December 1, 2015.

District 41 PDO Average Caseload per Atty FTE

The 41st Judicial District Public Defenders Office designates attorney representation based on attorney practice level. The office's fiscal crisis has led to significant attrition amongst the office's most experienced attorneys. While as an agency, the average attorney caseload is compliant with LIDB standard maximums, the most experienced attorneys exceed both caseload and workload standards as the 41st district has the highest trial rate in the state. Attrition has forced the office to develop a wait list in some of the district's more serious felony cases to ensure ethical representation as there are simply not enough qualified attorneys to handle these cases. Additionally, caseload averages do not account for the one felony life without parole, 44 felony, eleven misdemeanor and 16 Municipal Court cases received during CY16 which were still on the office's waitlist in January 2017.

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has limited capacity to accept capital cases as it does not have two certified counsel or otherwise does not have capacity to provide core team members as required by the Capital Performance Standards. Further, the Board passed a Resolution in 2015 to prohibit districts in restriction of services from accepting new capital appointments. As a result, all capital cases in this high-volume capital prosecution districts fall to the state to supply capital representation because the district is facing Restriction of Services.

Explain District's Method of Assigning Lawyers to Cases in Courts/Sections	Once appointed to the case by a judicial officer, after an initial conflict analysis, OPD assigns the case. In 2016, OPD closed its conflicts division. Additionally, in 2016, some cases were waitlisted due to Restriction of Services. Any non-conflict, non-waitlisted case was assigned to an individual attorney in the OPD Trial Division. Conflict cases that were not waitlisted were assigned to individual attorneys on the OPD conflict panel. Once assigned, cases are assigned to an individual attorney based on the type of case/charge, practice level of the attorney, and the allotted section of court. OPD continued to staff Municipal Court through a rotation of attorneys in their first year of practice as well as a full time Municipal lawyer. All Traffic Court cases are handled by one attorney assigned to all Traffic Court sections. In Juvenile Court, non-conflict cases have been handled by the Louisiana Center for Children's Rights (LCCR). Juvenile conflict cases are assigned either to the OPD Trial Division or to OPD's juvenile conflict panel. Most Child in Need of Service (CINC) cases are assigned to one full time CINC attorney. Conflict CINC cases are assigned to a panel attorney.
Name of Adult Detention Facilities in This District	The Orleans Justice Complex houses Orleans males, females, and juveniles that have been transferred to adult court.
Name of Adult Detention Facilities Outside the District Which Hold Clients	Many incarcerated clients of OPD were housed in the East Carroll Parish jail (approximately five hours away). Incarcerated clients of OPD have also been placed in the Hunt Correctional facility (approximately one hour away) and at the St. Charles Parish jail (approximately 45 minutes away). In 2016, this continued to create significant resource strains and hardship for OPD staff. The placement of significant numbers of OPD clients out of parish also greatly impacted attorney/client consultation.
Name of Juvenile Detention Facilities In This District	Youth Study Center and the Orleans Justice Center.
Name of Juvenile Detention Facilities Outside the District Which Hold Clients	N/A
Does the Location of Detention Facilities Affect Quality of Representation or Budget? If So, How?	In 2016, OPD was not able to adequately represent clients held at facilities outside Orleans Parish. The quality of representation was significantly impaired. In addition, the time necessary to travel out of parish to visit clients has taxed already thin staff resources and added budget costs for travel.

Do your courts routinely bring juveniles before the judge in shackles if they are being held in detention or secure custody at the time of the hearing? If not, please describe your courts' shackling policy and procedure.	Yes
Has Your District Experienced Any Difficulty Accessing Detained Clients at Any Detention Facility? If So, Please Describe	Overall, there are now significantly more attorneys competing for more limited client visitation space at OJC. There are only two attorney-client consultation areas in the jail complex, one of which has three booths and the other two contact visit rooms. Additionally, gender, youth, and other constraints lead to limited access to inmates, as inmates in one classification group often cannot be brought to the visitation area while inmates from another classification group are present.

Other Specialty Court	Re-entry Court, Judge Laurie White "A"; Veteran's Court, Judge Authur Hunter "K"; and Homeless Court, Judge Paul Sens "A" Municipal Court.
Name of Specialty and Brief Description:	The Re-entry Court is designed to assist clients returning to the community after longer term incarceration in State correctional facilities. Veterans Court is designed to assist military veterans gain access to programming and support designed to assist them and prevent criminal involvement. Homeless Court is designed to assist the homeless receive much needed treatment and services.
Indigency Determined by Whom and How?	In Criminal District Court, the judicial officer at first appearance determines indigency for arrestees - often with the assistance of information gathered by interviews of the arrestee by New Orleans Pretrial Services. Often, there is also a colloquy between the arrestee and the judicial officer before the determination is made. If an arrestee has not been deemed indigent at first appearances, the arrestee is then set for a hearing to determine counsel (HTDC) within a week. If the arrestee is still incarcerated at the HTDC, and has not secured private counsel, the arrestee is deemed indigent and appointed to OPD. In Criminal District Court, judges routinely revisit indigency determinations at arraignment. In Municipal Court, first appearance and arraignment occur simultaneously. Incarcerated arrestees are presumed indigent by the court. After consultation with OPD in 2015 regarding indigency determination process, most Municipal Courts changed their process. Those not in custody who cannot afford to hire attorneys are preliminary assessed by the Court and if deemed indigent, are referred to OPD staff, who conduct an application for OPD services.

When is Assignment/Appointment of Counsel Made?	OPD assigns counsel after an indigency and appointment determination is made by the Court. For the majority of assignments, OPD assigns an attorney to the case on the same day OPD is assigned to the case. When appointment is made at night or weekends, OPD assigns the case to an attorney within 24 hours.
What steps does your office take to ensure conflict – free representation	OPD maintains a conflict panel. Before an OPD trial division attorney is assigned a case, a conflict review is done by administrative staff. If a case is deemed a conflict for the trial division, the case is assigned to the conflict panel. If a potential conflict appears or is discovered after initial assignment, a query is sent to either the Litigation Director, Deputy Chief Defender, or Chief Defender, who then determines whether the conflict exists. If deemed a conflict, the case is reassigned to a conflict panel attorney.
Brief Explanation of Intake Process	OPD and the judges of the Orleans Parish Criminal District Court entered into an agreement to work cooperatively to carry out the mandates of La. R.S. 15:1758. On June 3, 2011, the judges met en banc and approved a plan to assist OPD in the collection of the $40.00 application fee. If a defendant is deemed to be indigent at arraignment, the judge will order the defendant to pay the application fee of $40 to the cashier on the first floor of Criminal District Court, who then remits payment to OPD. In Municipal Court, any application fee is paid to OPD staff.
$40 Application Fees (per R.S. 14:175)
Does the Office Collect the $40 Application Fee?	Yes, the OPD collects the application fee in Municipal Court. No, the OPD does not collect the application fee in Criminal District Court. The fee is paid to the CDC's cashier.
How Many Applications for Services Were Received?	Once the court determines a defendant to be indigent and appoints OPD to represent the defendant, there is no additional application that the defendant must complete in order to receive representation. The defendant may complete a brief client questionnaire with contact information, medical issues, and other issues the defendant may want to bring to the attention of the assigned attorney.
How Many Application Fees Were Waived?	Pursuant to an agreement entered into with the Criminal District Court, the court will not order pretrial detained, indigent defendants to pay the $40 application fee. In other words, the fee is practically waived for incarcerated, indigent defendants.
How Many Application Fees Were Reduced?	Pursuant to an agreement entered into with the Criminal District Court, the application fee is not reduced. The defendant must pay the full $40.
Total Application Fee Dollars Collected in 2016	$20,117
Does Another Agency Collect This Fee On Your Office's Behalf? If So, Which Agency Collects These Fees?	OPD does not physically collect the $40 fee from the indigent defendant in Criminal District Court. The defendants are ordered by the court to pay the fee to the Cashier's Office in the Criminal District Court. The defendants are provided with a payment slip which they are to bring to the Cashier's Office. The Criminal District Court charges a 25% collection fee.
$45/$35 Special Cost (Court Fees, per R.S.15:168 )
Total Revenue from $45/$35 Special Costs Received in 2016	$2,106,336

Does the Court Assess the Mandatory Special Cost (Court Fee) in Every Case Resulting in Conviction? If Not, Explain.	Every time there is a conviction, judges assess court costs. Included in the court costs is the mandatory special cost. Many judges do not specify on the record that they are assessing the mandatory special cost. Thus, the understanding is the special cost is included in the total court costs that is assessed to each convicted defendant.
What, If Any, Accounting Documentation is Provided to You Regarding Fees Assessed and by Whom is it provided?	In a monthly remittance from Traffic, Municipal and Criminal District Court, a payment summary is included with the payment. The payment summary includes: the defendants name, section and case number, date the costs are assessed and collected, amount of assessment and actual collection.
Who Collects the Assessed Court Fees?	The Cashier's Offices in the courts collect all court fines, fees and costs.
What, If Any, Accounting Documentation is Provided to You Regarding Fees Collected and by Whom is it Provided?	The Judicial Administrators are responsible for providing documentation to OPD on a monthly basis.
Who Remits the Court Fees Collected?	The Judicial Administrator's Office under the direction of the judges en banc.
What, If Any, Accounting Documentation is Provided to You Regarding Fees Remitted to You and by Whom is it Provided?	In a monthly remittance from Traffic Court, Municipal Court, the Sheriff's office (quarterly) and Criminal District Court, a payment summary is included with the payment. The payment summary includes: the defendants name, section and case number, date the costs are assessed and collected, amount of assessment and actual collection.
Optional $20 Mayor Court Fee (per La. R.S. 33:441(a)(2))
Did you receive any funding from the optional $20 court costs provisions for Mayor's Courts?	No
From which Mayor Courts did you receive funds from the optional $20 court costs provisions for Mayor's Courts?	N/A
How much funding did you receive from the optional $20 court costs provisions for Mayor's Courts?	N/A
Partial Indigence Payments (per R.S.15:175/Ch.C.Art. 321)
Method for Determining Reduced Rate Charged For Legal Services if Client is Deemed Capable of Partial Payment	The judges will determine whether a defendant is indigent or partially indigent. If the defendant is partially indigent, the judges will assess a representation fee to the defendant. The judges do not provide any documentation to the defendant but orders the defendant to pay the Indigent Defender Fund either by the next court date or by the end of the case.
What, If Any, Accounting Documentation is Provided to You Regarding Fees Assessed and by Whom is it Provided?	N/A
Who Collects the Assessed Partial Payments?	The defendant is ordered to pay the Indigent Defender Fund directly. The defendant then comes to OPD and makes a payment or a payment arrangement with the administrative staff.
What, If Any, Accounting Documentation is Provided to You Regarding Fees Collected and by Whom is it Provided?	Since this fee is collected by OPD directly, OPD is responsible for accounting this money.
Who Remits the Partial Payments Collected?	Again, since this fee is collected by OPD directly, OPD is responsible for accounting this money from collection to remittance.

What, If Any, Accounting Documentation is Provided to You Regarding Fees Remitted to You and by Whom is it Provided?	Again, since this fee is collected by OPD directly, OPD is responsible for accounting this money from collection to remittance.
Amount, If Any, of Partial Indigence Payments Received by the Office in CY16	100

If you were not in ROS in 2016, do you foresee the possibility of the district entering a Restriction of Services in the coming year, and if so, what are your initial preparatory steps to address this issue?	OPD implemented a number of cost-cutting measures during FY 2016 (which included the first 6 months of CY2016). These measures include: a hiring freeze and cuts to operational expenditures.
In CY16, have you instituted any downsizing of staff in response to a revenue-expenditure gap your district may have anticipated? If so, please list staff terminated.	Yes. Number of Cases Involving Children Under Age 17 in Your District That Were Directly Filed in Adult Court or Transferred to Adult Court in 2016	Based on OPD's case management system, during 2016, 36 children under the age of 17 were transferred to Adult Court.
Number of Cases Involving Children Under Age 17 in Your District in Which a Transfer of a Child to Adult Court Was Denied	OPD is unaware of any case(s) wherein a transfer was denied by the Juvenile Court.
Please Describe Any Procedures That Are in Place For Assigning Attorneys Experienced With Juvenile Defendants to Transferable or Transferred Cases	During 2016, OPD primarily assigned transferred Trial Division juvenile cases to one attorney experienced in juvenile representation. When LCCR is unable to represent a juvenile due to a conflict, OPD provided an attorney with several years of experience and extensive training in juvenile representation to handle transferrable cases at the continued custody/transfer hearing. If a conflict prevented OPD Trial Division from representing a juvenile at the continued custody hearing, then the case is assigned to a conflict panel attorney. Once an assignment is made, the assigned OPD attorney then stays on the case through disposition.
Number of trial level Juvenile Life Without Parole (Miller) cases handled by your office in CY 2016	During 2016, OPD has handled six (6) Miller cases.
Number of remanded Juvenile Life Without Parole (Montgomery) cases pending in your office	During 2016, OPD has been appointed to nineteen (19) Montgomery clients.
Number of remanded Juvenile Life Without Parole (Montgomery) sentencing hearings conducted in your district in CY 2016	During 2016, OPD represented seven clients in Montgomery hearings where the state did not oppose a life with parole sentence. Due to Restriction of Services, OPD has not been able to conduct any contradictory Montgomery hearings where the state opposes a life with parole sentence.
Please Provide the Names of All State Representatives and Senators from Your District	See: http://house.louisiana.gov/H_Reps/By_Deleg/H_Reps_Deleg_Orleans.asp
Other than funding issues, what External Factors (outside of your control) Negatively Affect the Delivery of Services in Your District?	2016 has been a year of continuing Restriction of Services. While the hiring freeze ended during 2016, OPD has had to fill numerous vacant positions. Excessive caseloads and depleted staff continue to be the biggest obstacles regarding our representation. In addition, the District Attorney accepts a significantly higher number of cases than other parishes and pursues harsh multiple bill sentences even for non-violent offenders. There is still an ongoing issue regarding jail visitation (and out of parish detention of OPD clients) that affects delivery of services. An unprofessional and hostile climate, especially in the presence of our clients, has also had an affect in delivery of services. The inability to meaningfully consult with and interview clients before first appearances and after appointment continues to affect our advocacy for our clients. Additionally, the District Attorney decided to relocate state misdemeanors from Municipal Court to Criminal District Court, causing OPD staffing resources stress.

What Changes Have You Implemented in Your District Office in 2016 That Have Improved the Delivery of Public Defender Services?	During the middle of 2016, OPD was able to lift its hiring freeze. While this brought some relief, much of 2016 was marked by vacant staff positions and significant resource challenges. In order to streamline resources, OPD closed its conflict division and increased its conflict panel. OPD was able to apply for and receive outside funding for client advocates and social workers in its Client Services Division. OPD has also partnered with the City of New Orleans with the MacArthur Foundation Safety and Justice Project to increase bond advocacy. OPD has continued with its overall bond review project to increase bond advocacy and pre-trial release advocacy for low risk clients. OPD has also dramatically increased its alternatives to incarceration in Municipal Court. One highlight of OPD Municipal Court's efforts has been the Municipal Court in the Mission project to reduce attachments and assist homeless clients.

42nd JUDICIAL DISTRICT : DESOTO PARISH

Steven R. Thomas
District Defender
111 North Washington
Mansfield, LA 71052
318-872-6250

During Calendar Year 2016, the 42nd Judicial District Public Defenders Office handled 1,349 cases. Traditionally self-reliant, the 42nd PDO's local revenues have slowly increased since FY11, primarily from traffic tickets and special court costs.

By virtue of a Cooperative Endeavor Agreement with the 11th PDO following the creation of the 42nd, the fund balance of both districts are shared. With the exception of CY16, the shortfalls in the 11th have depleted gains in the 42nd.

Since the passage of legislation that increased special court costs by $10 (Act 578, 2012), aside from a few anomalies, the 42nd Judicial District public defender's office has generally failed to realize the 25% increase in local revenues that was expected to materialize as a result of Act 578.

In the 42nd Judicial District, public defense attorneys maintain caseloads almost three times the recommended caseload limits for each attorney.

CAPITAL REPRESENTATION

This PDO has capitally certified counsel on contract to handle the cases that arise in the district, however, the Board passed a Resolution in 2015 to prohibit districts in restriction of services from accepting new capital appointments. As a result, the responsibility for staffing capital cases in this district is transferred to the State, until such time as the district exits Restriction of Services.

“Equal justice under law is not merely a caption on the facade of the Supreme Court building, it is perhaps the most inspiring ideal of our society. It is one of the ends for which our entire legal system exists...it is fundamental that justice should be the same, in substance and availability, without regard to economic status.”

— Justice Lewis Powell, Jr., United States Supreme Court

Note: The entire Trial Court Performance Standards can be found in Chapter 7, Part XV of Title 22 of the Louisiana Administrative Code, also available online at: <http://doa.louisiana.gov/OSR/>

Part I Duties and Obligations of Defense Counsel

§701. Purpose

- A. The standards are intended to serve several purposes, first and foremost to encourage public defenders, assistant public defenders and appointed counsel to perform to a high standard of representation and to promote professionalism in the representation of indigent defendants.
- B. The standards are intended to alert defense counsel to courses of action that may be necessary, advisable, or appropriate, and thereby to assist attorneys in deciding upon the particular actions that must be taken in each case to ensure that the client receives the best representation possible. The standards are also intended to provide a measure by which the performance of individual attorneys and district public defender offices may be evaluated, and to assist in training and supervising attorneys.
- C. The language of these standards is general, implying flexibility of action which is appropriate to the situation. Use of judgment in deciding upon a particular course of action is reflected by the phrases “should consider” and “where appropriate.” In those instances where a particular action is absolutely essential to providing quality representation, the standards use the words “should” or “shall.” Even where the standards use the words “should” or “shall,” in certain situations the lawyers’ best informed professional judgment and discretion may indicate otherwise.
- D. These standards are not criteria for the judicial evaluation of alleged misconduct of defense counsel to determine the validity of a conviction. The standards may or may not be relevant to such a judicial determination, depending upon all of the circumstances of the individual case.

§703. Obligations of Defense Counsel

- A. The primary and most fundamental obligation of a criminal defense attorney is to provide zealous and effective representation for his or her clients at all stages of the criminal process. The defense attorney’s duty and responsibility is to promote and protect the best interests of the client. If personal matters make it impossible for the defense counsel to fulfill the duty of zealous representation, he or she has a duty to refrain from representing the client. Attorneys also have an obligation to uphold the ethical standards of the Louisiana Rules of Professional Conduct and to act in accordance with the Louisiana Rules of Court.

§705. Training and Experience of Defense Counsel

- A. In order to provide quality legal representation, counsel must be familiar with the substantive criminal law and the law of criminal procedure and its application in the state of Louisiana. Counsel has a continuing obligation to stay abreast of changes and developments in the law.

- B. Prior to agreeing to undertake representation in a criminal matter, counsel should have sufficient experience or training to provide effective representation.
- C. Attorneys who are being considered for appointment to represent individuals who are charged with capital offenses in which the state is seeking death must meet the special criteria as adopted by the Supreme Court of Louisiana.

§707. General Duties of Defense Counsel

- A. Before agreeing to act as counsel or accepting appointment by a court, counsel has an obligation to make sure that counsel has available sufficient time, resources, knowledge and experience to offer effective representation to a defendant in a particular matter. If it later appears that counsel is unable to offer effective representation in the case, counsel should move to withdraw.
- B. Counsel must be alert to all potential and actual conflicts of interest that would impair counsel's ability to represent a client. When appropriate, counsel may be obliged to seek an advisory opinion on any potential conflicts.
- C. Counsel has the obligation to keep the client informed of the progress of the case.
- D. If a conflict develops during the course of representation, counsel has a duty to notify the client and the court in accordance with the Louisiana Rules of Court and in accordance with the Louisiana Rules of Professional Conduct.
- E. When counsel's caseload is so large that counsel is unable to satisfactorily meet these performance standards, counsel shall inform the district defender for counsel's judicial district and, if applicable, the regional director, the court or courts before whom counsel's cases are pending. If the district defender determines that the caseloads for his entire office are so large that counsel is unable to satisfactorily meet these performance standards, the district defender shall inform the court or courts before whom cases are pending and the state public defender.

§709. Obligations of Counsel Regarding Pretrial Release

- A. Counsel or a representative of counsel have an obligation to meet with incarcerated defendants within 72 hours of appointment, and shall take other prompt action necessary to provide quality representation including:
  - 1. Counsel shall invoke the protections of appropriate constitutional provisions, federal and state laws, statutory provisions, and court rules on behalf of a client, and revoke any waivers of these protections purportedly given by the client, as soon as practicable via a notice of appearance or other pleading filed with the state and court.
  - 2. Where possible, counsel shall represent an incarcerated client at the La.C.Cr.P. Art. 230.1 First Appearance hearing (County of Riverside v. McLaughlin, 500 U.S. 44 (1991)) in order to contest probable cause for a client arrested without an arrest warrant, to seek bail on favorable terms (after taking into consideration the adverse impact, if any, such efforts may have upon exercising the client's right to a full pretrial release hearing at a later date), to invoke constitutional and statutory protections on behalf of the client, and otherwise advocate for the interests of the client.
- B. Counsel has an obligation to attempt to secure the pretrial release of the client.

Part II Investigation and Preparation

§711. Counsel's Initial Interview with Client

A. Preparing for the Initial Interview

1. Prior to conducting the initial interview the attorney should, where possible:
  - a. Be familiar with the elements of the offense(s) and the potential punishment(s), where the charges against the client are already known; and
  - b. Obtain copies of any relevant documents which are available, including copies of any charging documents, recommendations and reports made by bail agencies concerning pretrial release, and law enforcement reports that might be available.
2. In addition, where the client is incarcerated, the attorney should:
  - a. Be familiar with the legal criteria for determining pretrial release and the procedures that will be followed in setting those conditions;
  - b. Be familiar with the different types of pretrial release conditions the court may set and whether private or public agencies are available to act as a custodian for the client's release; and
  - c. Be familiar with any procedures available for reviewing the trial judge's setting of bail.

B. Conducting the Interview

1. The purpose of the initial interview is to acquire information from the client concerning the case, the client and pre-trial release, and also to provide the client with information concerning the case. Counsel should ensure at this and all successive interviews and proceedings that barriers to communication, such as differences in language or literacy, be overcome. In addition, counsel should obtain from the client all release forms necessary to obtain client's medical, psychological, education, military, prison and other records as may be pertinent.
2. Information that should be acquired from the client, includes, but is not limited to:
  - a. The facts surrounding the charges leading to the client's arrest, to the extent the client knows and is willing to discuss these facts;
  - b. The client's version of arrest, with or without warrant; whether client was searched and if anything was seized, with or without warrant or consent; whether client was interrogated and if so, was a statement given; client's physical and mental status at the time the statement was given; whether any exemplars were provided and whether any scientific tests were performed on client's body or body fluids;
  - c. The names and custodial status of all co-defendants and the name of counsel for co-defendants (if counsel has been appointed or retained);
  - d. The names and locating information of any witnesses to the crime and/or the arrest; regardless of whether these are witnesses for the prosecution or for the defense; the existence of any tangible evidence in the possession of the state (when appropriate, counsel should take steps to insure this evidence is preserved);
  - e. The client's ties to the community, including the length of time he or she has lived at the current and former addresses, any prior names or alias used, family relationships, immigration status (if applicable), employment record and history, and Social Security number;
  - f. The client's physical and mental health, educational, vocational and armed services history;
  - g. The client's immediate medical needs including the need for detoxification programs and/or substance abuse treatment;
  - h. The client's past criminal record, if any, including arrests and convictions for adult and juvenile offenses and prior record of court appearances or failure to appear in court; counsel should also determine whether the client has any pending charges or outstanding warrants from other jurisdictions or agencies and also whether he or she is on probation (including the nature of - the probation, such as “first offender”) or parole and the client’s past or present performance under supervision;

- i. The names of individuals or other sources that counsel can contact to verify the information provided by the client (counsel should obtain the permission of the client before contacting these individuals);
  - j. The ability of the client to meet any financial conditions of release (for clients who are incarcerated); and
  - k. Where appropriate, evidence of the client’s competence to stand trial and/or mental state at the time of the offense, including releases from the client for any records for treatment or testing for mental health or mental retardation.
3. Information to be provided to the client, includes, but is not limited to:
    - a. A general overview of the procedural progression of the case, where possible;
    - b. An explanation of the charges and the potential penalties;
    - c. An explanation of the attorney-client privilege and instructions not to talk to anyone about the facts of the case without first consulting with the attorney; and
    - d. The names of any other persons who may be contacting the client on behalf of counsel.
  4. For clients who are incarcerated:
    - a. An explanation of the procedures that will be followed in setting the conditions of pretrial release;
    - b. An explanation of the type of information that will be requested in any interview that may be conducted by a pretrial release agency and also an explanation that the client should not make statements concerning the offense; and
    - c. Warn the client of the dangers with regard to the search of client’s cell and personal belongings while in custody and the fact that telephone calls, mail, and visitations may be monitored by jail officials.
- C. Counsel must be alert to a potential plea based on client’s incompetency, insanity, mental illness or mental retardation. If counsel or the client raises a potential claim based on any of these conditions, counsel should consider seeking an independent psychological evaluation. Counsel should be familiar with the legal criteria for any plea or defense based on the defendant’s mental illness or mental retardation, and should become familiar with the procedures related to the evaluation and to subsequent proceedings.
1. Counsel should be prepared to raise the issue of incompetency during all phases of the proceedings, if counsel’s relationship with the client reveals that such a plea is appropriate.
  2. Where appropriate, counsel should advise the client of the potential consequences of the plea of incompetency, the defense of insanity, or a plea of guilty but mentally ill or guilty but mentally retarded. Prior to any proceeding, counsel should consider interviewing any professional who has evaluated the client, should be familiar with all aspects of the evaluation and should seek additional expert advice where appropriate.
- D. If special conditions of release have been imposed (e.g., random drug screening) or other orders restricting the client’s conduct have been entered (e.g., a no contact order), the client should be advised of the legal consequences of failure to comply with such conditions.

§713. Counsel’s Duty in Pretrial Release Proceedings

- A. Counsel should be prepared to present to the appropriate judicial officer a statement of the factual circumstances and the legal criteria supporting release and, where appropriate, to make a proposal concerning conditions of release.

- B. Where the client is not able to obtain release under the conditions set by the court, counsel should consider pursuing modification of the conditions of release under the procedures available.
- C. If the court sets conditions of release which require the posting of a monetary bond or the posting of real property as collateral for release, counsel should make sure the client understands the available options and the procedures that must be followed in posting such assets. Where appropriate, counsel should advise the client and others acting in his or her behalf how to properly post such assets.

§715. Counsel's Duties at Preliminary Hearing

- A. Where the client is entitled to a preliminary hearing, the attorney should take steps to see that the hearing is conducted in a timely fashion unless there are strategic reasons for not doing so.
- B. In preparing for the preliminary hearing, the attorney should become familiar with:
  - 1. The elements of each of the offenses alleged;
  - 2. The law of the jurisdiction for establishing probable cause;
  - 3. Factual information which is available concerning probable cause; and
  - 4. The subpoena process for obtaining compulsory attendance of witnesses at preliminary hearing and the necessary steps to be taken in order to obtain a proper recordation of the proceedings.

§717. Duty of Counsel to Conduct Investigation

- A. Counsel has a duty to conduct a prompt investigation of each case. Counsel should, regardless of the client's wish to admit guilt, insure that the charges and disposition are factually and legally correct and the client is aware of potential defenses to the charges.
- B. Sources of investigative information may include the following.
  - 1. Arrest warrant, accusation and/or indictment documents, and copies of all charging documents in the case should be obtained and examined to determine the specific charges that have been brought against the accused. The relevant statutes and precedents should be examined to identify:
    - a. The elements of the offense(s) with which the accused is charged;
    - b. The defenses, ordinary and affirmative, that may be available;
    - c. Any lesser included offenses that may be available; and
    - d. Any defects in the charging documents, constitutional or otherwise, such as statute of limitations or double jeopardy.
  - 2. Information from the Defendant. If not previously conducted, an in-depth interview of the client should be conducted as soon as possible and appropriate after appointment of counsel. The interview with the client should be used to obtain information as described above under the performance standards applicable to the initial interview of the client. Information relevant to sentencing should also be obtained from the client, when appropriate.
  - 3. Interviewing Witnesses. Counsel should consider the necessity to interview the potential witnesses, including any complaining witnesses and others adverse to the accused, as well as witnesses favorable to the accused. Interviews of witnesses adverse to the accused should be conducted in a manner that permits counsel to effectively impeach the witness with statements made during the interview, either by having an investigator present or, if that is not possible, by sending the investigator to conduct the interview.
  - 4. The Police and Prosecution Reports and Documents. Counsel should make efforts to secure information in the possession of the prosecution or law enforcement authorities, including police reports. Where necessary, counsel should pursue such efforts through formal and informal discovery unless sound tactical reasons exist for not doing so. Counsel should obtain NCIC or other states criminal history records for the client and for the prosecution witnesses.

5. Physical Evidence. Where appropriate, counsel should make a prompt request to the police or investigative agency for any physical evidence or expert reports relevant to the offense or sentencing. Counsel should examine any such physical evidence.
6. The Scene of the Incident. Where appropriate, counsel should attempt to view the scene of the alleged offense as soon as possible after counsel is appointed. This should be done under circumstances as similar as possible to those existing at the time of the alleged incident (e.g., weather, time of day, and lighting conditions).
7. Securing the Assistance of Experts. Counsel should secure the assistance of experts where it is necessary or appropriate to:
  - a. The preparation of the defense;
  - b. Adequate understanding of the prosecution's case; or
  - c. Rebut the prosecution's case.

§719. Formal and Informal Discovery

- A. Counsel has a duty to pursue as soon as practicable, discovery procedures provided by the rules of the jurisdiction and to pursue such informal discovery methods as may be available to supplement the factual investigation of the case. In considering discovery requests, counsel should take into account that such requests may trigger reciprocal discovery obligations.
- B. Counsel should consider seeking discovery, at a minimum, of the following items:
  1. Potential exculpatory information;
  2. Potential mitigating information;
  3. The names and addresses of all prosecution witnesses, their prior statements, and criminal record, if any;
  4. All oral and/or written statements by the accused, and the details of the circumstances under which the statements were made;
  5. The prior criminal record of the accused and any evidence of other misconduct that the government may intend to use against the accused;
  6. All books, papers, documents, photographs, tangible objects, buildings or places, or copies, descriptions, or other representations, or portions thereof, relevant to the case;
  7. All results or reports of relevant physical or mental examinations, and of scientific tests or experiments, or copies thereof;
  8. Statements of co-defendants;
  9. All investigative reports by all law enforcement and other agencies involved in the case; and
  10. All records of evidence collected and retained by law enforcement.

§721. Development of a Theory of the Case

- A. During investigation and trial preparation, counsel should develop and continually reassess a theory of the case. Counsel, during the investigatory stages of the case preparation must understand and develop strategies for advancing the appropriate defenses on behalf of the client.

Part III Pretrial Motions

§723. The Duty to File Pretrial Motions

- A. Counsel should consider filing an appropriate motion whenever there exists a good-faith reason to believe that the defendant is entitled to relief which the court has discretion to grant.
- B. The decision to file pretrial motions should be made after considering the applicable law in light of the known circumstances of each case.
- C. Among the issues that counsel should consider addressing in a pretrial motion are:
  1. The pretrial custody of the accused;
  2. The constitutionality of the implicated statute or statutes;
  3. The potential defects in the charging process;
  4. The sufficiency of the charging document;
  5. The propriety and prejudice of any joinder of charges or defendants in the charging document;
  6. The discovery obligations of the prosecution and the reciprocal discovery obligations of the defense;
  7. The suppression of evidence gathered as a result of violations of the Fourth, Fifth or Sixth Amendments to the United States Constitution, or corresponding state constitutional provisions, including:
    - a. The fruits of illegal searches or seizures;
    - b. Involuntary statements or confessions;
    - c. Statements or confessions obtained in violation of the accused's right to counsel or privilege against self-incrimination;
    - d. Unreliable identification evidence which would give rise to a substantial likelihood of irreparable misidentification;
  8. Suppression of evidence gathered in violation of any right, duty or privilege arising out of state or local law;
  9. Access to resources which, or experts, who may be denied to an accused because of his or her indigence;
  10. The defendant's right to a speedy trial;
  11. The defendant's right to a continuance in order to adequately prepare his or her case;
  12. Matters of trial evidence which may be appropriately litigated by means of a pretrial motion in limine;
  13. Matters of trial or courtroom procedure.
- D. Counsel should withdraw or decide not to file a motion only after careful consideration, and only after determining whether the filing of a motion may be necessary to protect the defendant's rights, including later claims of waiver or procedural default. In making this decision, counsel should remember that a motion has many objectives in addition to the ultimate relief requested by the motion. Counsel thus should consider whether:
  1. The time deadline for filing pretrial motions warrants filing a motion to preserve the client's rights, pending the results of further investigation;
  2. Changes in the governing law might occur after the filing deadline which could enhance the likelihood that relief ought to be granted;
  3. Later changes in the strategic and tactical posture of the defense case may occur which affect the significance of potential pretrial motions.

§725. Preparing, Filing, and Arguing Pretrial Motions

- A. Motions should be filed in a timely manner, should comport with the formal requirements of the court rules and should succinctly inform the court of the authority relied upon. In filing a pretrial motion, counsel should be aware of the effect it might have upon the defendant's speedy trial rights.
- B. When a hearing on a motion requires the taking of evidence, counsel's preparation for the evidentiary hearing should include:
  - 1. Investigation, discovery and research relevant to the claim advanced;
  - 2. The subpoenaing of all helpful evidence and the subpoenaing and preparation of all helpful witnesses;
  - 3. Full understanding of the burdens of proof, evidentiary principles and trial court procedures applying to the hearing, including the benefits and potential consequences of having the client testify; and
  - 4. Familiarity with all applicable procedures for obtaining evidentiary hearings prior to trial.

§727. Continuing Duty to File Pretrial Motions

- A. Counsel should be prepared to raise during the subsequent proceedings any issue which is appropriately raised pretrial, but could not have been so raised because the facts supporting the motion were unknown or not reasonably available. Further, counsel should be prepared to renew a pretrial motion if new supporting information is disclosed in later proceedings.

Part IV Disposition without Trial*§729. Performance Standard 6.A Duty of Counsel in Plea Negotiation Process

- A. Counsel should explore with the client the possibility and desirability of reaching a negotiated disposition of the charges rather than proceeding to a trial and in doing so should fully explain the rights that would be waived by a decision to enter a plea and not to proceed to trial.
- B. Counsel should keep the client fully informed of any continued plea discussion and negotiations and promptly convey to the accused any offers made by the prosecution for a negotiated settlement.
- C. Counsel shall not accept any plea agreement without the client's express authorization.
- D. The existence of ongoing tentative plea negotiations with the prosecution should not prevent counsel from taking steps necessary to preserve a defense nor should the existence of ongoing plea negotiations prevent or delay counsel's investigation into the facts of the case and preparation of the case for further proceedings, including trial.

§731. The Process of Plea Negotiations

- A. In order to develop an overall negotiation plan, counsel should be aware of, and make sure the client is aware of:
  - 1. The maximum term of imprisonment and fine or restitution that may be ordered, and any mandatory punishment or sentencing guideline system; and counsel should make the client aware that a guilty plea may have adverse impact upon;
  - 2. The possibility of forfeiture of assets;
  - 3. Other consequences of conviction including but not limited to deportation, the forfeiture of professional licensure, the ineligibility for various government programs including student loans, the prohibition from carrying a firearm, the suspension of a motor vehicle operator's license, the loss of the right to vote, the loss of the right to hold public office; and the registration and notification requirements for sexual offenders;

4. Any possible and likely sentence enhancements or parole consequences.
- B. In developing a negotiation strategy, counsel should be completely familiar with:
  1. Concessions that the client might offer the prosecution as part of a negotiated settlement, including, but not limited to:
    - a. Not to proceed to trial on merits of the charges;
    - b. To decline from asserting or litigating any particular pretrial motions;
    - c. An agreement to fulfill specified restitution conditions and/or participation in community work or service programs, or in rehabilitation or other programs; and
    - d. Providing the prosecution with assistance in prosecuting or investigating the present case or other alleged criminal activity;
  2. Benefits the client might obtain from a negotiated settlement, including, but not limited to an agreement:
    - a. That the prosecution will not oppose the client's release on bail pending sentencing or appeal;
    - b. To dismiss or reduce one or more of the charged offenses either immediately, or upon completion of a deferred prosecution agreement;
    - c. That the defendant will not be subject to further investigation or prosecution for uncharged alleged criminal conduct;
    - d. That the defendant will receive, with the agreement of the court, a specified sentence or sanction or a sentence or sanction within a specified range;
    - e. That the prosecution will take, or refrain from taking, at the time of sentencing and/or in communications with the preparer of the official pre-sentence report, a specified position with respect to the sanction to be imposed on the client by the court;
    - f. That the prosecution will not present, at the time of sentencing and/or in communications with the preparer of the official pre-sentence report, certain information; and
    - g. That the defendant will receive, or the prosecution will recommend, specific benefits concerning the accused's place and/or manner of confinement and/or release on parole and he information concerning the accused's offense and alleged behavior that may be considered in determining the accused's date of release from incarceration;
  3. The position of any alleged victim with respect to conviction and sentencing. In this regard, counsel should:
    - a. Consider whether interviewing the alleged victim or victims is appropriate and if so, who is the best person to do so and under what circumstances;
    - b. Consider to what extent the alleged victim or victims might be involved in the plea negotiations;
    - c. Be familiar with any rights afforded the alleged victim or victims under the Victim's Rights Act or other applicable law; and
    - d. Be familiar with the practice of the prosecutor and/or victim-witness advocate working with the prosecutor and to what extent, if any, they defer to the wishes of the alleged victim.
- C. In conducting plea negotiations, counsel should be familiar with:
  1. The various types of pleas that may be agreed to, including but not limited to a plea of guilty, not guilty by reason of insanity, a plea of nolo contendere, a conditional plea of guilty, (State v. Crosby, 338 So.2d 584 (La. 1976)), and a plea in which the defendant is not required to personally acknowledge his or her guilt (North Carolina v. Alford plea);
  2. The advantages and disadvantages of each available plea according to the circumstances of the case; and

3. Whether the plea agreement is binding on the court and prison and parole authorities.
- D. In conducting plea negotiations, counsel should attempt to become familiar with the practices and policies of the particular jurisdiction, judge and prosecuting authority, and probation department which may affect the content and likely results of negotiated plea bargains.

§733. The Decision to Enter a Plea of Guilty

- A. Counsel should inform the client of any tentative negotiated agreement reached with the prosecution, and explain to the client the full content of the agreement, and the advantages and disadvantages of the potential consequences of the agreement.
- B. The decision to enter a plea of guilty rests solely with the client, and counsel should not attempt to unduly influence that decision.
- C. If the client is a juvenile, consideration should be given to the request that a guardian be appointed to advise the juvenile if an adult family member is not available to act in a surrogate role.
- D. A negotiated plea should be committed to writing whenever possible.

§735. Entering the Negotiated Plea before the Court

- A. Prior to the entry of the plea, counsel should:
  1. Make certain that the client understands the rights he or she will waive by entering the plea and that the client's decision to waive those rights is knowing, voluntary and intelligent;
  2. Make certain that the client receives a full explanation of the conditions and limits of the plea agreement and the maximum punishment, sanctions and collateral consequences the client will be exposed to by entering a plea;
  3. Explain to the client the nature of the plea hearing and prepare the client for the role he or she will play in the hearing, including answering questions of the judge and providing a statement concerning the offense; and
  4. Make certain that if the plea is a non-negotiated plea, the client is informed that once the plea has been accepted by the court, it may not be withdrawn after the sentence has been pronounced by the court.
- B. When entering the plea, counsel should make sure that the full content and conditions of the plea agreement are placed on the record before the court.
- C. After entry of the plea, counsel should be prepared to address the issue of release pending sentencing. Where the client has been released pretrial, counsel should be prepared to argue and persuade the court that the client's continued release is warranted and appropriate. Where the client is in custody prior to the entry of the plea, counsel should, where practicable, advocate for and present to the court all reasons warranting the client's release on bail pending sentencing.

Part V Trial

§737. Counsel's Duty of Trial Preparation

- A. The decision to proceed to trial with or without a jury rests solely with the client. Counsel should discuss the relevant strategic considerations of this decision with the client.
- B. Where appropriate, counsel should have the following materials available at the time of trial:
  1. Copies of all relevant documents filed in the case;

2. Relevant documents prepared by investigators;
  3. Voir dire questions;
  4. Outline or draft of opening statement;
  5. Cross-examination plans for all possible prosecution witnesses;
  6. Direct examination plans for all prospective defense witnesses;
  7. Copies of defense subpoenas;
  8. Prior statements of all prosecution witnesses (e.g., transcripts, police reports) and counsel should have prepared transcripts of any audio or video taped witness statements;
  9. Prior statements of all defense witnesses;
  10. Reports from defense experts;
  11. A list of all defense exhibits, and the witnesses through whom they will be introduced;
  12. Originals and copies of all documentary exhibits;
  13. Proposed jury instructions with supporting case citations;
  14. Where appropriate, consider and list the evidence necessary to support the defense requests for jury instructions;
  15. Copies of all relevant statutes and cases; and
  16. Outline or draft of closing argument.
- C. Counsel should be fully informed as to the rules of evidence, court rules, and the law relating to all stages of the trial process, and should be familiar with legal and evidentiary issues that can reasonably be anticipated to arise in the trial.
  - D. Counsel should decide if it is beneficial to secure an advance ruling on issues likely to arise at trial (e.g., use of prior convictions to impeach the defendant) and, where appropriate, counsel should prepare motions and memoranda for such advance rulings.
  - E. Throughout the trial process counsel should endeavor to establish a proper record for appellate review. Counsel must be familiar with the substantive and procedural law regarding the preservation of legal error for appellate review, and should insure that a sufficient record is made to preserve appropriate and potentially meritorious legal issues for such appellate review unless there are strategic reasons for not doing so.
  - F. Where appropriate, counsel should advise the client as to suitable courtroom dress and demeanor. If the client is incarcerated, counsel should be alert to the possible prejudicial effects of the client appearing before the jury in jail or other inappropriate clothing. If necessary, counsel should file pre-trial motions to insure that the client has appropriate clothing and the court personnel follow appropriate procedures so as not to reveal to jurors that the defendant is incarcerated.
  - G. Counsel should plan with the client the most convenient system for conferring throughout the trial. Where necessary, counsel should seek a court order to have the client available for conferences.
  - H. Throughout preparation and trial, counsel should consider the potential effects that particular actions may have upon sentencing if there is a finding of guilt.
  - I. Counsel shall take necessary steps to insure full official recordation of all aspects of the court proceeding.

§739. Jury Selection

- A. Preparing for Voir Dire
  1. Counsel should be familiar with the procedures by which a jury venire is selected in the particular jurisdiction and should be alert to any potential legal challenges to the composition or selection of the venire.
  2. Counsel should be familiar with the local practices and the individual trial judge's procedures for selecting a jury from a panel of the venire, and should be alert to any potential legal challenges to these procedures.

3. Prior to jury selection, counsel should seek to obtain a prospective juror list.
  4. Where appropriate, counsel should develop voir dire questions in advance of trial. Counsel should tailor voir dire questions to the specific case. Among the purposes voir dire questions should be designed to serve are the following:
    - a. To elicit information about the attitudes of individual jurors, which will inform counsel and defendant about peremptory strikes and challenges for cause;
    - b. To convey to the panel certain legal principles which are critical to the defense case;
    - c. To preview the case for the jurors so as to lessen the impact of damaging information which is likely to come to their attention during the trial;
    - d. To present the client and the defense case in a favorable light, without prematurely disclosing information about the defense case to the prosecutor; and
    - e. To establish a relationship with the jury.
  5. Counsel should be familiar with the law concerning mandatory and discretionary voir dire inquiries so as to be able to defend any request to ask particular questions of prospective jurors.
  6. Counsel should be familiar with the law concerning challenges for cause and peremptory strikes. Counsel should also be aware of the law concerning whether peremptory challenges need to be exhausted in order to preserve for appeal any challenges for cause which have been denied.
  7. Where appropriate, counsel should consider whether to seek expert assistance in the jury selection process.
- B. Examination of the Prospective Jurors
1. Counsel should personally voir dire the panel.
  2. Counsel should take all steps necessary to protect the voir dire record for appeal, including, where appropriate, filing a copy of the proposed voir dire questions or reading proposed questions into the record.
  3. If the voir dire questions may elicit sensitive answers, counsel should consider requesting that questioning be conducted outside the presence of the other jurors and counsel should consider requesting that the court, rather than counsel, conduct the voir dire as to those sensitive questions.
  4. In a group voir dire, counsel should avoid asking questions which may elicit responses which are likely to prejudice other prospective jurors.
- C. Challenging the Jurors for Cause
1. Counsel should consider challenging for cause all persons about whom a legitimate argument can be made for actual prejudice or bias relevant to the case when it is likely to benefit the client.

§741. Opening Statement

- A. Prior to delivering an opening statement, counsel should ask for sequestration of witnesses, unless a strategic reason exists for not doing so.
- B. Counsel should be familiar with the law of the jurisdiction and the individual trial judge's rules regarding the permissible content of an opening statement.
- C. Counsel should consider the strategic advantages and disadvantages of disclosure of particular information during opening statement and of deferring the opening statement until the beginning of the defense case.
- D. Counsel's objective in making an opening statement may include the following:
  1. To provide an overview of the defense case;
  2. To identify the weaknesses of the prosecution's case;

3. To emphasize the prosecution's burden of proof;
  4. To summarize the testimony of witnesses, and the role of each in relationship to the entire case;
  5. To describe the exhibits which will be introduced and the role of each in relationship to the entire case;
  6. To clarify the jurors' responsibilities;
  7. To state the ultimate inferences which counsel wishes the jury to draw; and
  8. To establish counsel's credibility with the jury.
- E. Counsel should consider incorporating the promises of proof the prosecutor makes to the jury during opening statement in the defense summation.
- F. Whenever the prosecutor oversteps the bounds of proper opening statement, counsel should consider objecting, requesting a mistrial, or seeking cautionary instructions, unless tactical considerations suggest otherwise. Such tactical considerations may include, but are not limited to:
1. The significance of the prosecutor's error;
  2. The possibility that an objection might enhance the significance of the information in the jury's mind;
  3. Whether there are any rules made by the judge against objecting during the other attorney's opening argument.

§743. Preparation for Challenging the Prosecution's Case

- A. Counsel should attempt to anticipate weaknesses in the prosecution's proof and consider researching and preparing corresponding motions for judgment of acquittal.
- B. Counsel should consider the advantages and disadvantages of entering into stipulations concerning the prosecution's case.
- C. In preparing for cross-examination, counsel should be familiar with the applicable law and procedures concerning cross-examinations and impeachment of witnesses. In order to develop material for impeachment or to discover documents subject to disclosure, counsel should be prepared to question witnesses as to the existence of prior statements which they may have made or adopted.
- D. In preparing for cross-examination, counsel should:
1. Consider the need to integrate cross-examination, the theory of the defense and closing argument;
  2. Consider whether cross-examination of each individual witness is likely to generate helpful information;
  3. Anticipate those witnesses the prosecutor might call in its case-in-chief or in rebuttal;
  4. Consider a cross-examination plan for each of the anticipated witnesses;
  5. Be alert to inconsistencies in a witness' testimony;
  6. Be alert to possible variations in witnesses' testimony;
  7. Review all prior statements of the witnesses and any prior relevant testimony of the prospective witnesses;
  8. Have prepared a transcript of all audio or video tape recorded statements made by the witness;
  9. Where appropriate, review relevant statutes and local police policy and procedure manuals, disciplinary records and department regulations for possible use in cross-examining police witnesses;
  10. Be alert to issues relating to witness credibility, including bias and motive for testifying; and
  11. Have prepared, for introduction into evidence, all documents which counsel intends to use during the cross-examination, including certified copies of records such as prior convictions of the witness or prior sworn testimony of the witness.
- E. Counsel should consider conducting a voir dire examination of potential prosecution witnesses who may not be competent to give particular testimony, including expert witnesses whom the prosecutor may call. Counsel should be aware of the applicable law of the jurisdiction concerning competency of witnesses in general and admission of expert testimony in particular in order to be able to raise appropriate objections.

- F. Before beginning cross-examination, counsel should ascertain whether the prosecutor has provided copies of all prior statements of the witnesses as required by applicable law. If counsel does not receive prior statements of prosecution witnesses until they have completed direct examination, counsel should request adequate time to review these documents before commencing cross-examination.
- G. Where appropriate, at the close of the prosecution's case and out of the presence of the jury, counsel should move for a judgment of acquittal on each count charged. Counsel should request, when necessary, that the court immediately rule on the motion, in order that counsel may make an informed decision about whether to present a defense case.

§745. Presenting the Defendant's Case

- A. Counsel should develop, in consultation with the client, an overall defense strategy. In deciding on defense strategy, counsel should consider whether the client's interests are best served by not putting on a defense case, and instead relying on the prosecution's failure to meet its constitutional burden of proving each element beyond a reasonable doubt. Counsel should also consider the tactical advantage of having final closing argument when making the decision whether to present evidence other than the defendant's testimony.
- B. Counsel should discuss with the client all of the considerations relevant to the client's decision to testify. Counsel should also be familiar with his or her ethical responsibilities that may be applicable if the client insists on testifying untruthfully.
- C. Counsel should be aware of the elements of any affirmative defense and know whether, under the applicable law of the jurisdiction, the client bears a burden of persuasion or a burden of production.
- D. In preparing for presentation of a defense case, counsel should, where appropriate:
  - 1. Develop a plan for direct examination of each potential defense witness;
  - 2. Determine the implications that the order of witnesses may have on the defense case;
  - 3. Determine what facts necessary for the defense case can be elicited through the cross-examination of the prosecution's witnesses;
  - 4. Consider the possible use of character witnesses;
  - 5. Consider the need for expert witnesses and what evidence must be submitted to lay the foundation for the expert's testimony;
  - 6. Review all documentary evidence that must be presented; and
  - 7. Review all tangible evidence that must be presented.
- E. In developing and presenting the defense case, counsel should consider the implications it may have for a rebuttal by the prosecutor.
- F. Counsel should prepare all witnesses for direct and possible cross-examination. Where appropriate, counsel should also advise witnesses of suitable courtroom dress and demeanor.
- G. Counsel should conduct redirect examination as appropriate.
- H. At the close of the defense case, counsel should renew the motion for a directed verdict of acquittal on each charged count.

§747. Preparation of the Closing Argument

- A. Counsel should be familiar with the substantive limits on both prosecution and defense summation.

- B. Counsel should be familiar with the court rules, applicable statutes and law, and the individual judge's practice concerning time limits and objections during closing argument, and provisions for rebuttal argument by the prosecution.
- C. In developing closing argument, counsel should review the proceedings to determine what aspects can be used in support of defense summation and, where appropriate, should consider:
  - 1. Highlighting weaknesses in the prosecution's case;
  - 2. Describing favorable inferences to be drawn from the evidence;
  - 3. Incorporating into the argument:
    - a. Helpful testimony from direct and cross-examinations;
    - b. Verbatim instructions drawn from the jury charge; and
    - c. Responses to anticipated prosecution arguments;
  - 4. And the effects of the defense argument on the prosecutor's rebuttal argument.
- D. Whenever the prosecutor exceeds the scope of permissible argument, counsel should consider objecting, requesting mistrial, or seeking cautionary instructions unless tactical considerations suggest otherwise. Such tactical considerations may include, but are not limited to:
  - 1. Whether counsel believes that the case will result in a favorable verdict for the client;
  - 2. The need to preserve the objection for appellate review; or
  - 3. The possibility that an objection might enhance the significance of the information in the jury's mind.

§749. Jury Instructions

- A. Counsel should be familiar with the Louisiana Rules of Court and the individual judge's practices concerning ruling on proposed instructions, charging the jury, use of standard charges and preserving objections to the instructions.
- B. Counsel should always submit proposed jury instructions in writing.
- C. Where appropriate, counsel should submit modifications of the standard jury instructions in light of the particular circumstances of the case, including the desirability of seeking a verdict on a lesser included offense. Where possible, counsel should provide citations to case law in support of the proposed instructions.
- D. Where appropriate, counsel should object to and argue against improper instructions proposed by the prosecution.
- E. If the court refuses to adopt instructions requested by counsel, or gives instructions over counsel's objection, counsel should take all steps necessary to preserve the record, including, where appropriate, filing a written copy of proposed instructions.
- F. During delivery of the charge, counsel should be alert to any deviations from the judge's planned instructions, object to deviations unfavorable to the client, and, if necessary request additional or curative instructions.
- G. If the court proposes giving supplemental instructions to the jury, either upon request of the jurors or upon their failure to reach a verdict, counsel should request that the judge state the proposed charge to counsel before it is delivered to the jury. Counsel should renew or make new objections to any additional instructions given to the jurors after the jurors have begun their deliberations.
- H. Counsel should reserve the right to make exceptions to the jury instructions above and beyond any specific objections that were made during the trial.

Part VI Sentencing

§751. Obligations of Counsel at Sentencing Hearing

  - 3. To ensure all reasonably available mitigating and favorable information, which is likely to benefit the client, is presented to the court;
  - 4. To develop a plan which seeks to achieve the least restrictive and burdensome sentencing alternative that is most acceptable to the client, and which can reasonably be obtained based on the facts and circumstances of the offense, the defendant's background, the applicable sentencing provisions, and other information pertinent to the sentencing decision;
  - 5. To ensure all information presented to the court which may harm the client and which is not shown to be accurate and truthful or is otherwise improper is stricken from the text of the pre-sentence investigation report before distribution of the report; and
  - 6. To consider the need for and availability of sentencing specialists, and to seek the assistance of such specialists whenever possible and warranted.

Client-Lawyer Relationship

Rule 1.1. Competence

- (a) A lawyer shall provide competent representation to a client. Competent representation requires the legal knowledge, skill, thoroughness and preparation reasonably necessary for the representation.
- (b) A lawyer is required to comply with the minimum requirements of continuing legal education as prescribed by Louisiana Supreme Court rule.
- (c) A lawyer is required to comply with all of the requirements of the Supreme Court's rules regarding annual registration, including payment of Bar dues, payment of the disciplinary assessment, timely notification of changes of address, and proper disclosure of trust account information or any changes therein.

Rule 1.2. Scope of Representation and Allocation of Authority Between Client and Lawyer

- (a) Subject to the provisions of Rule 1.16 and to paragraphs (c) and (d) of this Rule, a lawyer shall abide by a client's decisions concerning the objectives of representation, and, as required by Rule 1.4, shall consult with the client as to the means by which they are to be pursued. A lawyer may take such action on behalf of the client as is impliedly authorized to carry out the representation. A lawyer shall abide by a client's decision whether to settle a matter. In a criminal case, the lawyer shall abide by the client's decision, after consultation with the lawyer, as to a plea to be entered, whether to waive jury trial and whether the client will testify.
- (b) A lawyer's representation of a client, including representation by appointment, does not constitute an endorsement of the client's political, religious, economic, social or moral views or activities.
- (c) A lawyer may limit the scope of the representation if the limitation is reasonable under the circumstances and the client gives informed consent.
- (d) A lawyer shall not counsel a client to engage, or assist a client, in conduct that the lawyer knows is criminal or fraudulent, but a lawyer may discuss the legal consequences of any proposed course of conduct with a client and may counsel or assist a client to make a good faith effort to determine the validity, scope, meaning or application of the law.

Rule 1.3. Diligence

A lawyer shall act with reasonable diligence and promptness in representing a client.

Rule 1.4. Communication

- (a) A lawyer shall:

- (1) promptly inform the client of any decision or circumstance with respect to which the client's informed consent, as defined in Rule 1.0(e), is required by these Rules;
  - (2) reasonably consult with the client about the means by which the client's objectives are to be accomplished;
  - (3) keep the client reasonably informed about the status of the matter;
  - (4) promptly comply with reasonable requests for information; and
  - (5) consult with the client about any relevant limitation on the lawyer's conduct when the lawyer knows that the client expects assistance not permitted by the Rules of Professional Conduct or other law.
- (b) The lawyer shall give the client sufficient information to participate intelligently in decisions concerning the objectives of the representation and the means by which they are to be pursued.
- (c) A lawyer who provides any form of financial assistance to a client during the course of a representation shall, prior to providing such financial assistance, inform the client in writing of the terms and conditions under which such financial assistance is made, including but not limited to, repayment obligations, the imposition and rate of interest or other charges, and the scope and limitations imposed upon lawyers providing financial assistance as set forth in Rule 1.8(e).

Rule 1.5. Fees

- (a) A lawyer shall not make an agreement for, charge, or collect an unreasonable fee or an unreasonable amount for expenses. The factors to be considered in determining the reasonableness of a fee include the following:
- (1) the time and labor required, the novelty and difficulty of the questions involved, and the skill requisite to perform the legal service properly;
  - (2) the likelihood, if apparent to the client, that the acceptance of the particular employment will preclude other employment by the lawyer;
  - (3) the fee customarily charged in the locality for similar legal services;
  - (4) the amount involved and the results obtained;
  - (5) the time limitations imposed by the client or by the circumstances;
  - (6) the nature and length of the professional relationship with the client;

- (7) the experience, reputation, and ability of the lawyer or lawyers performing the services; and
  - (8) whether the fee is fixed or contingent.
- (b) The scope of the representation and the basis or rate of the fee and expenses for which the client will be responsible shall be communicated to the client, preferably in writing, before or within a reasonable time after commencing the representation, except when the lawyer will charge a regularly represented client on the same basis or rate. Any changes in the basis or rate of the fee or expenses shall also be communicated to the client.
- (c) A fee may be contingent on the outcome of the matter for which the service is rendered, except in a matter in which a contingent fee is prohibited by Paragraph (d) or other law. A contingent fee agreement shall be in a writing signed by the client. A copy or duplicate original of the executed agreement shall be given to the client at the time of execution of the agreement. The contingency fee agreement shall state the method by which the fee is to be determined, including the percentage or percentages that shall accrue to the lawyer in the event of settlement, trial or appeal; the litigation and other expenses that are to be deducted from the recovery; and whether such expenses are to be deducted before or after the contingent fee is calculated. The agreement must clearly notify the client of any expenses for which the client will be liable whether or not the client is the prevailing party. Upon conclusion of a contingent fee matter, the lawyer shall provide the client with a written statement stating the outcome of the matter and, if there is a recovery, showing the remittance to the client and the method of its determination.
- (d) A lawyer shall not enter into an arrangement for, charge, or collect:
  - (1) any fee in a domestic relations matter, the payment or amount of which is contingent upon the securing of a divorce or upon the amount of alimony or support, or property settlement in lieu thereof; or
  - (2) a contingent fee for representing a defendant in a criminal case.
- (e) A division of fee between lawyers who are not in the same firm may be made only if:
  - (1) the client agrees in writing to the representation by all of the lawyers involved, and is advised in writing as to the share of the fee that each lawyer will receive;
  - (2) the total fee is reasonable; and
  - (3) each lawyer renders meaningful legal services for the client in the matter.
- (f) Payment of fees in advance of services shall be subject to the following rules:

- (1) When the client pays the lawyer a fee to retain the lawyer's general availability to the client and the fee is not related to a particular representation, the funds become the property of the lawyer when paid and may be placed in the lawyer's operating account.
- (2) When the client pays the lawyer all or part of a fixed fee or of a minimum fee for particular representation with services to be rendered in the future, the funds become the property of the lawyer when paid, subject to the provisions of Rule 1.5(f)(5). Such funds need not be placed in the lawyer's trust account, but may be placed in the lawyer's operating account.
- (3) When the client pays the lawyer an advance deposit against fees which are to accrue in the future on an hourly or other agreed basis, the funds remain the property of the client and must be placed in the lawyer's trust account. The lawyer may transfer these funds as fees are earned from the trust account to the operating account, without further authorization from the client for each transfer, but must render a periodic accounting for these funds as is reasonable under the circumstances.
- (4) When the client pays the lawyer an advance deposit to be used for costs and expenses, the funds remain the property of the client and must be placed in the lawyer's trust account. The lawyer may expend these funds as costs and expenses accrue, without further authorization from the client for each expenditure, but must render a periodic accounting for these funds as is reasonable under the circumstances.
- (5) When the client pays the lawyer a fixed fee, a minimum fee or a fee drawn from an advanced deposit, and a fee dispute arises between the lawyer and the client, either during the course of the representation or at the termination of the representation, the lawyer shall immediately refund to the client the unearned portion of such fee, if any. If the lawyer and the client disagree on the unearned portion of such fee, the lawyer shall immediately refund to the client the amount, if any, that they agree has not been earned, and the lawyer shall deposit into a trust account an amount representing the portion reasonably in dispute. The lawyer shall hold such disputed funds in trust until the dispute is resolved, but the lawyer shall not do so to coerce the client into accepting the lawyer's contentions. As to any fee dispute, the lawyer should suggest a means for prompt resolution such as mediation or arbitration, including arbitration with the Louisiana State Bar Association Fee Dispute Program.

Rule 1.6. Confidentiality of Information

- (a) A lawyer shall not reveal information relating to the representation of a client unless the client gives informed consent, the disclosure is impliedly authorized in order to carry out the representation or the disclosure is permitted by paragraph (b).

- (b) A lawyer may reveal information relating to the representation of a client to the extent the lawyer reasonably believes necessary:
  - (1) to prevent reasonably certain death or substantial bodily harm;
  - (2) to prevent the client from committing a crime or fraud that is reasonably certain to result in substantial injury to the financial interests or property of another and in furtherance of which the client has used or is using the lawyer's services;
  - (3) to prevent, mitigate or rectify substantial injury to the financial interests or property of another that is reasonably certain to result or has resulted from the client's commission of a crime or fraud in furtherance of which the client has used the lawyer's services.
  - (4) to secure legal advice about the lawyer's compliance with these Rules;
  - (5) to establish a claim or defense on behalf of the lawyer in a controversy between the lawyer and the client, to establish a defense to a criminal charge or civil claim against the lawyer based upon conduct in which the client was involved, or to respond to allegations in any proceeding concerning the lawyer's representation of the client;
  - (6) to comply with other law or a court order; or
  - (7) to detect and resolve conflicts of interests between lawyers in different firms, but only if the revealed information would not compromise the attorney-client privilege or otherwise prejudice the client.
- (c) A lawyer shall make reasonable efforts to prevent the inadvertent or unauthorized disclosure of, or unauthorized access to, information relating to the representation of a client.

Rule 1.7. Conflict of Interest: Current Clients

- (a) Except as provided in paragraph (b), a lawyer shall not represent a client if the representation involves a concurrent conflict of interest. A concurrent conflict of interest exists if:
  - (1) the representation of one client will be directly adverse to another client; or
  - (2) there is a significant risk that the representation of one or more clients will be materially limited by the lawyer's responsibilities to another client, a former client or a third person or by a personal interest of the lawyer.
- (b) Notwithstanding the existence of a concurrent conflict of interest under paragraph (a), a lawyer may represent a client if:

- (1) the lawyer reasonably believes that the lawyer will be able to provide competent and diligent representation to each affected client;
- (2) the representation is not prohibited by law;
- (3) the representation does not involve the assertion of a claim by one client against another client represented by the lawyer in the same litigation or other proceeding before a tribunal; and
- (4) each affected client gives informed consent, confirmed in writing.

Rule 1.8. Conflict of Interest: Current Clients: Specific Rules

- (a) A lawyer shall not enter into a business transaction with a client or knowingly acquire an ownership, possessory, security or other pecuniary interest adverse to a client unless:
  - (1) the transaction and terms on which the lawyer acquires the interest are fair and reasonable to the client and are fully disclosed and transmitted in writing in a manner that can be reasonably understood by the client;
  - (2) the client is advised in writing of the desirability of seeking and is given a reasonable opportunity to seek the advice of independent legal counsel on the transaction; and
  - (3) the client gives informed consent, in a writing signed by the client, to the essential terms of the transaction and the lawyer's role in the transaction, including whether the lawyer is representing the client in the transaction.
- (b) A lawyer shall not use information relating to representation of a client to the disadvantage of the client unless the client gives informed consent, except as permitted or required by these Rules.
- (c) A lawyer shall not solicit any substantial gift from a client, including a testamentary gift, or prepare on behalf of a client an instrument giving the lawyer or a person related to the lawyer any substantial gift unless the lawyer or other recipient of the gift, is related to the client. For purposes of this paragraph, related persons include a spouse, child, grandchild, parent, or grandparent.
- (d) Prior to the conclusion of representation of a client, a lawyer shall not make or negotiate an agreement giving the lawyer literary or media rights to a portrayal or account based in substantial part on information relating to the representation.
- (e) A lawyer shall not provide financial assistance to a client in connection with pending or contemplated litigation, except as follows.

- (1) A lawyer may advance court costs and expenses of litigation, the repayment of which may be contingent on the outcome of the matter, provided that the expenses were reasonably incurred. Court costs and expenses of litigation include, but are not necessarily limited to, filing fees; deposition costs; expert witness fees; transcript costs; witness fees; copy costs; photographic, electronic, or digital evidence production; investigation fees; related travel expenses; litigation related medical expenses; and any other case specific expenses directly related to the representation undertaken, including those set out in Rule 1.8(e)(3).
- (2) A lawyer representing an indigent client may pay court costs and expenses of litigation on behalf of the client.
- (3) Overhead costs of a lawyer's practice which are those not incurred by the lawyer solely for the purposes of a particular representation, shall not be passed on to a client. Overhead costs include, but are not necessarily limited to, office rent, utility costs, charges for local telephone service, office supplies, fixed asset expenses, and ordinary secretarial and staff services.

With the informed consent of the client, the lawyer may charge as recoverable costs such items as computer legal research charges, long distance telephone expenses, postage charges, copying charges, mileage and outside courier service charges, incurred solely for the purposes of the representation undertaken for that client, provided they are charged at the lawyer's actual, invoiced costs for these expenses.

With client consent and where the lawyer's fee is based upon an hourly rate, a reasonable charge for paralegal services may be chargeable to the client. In all other instances, paralegal services shall be considered an overhead cost of the lawyer.

- (4) In addition to costs of court and expenses of litigation, a lawyer may provide financial assistance to a client who is in necessitous circumstances, subject however to the following restrictions.
  - (i) Upon reasonable inquiry, the lawyer must determine that the client's necessitous circumstances, without minimal financial assistance, would adversely affect the client's ability to initiate and/or maintain the cause for which the lawyer's services were engaged.
  - (ii) The advance or loan guarantee, or the offer thereof, shall not be used as an inducement by the lawyer, or anyone acting on the lawyer's behalf, to secure employment.
  - (iii) Neither the lawyer nor anyone acting on the lawyer's behalf may offer to make advances or loan guarantees prior to being hired by a client, and the lawyer shall not publicize nor advertise a willingness to make advances or loan guarantees to clients.

- (iv) Financial assistance under this rule may provide but shall not exceed that minimum sum necessary to meet the client's, the client's spouse's, and/or dependents' documented obligations for food, shelter, utilities, insurance, non-litigation related medical care and treatment, transportation expenses, education, or other documented expenses necessary for subsistence.
- (5) Any financial assistance provided by a lawyer to a client, whether for court costs, expenses of litigation, or for necessitous circumstances, shall be subject to the following additional restrictions.
  - (i) Any financial assistance provided directly from the funds of the lawyer to a client shall not bear interest, fees or charges of any nature.
  - (ii) Financial assistance provided by a lawyer to a client may be made using a lawyer's line of credit or loans obtained from financial institutions in which the lawyer has no ownership, control and/or security interest; provided, however, that this prohibition shall not apply to any federally insured bank, savings and loan association, savings bank, or credit union where the lawyer's ownership, control and/or security interest is less than 15%.
  - (iii) Where the lawyer uses a line of credit or loans obtained from financial institutions to provide financial assistance to a client, the lawyer shall not pass on to the client interest charges, including any fees or other charges attendant to such loans, in an amount exceeding the actual charge by the third party lender, or ten percentage points above the bank prime loan rate of interest as reported by the Federal Reserve Board on January 15th of each year in which the loan is outstanding, whichever is less.
  - (iv) A lawyer providing a guarantee or security on a loan made in favor of a client may do so only to the extent that the interest charges, including any fees or other charges attendant to such a loan, do not exceed ten percentage points (10%) above the bank prime loan rate of interest as reported by the Federal Reserve Board on January 15th of each year in which the loan is outstanding. Interest together with other charges attendant to such loans which exceeds this maximum may not be the subject of the lawyer's guarantee or security.
  - (v) The lawyer shall procure the client's written consent to the terms and conditions under which such financial assistance is made. Nothing in this rule shall require client consent in those matters in which a court has certified a class under applicable state or federal law; provided, however, that the court must have accepted and exercised responsibility for making the determination that interest and fees are owed, and that the amount of interest and fees chargeable to the client is fair and reasonable considering the facts and circumstances presented.

- (vi) In every instance where the client has been provided financial assistance by the lawyer, the full text of this rule shall be provided to the client at the time of execution of any settlement documents, approval of any disbursement sheet as provided for in Rule 1.5, or upon submission of a bill for the lawyer's services.
  - (vii) For purposes of Rule 1.8(e), the term "financial institution" shall include a federally insured financial institution and any of its affiliates, bank, savings and loan, credit union, savings bank, loan or finance company, thrift, and any other business or person that, for a commercial purpose, loans or advances money to attorneys and/or the clients of attorneys for court costs, litigation expenses, or for necessitous circumstances.
- (f) A lawyer shall not accept compensation for representing a client from one other than the client unless:
  - (1) the client gives informed consent, or the compensation is provided by contract with a third person such as an insurance contract or a prepaid legal service plan;
  - (2) there is no interference with the lawyer's independence or professional judgment or with the client-lawyer relationship; and
  - (3) information relating to representation of a client is protected as required by Rule 1.6.
- (g) A lawyer who represents two or more clients shall not participate in making an aggregate settlement of the claims of or against the clients, or in a criminal case an aggregated agreement as to guilty or nolo contendere pleas, unless each client gives informed consent, in a writing signed by the client, or a court approves a settlement in a certified class action. The lawyer's disclosure shall include the existence and nature of all the claims or pleas involved and of the participation of each person in the settlement.
- (h) A lawyer shall not:
  - (1) make an agreement prospectively limiting the lawyer's liability to a client for malpractice unless the client is independently represented in making the agreement; or
  - (2) settle a claim or potential claim for such liability with an unrepresented client or former client unless that person is advised in writing of the desirability of seeking and is given a reasonable opportunity to seek the advice of independent legal counsel in connection therewith.
- (i) A lawyer shall not acquire a proprietary interest in the cause of action or subject matter of litigation the lawyer is conducting for a client, except that the lawyer may:

- (1) acquire a lien authorized by law to secure the lawyer's fee or expenses; and
- (2) contract with a client for a reasonable contingent fee in a civil case.
- (j) [Reserved].
- (k) A lawyer shall not solicit or obtain a power of attorney or mandate from a client which would authorize the attorney, without first obtaining the client's informed consent to settle, to enter into a binding settlement agreement on the client's behalf or to execute on behalf of the client any settlement or release documents. An attorney may obtain a client's authorization to endorse and negotiate an instrument given in settlement of the client's claim, but only after the client has approved the settlement.
- (l) While lawyers are associated in a firm, a prohibition in the foregoing paragraphs (a) through (k) that applies to any one of them shall apply to all of them.

Rule 1.9. Duties to Former Clients

- (a) A lawyer who has formerly represented a client in a matter shall not thereafter represent another person in the same or a substantially related matter in which that person's interests are materially adverse to the interests of the former client unless the former client gives informed consent, confirmed in writing.
- (b) A lawyer shall not knowingly represent a person in the same or a substantially related matter in which a firm with which the lawyer formerly was associated had previously represented a client
  - (1) whose interests are materially adverse to that person; and
  - (2) about whom the lawyer had acquired information protected by Rules 1.6 and 1.9(c) that is material to the matter; unless the former client gives informed consent, confirmed in writing.
- (c) A lawyer who has formerly represented a client in a matter or whose present or former firm has formerly represented a client in a matter shall not thereafter:
  - (1) use information relating to the representation to the disadvantage of the former client except as these Rules would permit or require with respect to a client, or when the information has become generally known; or
  - (2) reveal information relating to the representation except as these Rules would permit or require with respect to a client.

Rule 1.10. Imputation of Conflicts of Interest: General Rule

- (a) While lawyers are associated in a firm, none of them shall knowingly represent a client when any one of them practicing alone would be prohibited from doing so by Rules 1.7 or 1.9, unless the prohibition is based on a personal interest of the prohibited lawyer and does not present a significant risk of materially limiting the representation of the client by the remaining lawyers in the firm.

- (b) When a lawyer has terminated an association with a firm, the firm is not prohibited from thereafter representing a person with interests materially adverse to those of a client represented by the formerly associated lawyer and not currently represented by the firm, unless:
  - (1) the matter is the same or substantially related to that in which the formerly associated lawyer represented the client; and
  - (2) any lawyer remaining in the firm has information protected by Rules 1.6 and 1.9(c) that is material to the matter.
- (c) A disqualification prescribed by this rule may be waived by the affected client under the conditions stated in Rule 1.7.
- (d) The disqualification of lawyers associated in a firm with former or current government lawyers is governed by Rule 1.11.

Rule 1.11. Special Conflicts of Interest for Former and Current Government Officers and Employees

- (a) Except as law may otherwise expressly permit, a lawyer who has formerly served as a public officer or employee of the government:
  - (1) is subject to Rule 1.9(c); and
  - (2) shall not otherwise represent a client in connection with a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially as a public officer or employee, unless the appropriate government agency gives its informed consent, confirmed in writing, to the representation.
- (b) When a lawyer is disqualified from representation under paragraph (a), no lawyer in a firm with which that lawyer is associated may knowingly undertake or continue representation in such a matter unless:
  - (1) the disqualified lawyer is timely screened from any participation in the matter and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom; and
  - (2) written notice is promptly given to the appropriate government agency to enable it to ascertain compliance with the provisions of this rule.
- (c) Except as law may otherwise expressly permit, a lawyer having information that the lawyer knows is confidential government information about a person acquired when the lawyer was a public officer or employee, may not represent a private client whose interests are adverse to that person in a matter in which the information could be used to the material disadvantage of that person. As used in this Rule, the term “confidential government information” means information that has been obtained under governmental authority and which, at the time this Rule is applied, the government is prohibited by law from disclosing to the public or has a legal privilege not to disclose and which is not otherwise available to the public. A firm with which that lawyer is associated may undertake or continue representation in the matter only if the disqualified lawyer is timely screened from any participation in the matter and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom.

(d) Except as law may otherwise expressly permit, a lawyer currently serving as a public officer or employee:

(1) is subject to Rules 1.7 and 1.9; and

(2) shall not:

(i) participate in a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially while in private practice or nongovernmental employment, unless the appropriate government agency gives its informed consent, confirmed in writing; or

(ii) negotiate for private employment with any person who is involved as a party or as lawyer for a party in a matter in which the lawyer is participating personally and substantially, except that a lawyer serving as a law clerk to a judge, other adjudicative officer or arbitrator may negotiate for private employment as permitted by Rule 1.12(b) and subject to the conditions stated in Rule 1.12(b).

(e) As used in this Rule, the term “matter” includes:

(1) any judicial or other proceeding, application, request for a ruling or other determination, contract, claim, controversy, investigation, charge, accusation, arrest or other particular matter involving a specific party or parties; and

(2) any other matter covered by the conflict of interest rules of the appropriate government agency.

Rule 1.12. Former Judge, Arbitrator, Mediator or Other Third-Party Neutral

(a) Except as stated in paragraph (d), a lawyer shall not represent anyone in connection with a matter in which the lawyer participated personally and substantially as a judge or other adjudicative officer or law clerk to such a person or as an arbitrator, mediator or other third-party neutral, unless all parties to the proceeding give informed consent, confirmed in writing.

(b) A lawyer shall not negotiate for employment with any person who is involved as a party or as lawyer for a party in a matter in which the lawyer is participating personally and substantially as a judge or other adjudicative officer or as an arbitrator, mediator or other third-party neutral. A lawyer serving as a law clerk to a judge or other adjudicative officer may negotiate for employment with a party or lawyer involved in a matter in which the clerk is participating personally and substantially, but only after the lawyer has notified the judge, or other adjudicative officer.

- (c) If a lawyer is disqualified by paragraph (a), no lawyer in a firm with which that lawyer is associated may knowingly undertake or continue representation in the matter unless:
  - (1) the disqualified lawyer is timely screened from any participation in the matter and is apportioned no part of the fee therefrom; and
  - (2) written notice is promptly given to the parties and any appropriate tribunal to enable them to ascertain compliance with the provisions of this rule.
- (d) An arbitrator selected as a partisan of a party in a multi-member arbitration panel is not prohibited from subsequently representing that party.

Rule 1.13. Organization as Client

- (a) A lawyer employed or retained by an organization represents the organization acting through its duly authorized constituents.
- (b) If a lawyer for an organization knows that an officer, employee or other person associated with the organization is engaged in action, intends to act or refuses to act in a matter related to the representation that is a violation of a legal obligation to the organization, or a violation of law that reasonably might be imputed to the organization, and that is likely to result in substantial injury to the organization, then the lawyer shall proceed as is reasonably necessary in the best interest of the organization. Unless the lawyer reasonably believes that it is not necessary in the best interest of the organization to do so, the lawyer shall refer the matter to higher authority in the organization, including, if warranted by the circumstances to the highest authority that can act on behalf of the organization as determined by applicable law.
- (c) Except as provided in paragraph (d), if
  - (1) despite the lawyer's efforts in accordance with paragraph (b) the highest authority that can act on behalf of the organization insists upon or fails to address in a timely and appropriate manner an action, or a refusal to act, that is clearly a violation of law, and
  - (2) the lawyer reasonably believes that the violation is reasonably certain to result in substantial injury to the organization, then the lawyer may reveal information relating to the representation whether or not Rule 1.6 permits such disclosure, but only if and to the extent the lawyer reasonably believes necessary to prevent substantial injury to the organization.

- (d) Paragraph (c) shall not apply with respect to information relating to a lawyer's representation of an organization to investigate an alleged violation of law, or to defend the organization or an officer, employee or other constituent associated with the organization against a claim arising out of an alleged violation of law.
- (e) A lawyer who reasonably believes that he or she has been discharged because of the lawyer's actions taken pursuant to paragraphs (b) or (c), or who withdraws under circumstances that require or permit the lawyer to take action under either of those paragraphs, shall proceed as the lawyer reasonably believes necessary to assure that the organization's highest authority is informed of the lawyer's discharge or withdrawal.
- (f) In dealing with an organization's directors, officers, employees, members, shareholders or other constituents, a lawyer shall explain the identity of the client when the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the organization's interests are adverse to those of the constituents with whom the lawyer is dealing.
- (g) A lawyer representing an organization may also represent any of its directors, officers, employees, members, shareholders or other constituents, subject to the provisions of Rule 1.7. If the organization's consent to the dual representation is required by Rule 1.7, the consent shall be given by an appropriate official of the organization other than the individual who is to be represented, or by the shareholders.

Rule 1.14. Client with Diminished Capacity

- (a) When a client's capacity to make adequately considered decisions in connection with a representation is diminished, whether because of minority, mental impairment or for some other reason, the lawyer shall, as far as reasonably possible, maintain a normal client-lawyer relationship with the client.
- (b) When the lawyer reasonably believes that the client has diminished capacity, is at risk of substantial physical, financial or other harm unless action is taken and cannot adequately act in the client's own interest, the lawyer may take reasonably necessary protective action, including consulting with individuals or entities that have the ability to take action to protect the client and, in appropriate cases, seeking the appointment of a fiduciary, including a guardian, curator or tutor, to protect the client's interests.
- (c) Information relating to the representation of a client with diminished capacity is protected by Rule 1.6. When taking protective action pursuant to paragraph (b), the lawyer is impliedly authorized under Rule 1.6(a) to reveal information about the client, but only to the extent reasonably necessary to protect the client's interests.

Rule 1.15. Safekeeping Property

- (a) A lawyer shall hold property of clients or third persons that is in a lawyer's possession in connection with a representation separate from the lawyer's own property. Except as provided in (g) and the IOLTA Rules below, funds shall be kept in one or more separate interest-bearing client trust accounts maintained in a bank or savings and loan association: 1) authorized by federal or state law to do business in Louisiana, the deposits of which are insured by an agency of the federal government; 2) in the state where the lawyer's primary office is situated, if not within Louisiana; or 3) elsewhere with the consent of the client or third person. No earnings on a client trust account may be made available to or utilized by a lawyer or law firm. Other property shall be identified as such and appropriately safeguarded. Complete records of such account funds and other property shall be kept by the lawyer and shall be preserved for a period of five years after termination of the representation.

- (b) A lawyer may deposit the lawyer's own funds in a client trust account for the sole purpose of paying bank service charges on that account or obtaining a waiver of those charges, but only in an amount necessary for that purpose.
- (c) A lawyer shall deposit into a client trust account legal fees and expenses that have been paid in advance, to be withdrawn by the lawyer only as fees are earned or expenses incurred. The lawyer shall deposit legal fees and expenses into the client trust account consistent with Rule 1.5(f).
- (d) Upon receiving funds or other property in which a client or third person has an interest, a lawyer shall promptly notify the client or third person. For purposes of this rule, the third person's interest shall be one of which the lawyer has actual knowledge, and shall be limited to a statutory lien or privilege, a final judgment addressing disposition of those funds or property, or a written agreement by the client or the lawyer on behalf of the client guaranteeing payment out of those funds or property. Except as stated in this rule or otherwise permitted by law or by agreement with the client, a lawyer shall promptly deliver to the client or third person any funds or other property that the client or third person is entitled to receive and, upon request by the client or third person, shall promptly render a full accounting regarding such property.
- (e) When in the course of representation a lawyer is in possession of property in which two or more persons (one of whom may be the lawyer) claim interests, the property shall be kept separate by the lawyer until the dispute is resolved. The lawyer shall promptly distribute all portions of the property as to which the interests are not in dispute.
- (f) Every check, draft, electronic transfer, or other withdrawal instrument or authorization from a client trust account shall be personally signed by a lawyer or, in the case of electronic, telephone, or wire transfer, from a client trust account, directed by a lawyer or, in the case of a law firm, one or more lawyers authorized by the law firm. A lawyer shall not use any debit card or automated teller machine card to withdraw funds from a client trust account. On client trust accounts, cash withdrawals and checks made payable to "Cash" are prohibited. A lawyer shall subject all client trust accounts to a reconciliation process at least quarterly, and shall maintain records of the reconciliation as mandated by this rule. [Last sentence added 1/13/2015 and effective 4/1/2015]
- (g) A lawyer shall create and maintain an "IOLTA Account," which is a pooled interest-bearing client trust account for funds of clients or third persons which are nominal in amount or to be held for such a short period of time that the funds would not be expected to earn income for the client or third person in excess of the costs incurred to secure such income.

- (1) IOLTA Accounts shall be of a type approved and authorized by the Louisiana Bar Foundation and maintained only in “eligible” financial institutions, as approved and certified by the Louisiana Bar Foundation. The Louisiana Bar Foundation shall establish regulations, subject to approval by the Supreme Court of Louisiana, governing the determination that a financial institution is eligible to hold IOLTA Accounts and shall at least annually publish a list of LBF-approved/certified eligible financial institutions. Participation in the IOLTA program is voluntary for financial institutions. IOLTA Accounts shall be established at a bank or savings and loan association authorized by federal or state law to do business in Louisiana, the deposits of which are insured by an agency of the federal government or at an open-end investment company registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission authorized by federal or state law to do business in Louisiana which shall be invested solely in or fully collateralized by U.S. Government Securities with total assets of at least $250,000,000 and in order for a financial institution to be approved and certified by the Louisiana Bar Foundation as eligible, shall comply with the following provisions:
  - (A) No earnings from such an account shall be made available to a lawyer or law firm.
  - (B) Such account shall include all funds of clients or third persons which are nominal in amount or to be held for such a short period of time the funds would not be expected to earn income for the client or third person in excess of the costs incurred to secure such income.
  - (C) Funds in each interest-bearing client trust account shall be subject to withdrawal upon request and without delay, except as permitted by law.
- (2) To be approved and certified by the Louisiana Bar Foundation as eligible, financial institutions shall maintain IOLTA Accounts which pay an interest rate comparable to the highest interest rate or dividend generally available from the institution to its non-IOLTA customers when IOLTA Accounts meet or exceed the same minimum balance or other eligibility qualifications, if any. In determining the highest interest rate or dividend generally available from the institution to its non IOLTA accounts, eligible institutions may consider factors, in addition to the IOLTA Account balance, customarily considered by the institution when setting interest rates or dividends for its customers, provided that such factors do not discriminate between IOLTA Accounts and accounts of non-IOLTA customers, and that these factors do not include that the account is an IOLTA Account. The eligible institution shall calculate interest and dividends in accordance with its standard practice for non-IOLTA customers, but the eligible institution may elect to pay a higher interest or dividend rate on IOLTA Accounts.

- (3) To be approved and certified by the Louisiana Bar Foundation as eligible, a financial institution may achieve rate comparability required in (g)(2) by:
- (A) Establishing the IOLTA Account as:
- (1) an interest-bearing checking account; (2) a money market deposit account with or tied to checking; (3) a sweep account which is a money market fund or daily (overnight) financial institution repurchase agreement invested solely in or fully collateralized by U.S. Government Securities; or (4) an open-end money market fund solely invested in or fully collateralized by U.S. Government Securities. A daily financial institution repurchase agreement may be established only with an eligible institution that is “well-capitalized” or “adequately capitalized” as those terms are defined by applicable federal statutes and regulations. An open-end money market fund must be invested solely in U.S. Government Securities or repurchase agreements fully collateralized by U.S. Government Securities, must hold itself out as a “money-market fund” as that term is defined by federal statutes and regulations under the Investment Company Act of 1940, and, at the time of the investment, must have total assets of at least $250,000,000. “U.S. Government Securities” refers to U.S. Treasury obligations and obligations issued or guaranteed as to principal and interest by the United States or any agency or instrumentality thereof.
- (B) Paying the comparable rate on the IOLTA checking account in lieu of establishing the IOLTA Account as the higher rate product; or
- (C) Paying a “benchmark” amount of qualifying funds equal to 60% of the Federal Fund Target Rate as of the first business day of the quarter or other IOLTA remitting period; no fees may be deducted from this amount which is deemed already to be net of “allowable reasonable fees.”
- (4) Lawyers or law firms depositing the funds of clients or third persons in an IOLTA Account shall direct the depository institution:
- (A) To remit interest or dividends, net of any allowable reasonable fees on the average monthly balance in the account, or as otherwise computed in accordance with an eligible institution’s standard accounting practice, at least quarterly, to the Louisiana Bar Foundation, Inc.;
- (B) To transmit with each remittance to the Foundation, a statement, on a form approved by the LBF, showing the name of the lawyer or law firm for whom the remittance is sent and for each account: the rate of interest or dividend applied; the amount of interest or dividends earned; the types of fees deducted, if any; and the average account balance for each account for each month of the period in which the report is made; and

- (C) To transmit to the depositing lawyer or law firm a report in accordance with normal procedures for reporting to its depositors.
- (5) “Allowable reasonable fees” for IOLTA Accounts are: per check charges; per deposit charges; a fee in lieu of minimum balance; sweep fees and a reasonable IOLTA Account administrative fee. All other fees are the responsibility of, and may be charged to, the lawyer or law firm maintaining the IOLTA Account. Fees or service charges that are not “allowable reasonable fees” include, but are not limited to: the cost of check printing; deposit stamps; NSF charges; collection charges; wire transfers; and fees for cash management. Fees or charges in excess of the earnings accrued on the account for any month or quarter shall not be taken from earnings accrued on other IOLTA Accounts or from the principal of the account. Eligible financial institutions may elect to waive any or all fees on IOLTA Accounts.
- (6) A lawyer is not required independently to determine whether an interest rate is comparable to the highest rate or dividend generally available and shall be in presumptive compliance with Rule 1.15(g) by maintaining a client trust account of the type approved and authorized by the Louisiana Bar Foundation at an “eligible” financial institution.
- (7) “Unidentified Funds” are funds on deposit in an IOLTA account for at least one year that after reasonable due diligence cannot be documented as belonging to a client, a third person, or the lawyer or law firm.
- (h) A lawyer who learns of Unidentified Funds in an IOLTA account must remit the funds to the Louisiana Bar Foundation. No charge of misconduct shall attend to a lawyer’s exercise of reasonable judgment under this paragraph (h).

A lawyer who either remits funds in error or later ascertains the ownership of remitted funds may make a claim to the Louisiana Bar Foundation, which after verification of the claim will return the funds to the lawyer.

IOLTA Rules

- (1) The IOLTA program shall be a mandatory program requiring participation by lawyers and law firms, whether proprietorships, partnerships, limited liability companies or professional corporations.
- (2) The following principles shall apply to funds of clients or third persons which are held by lawyers and law firms:
  - (a) No earnings on the IOLTA Accounts may be made available to or utilized by a lawyer or law firm.
  - (b) Upon the request of, or with the informed consent of a client or third person, a lawyer may deposit funds of the client or third person into a non-IOLTA, interest-bearing client trust account and earnings may be made available to the client or third person, respectively, whenever possible upon deposited funds which are not nominal in amount or are to be held for a period of time long enough that the funds would be expected to earn income for the client or third person in excess of the costs incurred to secure such income; however, traditional lawyer-client relationships do not compel lawyers either to invest such funds or to advise clients or third persons to make their funds productive.

- (c) Funds of clients or third-persons which are nominal in amount or to be held for such a short period of time that the funds would not be expected to earn income for the client or third person in excess of the costs incurred to secure such income shall be retained in an IOLTA Account at an eligible financial institution as outlined above in section (g), with the interest or dividend (net of allowable reasonable fees) made payable to the Louisiana Bar Foundation, Inc., said payments to be made at least quarterly.
- (d) In determining whether the funds of a client or third person can earn income in excess of costs, a lawyer or law firm shall consider the following factors:
  - (1) The amount of the funds to be deposited;
  - (2) The expected duration of the deposit, including the likelihood of delay in the matter for which the funds are held;
  - (3) The rates of interest or yield at financial institutions where the funds are to be deposited;
  - (4) The cost of establishing and administering non-IOLTA accounts for the benefit of the client or third person including service charges, the costs of the lawyer's services, and the costs of preparing any tax reports required for income accruing to the benefit of the client or third person;
  - (5) The capability of financial institutions, lawyers or law firms to calculate and pay income to individual clients or third persons;
  - (6) Any other circumstances that affect the ability of the funds of the client or third person to earn a positive return for the client or third person. The determination of whether funds to be invested could be utilized to provide a positive net return to the client or third person rests in the sound judgment of each lawyer or law firm. The lawyer or law firm shall review its IOLTA Account at reasonable intervals to determine whether changed circumstances require further action with respect to the funds of any client or third person.
- (e) Although notification of a lawyer's participation in the IOLTA Program is not required to be given to clients or third persons whose funds are held in IOLTA Accounts, many lawyers may want to notify their clients or third persons of their participation in the program in some fashion. The Rules do not prohibit a lawyer from advising all clients or third persons of the lawyer's advancing the administration of justice in Louisiana beyond the lawyer's individual abilities in conjunction with other public-spirited members of the profession. The placement of funds of clients or third persons in an IOLTA Account is within the sole discretion of the lawyer in the exercise of the lawyer's independent professional judgment; notice to the client or third person is for informational purposes only.

- (3) The Louisiana Bar Foundation shall hold the entire beneficial interest in the interest or dividend income derived from client trust accounts in the IOLTA program. Interest or dividend earned by the program will be paid to the Louisiana Bar Foundation, Inc. to be used solely for the following purposes:
  - (a) to provide legal services to the indigent and to the mentally disabled;
  - (b) to provide law-related educational programs for the public;
  - (c) to study and support improvements to the administration of justice; and
  - (d) for such other programs for the benefit of the public and the legal system of the state as are specifically approved from time to time by the Supreme Court of Louisiana.
- (4) The Louisiana Bar Foundation shall prepare an annual report to the Supreme Court of Louisiana that summarizes IOLTA income, grants, operating expenses and any other problems arising out of administration of the IOLTA program. In addition, the Louisiana Bar Foundation shall also prepare an annual report to the Supreme Court of Louisiana that summarizes all other Foundation income, grants, operating expenses and activities, as well as any other problems which arise out of the Foundation's implementation of its corporate purposes. The Supreme Court of Louisiana shall review, study and analyze such reports and shall make recommendations to the Foundation with respect thereto.

Rule 1.16. Declining or Terminating Representation

- (a) Except as stated in paragraph (c), a lawyer shall not represent a client or, where representation has commenced, shall withdraw from the representation of a client if:
  - (1) the representation will result in violation of the rules of professional conduct or other law;
  - (2) the lawyer's physical or mental condition materially impairs the lawyer's ability to represent the client; or
  - (3) the lawyer is discharged.
- (b) Except as stated in paragraph (c), a lawyer may withdraw from representing a client if:

- (1) withdrawal can be accomplished without material adverse effect on the interests of the client;
  - (2) the client persists in a course of action involving the lawyer's services that the lawyer reasonably believes is criminal or fraudulent;
  - (3) the client has used the lawyer's services to perpetrate a crime or fraud;
  - (4) the client insists upon taking action that the lawyer considers repugnant or with which the lawyer has a fundamental disagreement;
  - (5) the client fails substantially to fulfill an obligation to the lawyer regarding the lawyer's services and has been given reasonable warning that the lawyer will withdraw unless the obligation is fulfilled;
  - (6) the representation will result in an unreasonable financial burden on the lawyer or has been rendered unreasonably difficult by the client; or
  - (7) other good cause for withdrawal exists.
- (c) A lawyer must comply with applicable law requiring notice to or permission of a tribunal when terminating a representation. When ordered to do so by a tribunal, a lawyer shall continue representation notwithstanding good cause for terminating the representation.
- (d) Upon termination of representation, a lawyer shall take steps to the extent reasonably practicable to protect a client's interests, such as giving reasonable notice to the client, allowing time for employment of other counsel, surrendering papers and property to which the client is entitled and refunding any advance payment of fee or expense that has not been earned or incurred. Upon written request by the client, the lawyer shall promptly release to the client or the client's new lawyer the entire file relating to the matter. The lawyer may retain a copy of the file but shall not condition release over issues relating to the expense of copying the file or for any other reason. The responsibility for the cost of copying shall be determined in an appropriate proceeding.

Rule 1.17. Sale of a Law Practice

A lawyer or a law firm may sell or purchase a law practice, or an area of law practice, including good will, if the following conditions are satisfied:

- (a) The selling lawyer has not been disbarred or permanently resigned from the practice of law in lieu of discipline, and permanently ceases to engage in the practice of law, or has disappeared or died;
- (b) The entire law practice, or area of law practice, is sold to another lawyer admitted and currently eligible to practice in this jurisdiction;

- (c) At least ninety (90) days in advance of the sale, actual notice, either by in-person consultation confirmed in writing, or by U.S. mail, is given to each of the clients of the law practice being sold, indicating:
- (1) the proposed sale of the law practice;

If the purchasing lawyer or law firm determines that a conflict of interest exists prior to reviewing the information, or determines during the course of review that a conflict of interest exists, the lawyer or law firm shall not review or continue to review the information unless the conflict has been disclosed to and the informed written consent of the client has been obtained.

- (f)(2) A lawyer or law firm that proposes to acquire a law practice shall maintain the confidentiality of and shall not use any client information received in connection with the proposed sale in the same manner and to the same extent as if the clients of the law practice were already the clients of that acquiring lawyer or law firm.

For the purposes of this Rule, a bona fide office is defined as a physical location maintained by the lawyer or law firm where the lawyer or law firm reasonably expects to furnish legal services in a substantial way on a regular and continuing basis, and which physical location shall have at least one lawyer who is regularly and routinely present in that physical location. In the absence of a bona fide office, the lawyer shall disclose the city or town of the primary registration statement address as it appears on the lawyer's annual registration statement. If an advertisement or unsolicited written communication lists a telephone number in connection with a specified geographic area other than an area containing a bona fide office or the lawyer's primary registration statement address, appropriate qualifying language must appear in the advertisement.

A lawyer shall not permit employees or agents of the lawyer to solicit on the lawyer's behalf. A lawyer shall not enter into an agreement for, charge, or collect a fee for professional employment obtained in violation of this Rule. The term "solicit" includes contact in person, by telephone, telegraph, or facsimile, or by other communication directed to a specific recipient and includes (i) any written form of communication directed to a specific

  - (ii) The top of each page of such written communication and the lower left corner of the face of the envelope in which the written communication is enclosed shall be plainly marked “ADVERTISEMENT” in print size at least as large as the largest print used in the written communication. If the written communication is in the form of a self-mailing brochure or pamphlet, the “ADVERTISEMENT” mark shall appear above the address panel of the brochure or pamphlet and on the inside of the brochure or pamphlet. Written communications solicited by clients or prospective clients, or written communications sent only to other lawyers need not contain the “ADVERTISEMENT” mark.

- (1) Recusal of Members. Members of the Committee shall recuse themselves from consideration of any advertisement proposed or used by themselves or by other lawyers in their firms.

- (2) Meetings. The Committee shall meet as often as is necessary to fulfill its duty to provide prompt opinions regarding submitted advertisements' compliance with the lawyer advertising and solicitation rules.
  - (3) Procedural Rules. The Committee may adopt such procedural rules for its activities as may be required to enable the Committee to fulfill its functions.
  - (4) Reports to the Court. Within six months following the conclusion of the first year of the Committee's evaluation of advertisements in accordance with these Rules, and annually thereafter, the Committee shall submit to the Supreme Court of Louisiana a report detailing the year's activities of the Committee. The report shall include such information as the Court may require.
- (b) Advance Written Advisory Opinion. Subject to the exemptions stated in Rule 7.8, any lawyer who advertises services through any public media or through unsolicited written communications sent in compliance with Rule 7.4 or 7.6(c) may obtain a written advisory opinion concerning the compliance of a contemplated advertisement or unsolicited written communication in advance of disseminating the advertisement or communication by submitting to the Committee the material and fee specified in subdivision (d) of this Rule at least thirty days prior to such dissemination. If the Committee finds that the advertisement or unsolicited written communication complies with these Rules, the lawyer's voluntary submission in compliance with this subdivision shall be deemed to satisfy the regular filing requirement set forth below in subdivision (c) of this Rule.
- (c) Regular Filing. Subject to the exemptions stated in Rule 7.8, any lawyer who advertises services through any public media or through unsolicited written communications sent in compliance with Rule 7.4 or 7.6(c) shall file a copy of each such advertisement or unsolicited written communication with the Committee for evaluation of compliance with these Rules. The copy shall be filed either prior to or concurrently with the lawyer's first dissemination of the advertisement or unsolicited written communication and shall be accompanied by the information and fee specified in subdivision (d) of this Rule. If the lawyer has opted to submit an advertisement or unsolicited written communication in advance of dissemination, in compliance with subdivision (b) of this Rule, and the advertisement or unsolicited written communication is then found to be in compliance with the Rules, that voluntary advance submission shall be deemed to satisfy the regular filing requirement set forth above.
- (d) Contents of Filing. A filing with the Committee as permitted by subdivision (b) or as required by subdivision (c) shall consist of:
- (1) a copy of the advertisement or communication in the form or forms in which it is to be disseminated and is readily-capable of duplication by the Committee (e.g., videotapes, audiotapes, print media, photographs of outdoor advertising, etc.);

- (e) Evaluation of Advertisements. The Committee shall evaluate all advertisements and unsolicited written communications filed with it pursuant to this Rule for compliance with the applicable rules on lawyer advertising and solicitation. The Committee shall complete its evaluation within thirty days following receipt of a filing unless the Committee determines that there is reasonable doubt that the advertisement or unsolicited written communication is in compliance with the Rules and that further examination is warranted but cannot be completed within the thirty-day period, and so advises the filing lawyer in writing within the thirty-day period. In the latter event, the Committee shall complete its review as promptly as the circumstances reasonably allow. If the Committee does not send any communication in writing to the filing lawyer within thirty days following receipt of the filing, the advertisement or unsolicited written communication will be deemed approved.
- (f) Additional Information. If the Committee requests additional information, the filing lawyer shall comply promptly with the request. Failure to comply with such requests may result in a finding of non-compliance for insufficient information.
- (g) Notice of Noncompliance; Effect of Continued Use of Advertisement. When the Committee determines that an advertisement or unsolicited written communication is not in compliance with the applicable Rules, the Committee shall advise the lawyer in writing that dissemination or continued dissemination of the advertisement or unsolicited written communication may result in professional discipline. The Committee shall report to the Office of Disciplinary Counsel a finding under subsections (c) or (f) of this Rule that the advertisement or unsolicited written communication is not in compliance, unless, within ten days of notice from the Committee, the filing lawyer certifies in writing that the advertisement or unsolicited written communication has not and will not be disseminated.

- (h) Committee Determination Not Binding; Evidence. A finding by the Committee of either compliance or noncompliance shall not be binding in a disciplinary proceeding, but may be offered as evidence.
- (i) Change of Circumstances; Re-filing Requirement. If a change of circumstances occurring subsequent to the Committee's evaluation of an advertisement or unsolicited written communication raises a substantial possibility that the advertisement or communication has become false, misleading or deceptive as a result of the change in circumstances, the lawyer shall promptly re-file the advertisement or a modified advertisement with the Committee along with an explanation of the change in circumstances and an additional fee as set by the Court.
- (j) Maintaining Copies of Advertisements. A copy or recording of an advertisement or written or recorded communication shall be submitted to the Committee in accordance with the requirements of Rule 7.7, and the lawyer shall retain a copy or recording for five years after its last dissemination along with a record of when and where it was used. If identical unsolicited written communications are sent to two or more prospective clients, the lawyer may comply with this requirement by filing a copy of one of the identical unsolicited written communications and retaining for five years a single copy together with a list of the names and addresses of all persons to whom the unsolicited written communication was sent.

  - (1) The lawyer or law firm may furnish such factual information regarding the lawyer or law firm deemed valuable to assist the client.

- (2) The lawyer or law firm may furnish an engagement letter to the potential client; however, if the information furnished to the potential client includes a contingency fee contract, the top of each page of the contract shall be marked "SAMPLE" in print size at least as large as the largest print used in the contract and the words "DO NOT SIGN" shall appear on the client signature line.
- (3) Notwithstanding the provisions of subdivision (c)(1)(D) of Rule 7.2, information provided to a potential client in response to a potential client's request may contain factually verifiable statements concerning past results obtained by the lawyer or law firm, if, either alone or in the context in which they appear, such statements are not otherwise false, misleading or deceptive.
- (c) Disclosure of Intent to Refer Matter to Another Lawyer or Law Firm. A statement and any information furnished to a prospective client, as authorized by subdivision (b) of this Rule, that a lawyer or law firm will represent a client in a particular type of matter, without appropriate qualification, shall be presumed to be misleading if the lawyer reasonably believes that a lawyer or law firm not associated with the originally-retained lawyer or law firm will be associated or act as primary counsel in representing the client. In determining whether the statement is misleading in this respect, the history of prior conduct by the lawyer in similar matters may be considered.

Rule 7.10. Firm Names and Letterhead

- (a) False, Misleading, or Deceptive. A lawyer or law firm shall not use a firm name, logo, letterhead, professional designation, trade name or service mark that violates the provisions of these Rules.
- (b) Trade Names. A lawyer or law firm shall not practice under a trade name that implies a connection with a government agency, public or charitable services organization or other professional association, that implies that the firm is something other than a private law firm, or that is otherwise in violation of subdivision (c)(1) of Rule 7.2.
- (c) Advertising Under Trade Name. A lawyer shall not advertise under a trade or fictitious name, except that a lawyer who actually practices under a trade name as authorized by subdivision (b) may use that name in advertisements. A lawyer who advertises under a trade or fictitious name shall be in violation of this Rule unless the same name is the law firm name that appears on the lawyer's letterhead, business cards, office sign, and fee contracts, and appears with the lawyer's signature on pleadings and other legal documents.
- (d) Law Firm with Offices in More Than One Jurisdiction. A law firm with offices in more than one jurisdiction may use the same name in each jurisdiction, but identification of the lawyers in an office of the firm shall indicate the jurisdictional limitations on those not licensed to practice in any jurisdiction where an office is located.
- (e) Name of Public Officer or Former Member in Firm Name. The name of a lawyer holding a public office or formerly associated with a firm shall not be used in the name of a law firm, on its letterhead, or in any communications on its behalf, during any substantial period in which the lawyer is not actively and regularly practicing with the firm.

- (f) Partnerships and Organizational Business Entities. Lawyers may state or imply that they practice in a partnership or other organizational business entity only when that is the fact.
- (g) Deceased or Retired Members of Law Firm. If otherwise lawful and permitted under these Rules, a law firm may use as, or continue to include in, its name, the name or names of one or more deceased or retired members of the law firm, or of a predecessor firm in a continuing line of succession.

MAINTAINING THE INTEGRITY OF THE PROFESSION

Rule 8.1. Bar Admission and Disciplinary Matters

An applicant for admission to the bar, or a lawyer in connection with a bar admission application or in connection with a disciplinary matter, shall not:

- (a) Knowingly make a false statement of material fact;
- (b) Fail to disclose a fact necessary to correct a misapprehension known by the person to have arisen in the matter, or knowingly fail to respond to a lawful demand for information from an admissions or disciplinary authority, except that this rule does not require disclosure of information otherwise protected by Rule 1.6; or
- (c) Fail to cooperate with the Office of Disciplinary Counsel in its investigation of any matter before it except for an openly expressed claim of a constitutional privilege.

Rule 8.2. Judicial and Legal Officials

- (a) A lawyer shall not make a statement that the lawyer knows to be false or with reckless disregard as to its truth or falsity concerning the qualifications or integrity of a judge, adjudicatory officer or public legal officer, or of a candidate for election or appointment to judicial or legal office.
- (b) A lawyer who is a candidate for judicial office shall comply with the applicable provisions of the Code of Judicial Conduct.

Rule 8.3. Reporting Professional Misconduct

- (a) A lawyer who knows that another lawyer has committed a violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct that raises a question as to the lawyer's honesty, trustworthiness or fitness as a lawyer in other respects, shall inform the Office of Disciplinary Counsel.
- (b) A lawyer who knows that a judge has committed a violation of the applicable rules of judicial conduct that raises a question as to the judge's honesty, trustworthiness or fitness for office shall inform the Judiciary Commission. Complaints concerning the conduct of federal judges shall be filed with the appropriate federal authorities in accordance with federal laws and rules governing federal judicial conduct and disability.

- (c) This rule does not require the disclosure of information otherwise protected by Rule 1.6 or information gained by a lawyer or judge while participating in an approved lawyers assistance program or while serving as a member of the Ethics Advisory Service Committee.

Rule 8.4. Misconduct

It is professional misconduct for a lawyer to:

- (a) Violate or attempt to violate the Rules of Professional Conduct, knowingly assist or induce another to do so, or do so through the acts of another;
- (b) Commit a criminal act especially one that reflects adversely on the lawyer's honesty, trustworthiness or fitness as a lawyer in other respects;
- (c) Engage in conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit or misrepresentation;
- (d) Engage in conduct that is prejudicial to the administration of justice;
- (e) State or imply an ability to influence improperly a judge, judicial officer, governmental agency or official or to achieve results by means that violate the Rules of Professional Conduct or other law;
- (f) Knowingly assist a judge or judicial officer in conduct that is a violation of applicable Rules of Judicial Conduct or other law; or
- (g) Threaten to present criminal or disciplinary charges solely to obtain an advantage in a civil matter.

Rule 8.5. Disciplinary Authority; Choice of Law

- (a) Disciplinary Authority. A lawyer admitted to practice in this jurisdiction is subject to the disciplinary authority of this jurisdiction, regardless of where the lawyer's conduct occurs. A lawyer not admitted in this jurisdiction is also subject to the disciplinary authority of this jurisdiction if the lawyer provides or offers to provide any legal services in this jurisdiction. A lawyer may be subject to the disciplinary authority of both this jurisdiction and another jurisdiction for the same conduct.
- (b) Choice of Law. In any exercise of the disciplinary authority of this jurisdiction, the rules of professional conduct to be applied shall be as follows:
  - (1) for conduct in connection with a matter pending before a tribunal, the rules of the jurisdiction in which the tribunal sits, unless the rules of the tribunal provide otherwise; and

- (2) for any other conduct, the rules of the jurisdiction in which the lawyer's conduct occurred, or, if the predominant effect of the conduct is in a different jurisdiction, the rules of that jurisdiction shall be applied to the conduct. A lawyer shall not be subject to discipline if the lawyer's conduct conforms to the rules of a jurisdiction in which the lawyer reasonably believes the predominant effect of the lawyer's conduct will occur.

STANDARD A.

COUNTY PUBLIC DEFENDER BOARD. A county with a population over 12,000 persons shall establish a county public defender board. Counties subject to I.C. 33-40-7-1 shall establish a county public defender board pursuant to this statute. Counties excluded from I.C. 33-40-7-1 shall establish a county public defender board under I.C. 36-1-3 with powers and duties consistent with I.C. 33-40-7-6. A lawyer who provides representation to indigent persons shall not be appointed to a county public defender board.

Commentary

The purpose of the requirement of a county public defender board is to guarantee professional independence of the defense function and the integrity of the relationship between lawyer and client in accordance with the American Bar Association Standards for Criminal Justice, Chapter 5: Providing Defense Services, Standard 5-1.3 (3rd ed. 1990) [hereafter ABA Providing Defense Services].

Since the decision of the United States Supreme Court in Gideon v. Wainwright (1963), 372 U.S. 335, the issue of judicial control of indigent defense counsel has been addressed by a majority of states through the enactment of legislation creating indigent defense delivery systems that are independent of the judiciary. Indiana, however, continues to rely heavily upon the inherent authority of the courts to provide these constitutionally mandated services and independence of the defense function has not been assured. This state is one of the few states where an accused may be represented by an at-will employee of the judge before whom the accused stands charged.

When counsel is not fully independent to act in the client's behalf, the deficiency is often perceived by the defendant, which fosters suspicion and distrust of the criminal justice system. ABA Providing Defense Services, Standard 5-1.3, provides as follows:

(a) The legal representation plan for a jurisdiction should be designed to guarantee the integrity of the relationship between lawyer and client. The plan and the lawyers serving under it should be free from political influence and should be subject to judicial supervision only in the same manner and to the same extent as are lawyers in private practice. The selection of lawyers for specific cases should not be made by the judiciary or elected officials, but should be arranged for by the administrators of the defender, assigned-counsel and contract-for-service programs.

(b) An effective means of securing professional independence for defender organizations is to place responsibility for governance in a board of trustees. Assigned-counsel and contract-for-service components of defender systems should be governed by such a board. Provisions for size and manner of selection of boards of trustees should assure their independence. Boards of trustees should not include prosecutors or judges. The primary function of the boards of trustees is to support and protect the independence of the defense services program. Boards of trustees should have the power to establish general policy for the operation of defender, assigned-counsel and contract-for-service programs consistent with these standards and in keeping with the standards of professional conduct. Boards of trustees should be precluded from interfering in the conduct of particular cases. A majority of the trustees on boards should be members of the bar admitted to practice in the jurisdiction.

It is essential that attorneys, however chosen or appointed, be fully independent, free to act on behalf of their clients as dictated by their best professional judgment. A system that does not guarantee the integrity of the professional relationship is fundamentally deficient because it fails to provide counsel who have the same freedom of action as a lawyer whom the person with sufficient means can afford to retain. In Polk County v. Dodson (1981), 454 U.S. 312, 318-321, the court stated:

[e]xcept for the source of payment, the relationship [of public defender and client] became identical to that existing between any other lawyer and client.

Held to the same standards of competence and integrity as a private lawyer, a public defender works under canons of professional responsibility that mandate his exercise of independent judgment on behalf of the client.

The importance of independence for lawyers who represent the poor has been stressed in a number of national standards relating to defense services, in addition to those of the ABA. The standards of the National Legal Aid and Defender Association state that "however attorneys are selected to represent qualified clients, they shall be as independent as any other private counsel who undertake the defense of the accused." National Legal Aid and Defender Association, Standards For Defense Services, III. 1. (1976). A similar view is expressed in the standards of the National Advisory Commission: "The method employed to select public defenders should ensure that the public defender is as independent as any private counsel who undertakes the defense of a fee-paying criminally accused person." National Advisory Commission on Criminal Justice Standards and Goals, Courts 13.8 (1973).

The Commission believes that the goal of independence as stated in Standard 5-1.3 of ABA Providing Defense Services, can be substantially achieved by a county public defender board established under either I.C. 33-40-7-3 or I.C. 36-1-3. Under Indiana's home rule statutes, I.C. 36-1-3, counties excepted from I.C. 33-40-7-1 may adopt an ordinance identical to or similar to I.C. 33-40-7-3. The adoption of a county public defender board preserves local control, yet removes public defenders from the direct control and supervision of judges.

Counties with a population under 12,000 are not required to have a county public defender board because the Commission believes that the establishment of such a board in the state's least populous counties is unfeasible.

STANDARD B.

COMPREHENSIVE PLAN. The county public defender board shall adopt a comprehensive plan for indigent defense services either pursuant to or consistent with the provisions in I.C. 33-40-7-5 and shall submit the plan to the Indiana Public Defender Commission.

Commentary

This standard requires the board to prepare a document called a "comprehensive plan" that describes the method for providing legal services to indigent persons in all courts in the county. This standard does not require that the board adopt any particular type of delivery system or only one system for all courts in the county. The requirement that the plan be submitted to the Commission is provided by law. See I.C. 33-40-7-5.

In addition to meeting the specific requirements addressed by these standards, the comprehensive plan should include all procedures and policies related to indigent defense services in the county, including the structure and type of system to be used, staffing, compensation, the number and types of cases, and funding. A form for submitting the comprehensive plan was developed by the Commission to assist counties in meeting this requirement.

Indigent criminal defense services in Indiana are currently provided in three basic ways: (1) public defender programs; (2) contracts under I.C. 33-40-7-8 between courts and attorneys or law firms; and (3) assigned counsel systems in which private attorneys are appointed by judges on a case-by-case basis. Because Indiana relies heavily upon the inherent authority of the trial courts for providing indigent defense services at trial and on direct appeal, the majority of counties have a separate and different system for each court rather than a county-wide system for all courts. Nevertheless, most counties have developed a predominant system for providing indigent defense services.

STANDARD C.

ELIGIBILITY FOR APPOINTMENT OF COUNSEL. The comprehensive plan shall include the applicable rules and procedures for the determination of eligibility for the appointment of counsel at public expense, and shall contain the following provisions:

1. Substantial Hardship. Counsel will be provided to all persons who are financially unable to obtain adequate representation without substantial hardship to themselves or their families.
  - a. Ability to Post Bail. Counsel will not be denied to any person merely because the person is able to obtain pretrial release through a surety bond, property bond, or a cash deposit.
  - b. Employment. Counsel will not be denied to any person merely because the person is employed.
2. Determining Eligibility. The determination of eligibility for the appointment of counsel will include an estimation as to the costs of retaining private counsel and a determination as to whether the person's disposable income and liquid assets are adequate to cover the costs of retaining private counsel.
  - a. Costs of Private Counsel. The determination of the costs of retaining private counsel shall be based upon the nature of the criminal charge, the anticipated complexity of the defense, the estimated cost of presenting a legal defense, and the fees charged by lawyers in the community for providing defense services in similar cases.
  - b. Income. Income shall include all salaries and wages after taxes, including interest, dividends, social security, unemployment compensation workers' compensation, pension, annuities, and contributions from other family members.
  - c. Expenses. Expenses shall include, but are not limited to, all living expenses, business or farm expenses, including food, utilities, housing, child support and alimony obligations, education or employment expenses, child care, medical expenses, and transportation.
  - d. Disposable Income . Disposable income shall be determined by assessing monthly income and subtracting monthly expenses.

- e. Liquid Assets. Liquid assets shall include, but are not limited to, cash, savings and checking accounts, stocks, bonds, certificates of deposits, and equity in real and personal property exceeding the statutory allowances in I.C. 34-2-28-1 that can be readily converted to cash.
3. Confidentiality. If the accused is questioned about indigency in circumstances where the attorney-client privilege does not apply, the accused shall be advised that any statements made or information given may be used against him or her.

Commentary

This standard embodies current Indiana law regarding the determination of indigency. The "substantial hardship" test for determining indigency was adopted by the Indiana Supreme Court in Moore v. State (1980), Ind., 401 N.E.2d 676, 678-679, and has been cited with approval in numerous subsequent appellate opinions:

... the defendant does not have to be totally without means to be entitled to counsel. If he legitimately lacks financial resources to employ an attorney, without imposing substantial hardship on himself or his family, the court must appoint counsel to defend him.

In Moore, supra, at 679, the court also stated that " [t]he fact that the defendant was able to post a bond is not determinative of his non-indigency but is only a factor to be considered. " This principle was applied in Graves v. State (1st Dist. 1987), Ind.App., 503 N.E.2d 1258, and resulted in a reversal of the conviction because the defendant waived his right to counsel after the trial court denied a request for appointed counsel "merely because he posted bond".

Standard C. 1.b., which prohibits the denial of appointed counsel merely because the person is employed, is based upon the opinion in Redmond v. State (1988), Ind., 518 N.E.2d 1095. The factors to be considered in determining eligibility in C.2 are consistent with Moore v. State (1980), 273 Ind. 3, 401 N.E.2d 676, 678-679:

The determination as to the defendant's indigency is not to be made on a superficial examination of income and ownership of property but must be based on as thorough an examination of the defendant's total financial picture as is practical. The record must show that the determination of ability to pay includes a balancing of assets against liabilities and a consideration of the amount of defendant's disposable income or other resources reasonably available to him after payment of fixed obligations.

Although the majority opinion in Moore v. State did not discuss "liquid assets," this was the subject of the dissenting opinion, which the Commission found persuasive. The dissenting justices pointed out that Moore had an equity in real estate as well as equipment in the well drilling business and opined that Moore should have been required to make use of these assets before the court was required to appoint counsel at public expense.

STANDARD D.

PAYMENT BY ACCUSED OF DEFENSE COSTS. The comprehensive plan shall contain the policies and procedures for ordering indigent persons in criminal cases to pay some or all of the costs of defense services under I.C. 33-40-3-6, and shall specify the procedures for determining the actual costs to the county for defense services provided to the accused.

Commentary

Indiana courts are authorized by I.C. 33-40-3-6 to order the accused to repay the cost of defense services provided at public expense. The use of this statute poses certain problems that should be addressed in the comprehensive plan. For example, I.C. 33-40-6(a) does not require that the accused be advised by the court at the time appointed counsel is requested that the accused may be required to repay the county the cost of defense services. The Commission believes in order to prevent subsequent due process challenges by the accused, such an advisement should be given by the court whenever it is contemplated that a repayment order may be issued.

In addition, I.C. 33-40-3-6(a)(1) does not limit "reasonable attorney's fees" to the amount actually paid to the attorney appointed to provide representation. The Commission believes that it would be inappropriate to assess attorney's fees in excess of those actually paid by the county. Thus, this standard requires that the comprehensive plan specify the procedures for determining the actual cost to the county for defense services provided to the accused.

STANDARD E.

APPOINTMENT OF COUNSEL. The comprehensive plan shall provide for the appointment of trial counsel meeting the following qualifications.

- 1. Murder. To be eligible to serve as appointed counsel in a case where the accused is charged with murder, an attorney shall:
  - a. be an experienced and active trial practitioner with at least three (3) years of criminal litigation experience; and
  - b. have prior experience as lead or co-counsel in no fewer than three (3) felony jury trials that were Class C or Level 5 felonies or higher which were tried to completion.
- 2. Level 1, 2, 3, or 4 Felony. To be eligible to serve as appointed counsel in a case where the accused is charged with a Level 1, 2, 3, or 4 felony, an attorney shall:
  - a. be an experienced and active trial practitioner with at least two (2) years of criminal litigation experience; and
  - b. (1) have prior experience as lead or co-counsel in at least two (2) felony jury trials which were tried to completion; or

(2) have prior experience as lead or co-counsel in at least one (1) felony jury trial which was tried to completion and have attended a trial practice course that has been approved by the Public Defender Commission for purposes of this Standard.
- 3. Level 5 Felony. To be eligible to serve as appointed counsel in a case where the accused is charged with a Level 5 felony, an attorney shall:
  - a. be an experienced and active trial practitioner with at least one (1) year of criminal litigation experience; or
  - b. have prior experience as lead or co-counsel in at least three (3) criminal jury trials which were tried to completion.

4. Juvenile Delinquency. To be eligible to serve as lead counsel in a case where a juvenile is alleged to be delinquent, counsel shall possess the following qualifications:
- a. Where a child is charged with what would be murder if committed by an adult or in any situation where waiver to adult court is sought, an attorney shall be an experienced and active criminal or juvenile law practitioner with at least three (3) years of criminal or juvenile delinquency experience; and have prior experience as lead or co-counsel in no fewer than three (3) felony jury trials that were Class C or Level 5 felonies or higher which were tried to completion, or prior experience as lead or co-counsel in no fewer than three (3) juvenile trials, that would have been Class C or Level 5 felonies or higher if committed by an adult, which were tried to completion.
  - b. Where a child is charged with what would be a Level 1, 2, 3, or 4 felony if committed by an adult, an attorney shall be an experienced and active criminal or juvenile law practitioner with at least two (2) years of criminal or juvenile delinquency experience; and have prior experience as lead or co-counsel in no fewer than two (2) felony jury trials which were tried to completion, or two (2) juvenile trials, that would have been felonies if committed by an adult, which were tried to completion; or at least one (1) felony jury trial which was tried to completion and have attended a trial practice course that has been approved by the Public Defender Commission for purposes of this Standard.
  - c. To be eligible to serve as lead counsel in other juvenile delinquency cases (Level 5 felonies and below, all misdemeanors, infractions and status cases), an attorney shall have prior experience as lead or co-counsel in at least one (1) case of the same class or higher which was tried to completion in either adult or juvenile court; or, one (1) year of experience in juvenile delinquency proceedings; or experience in two comparable cases tried to completion in juvenile court under the supervision of an attorney qualified to litigate such cases.

5. Children-In-Need Of Services/Termination Of Parental Rights. To be eligible to serve as appointed counsel in CHINS/TPR cases, counsel shall possess the following qualifications:
- a. An attorney shall have completed prior to appointment at least six (6) hours of training in CHINS/TPR practice in a course approved by the Indiana Public Defender Commission.
  - b. Any attorney with less than one (1) year experience in TPR Litigation or has not litigated at least one (1) TPR to completion must have co-counsel in any TPR matter proceeding to trial. Co-counsel shall have the required minimum experience and training.

Commentary

Except for capital cases, any attorney licensed to practice law in Indiana may be appointed as counsel for the accused in any criminal case. This occasionally results in attorneys being appointed to serious felony cases who have never tried a case or who have no criminal defense experience. This standard sets minimum thresholds for the experience levels of appointed attorneys based upon the seriousness of the offense.

STANDARD F.

APPOINTMENT OF APPELLATE COUNSEL. The comprehensive plan shall provide for the appointment of lead appellate counsel meeting the following qualifications.

- 1. Murder and Level 1, 2, 3, or 4 Felony. To be eligible to serve as appointed counsel in a case where the accused is charged with murder or a Level 1, 2, 3, or 4 felony, an attorney shall be an experienced and active trial or appellate practitioner with at least three (3) years experience in criminal litigation and have completed prior to appointment at least six (6) hours of training in appellate practice in a course approved by the Indiana Public Defender Commission.

2. Other Cases. To be eligible to serve as appointed counsel in other cases, an attorney shall have completed prior to appointment at least six (6) hours of training in appellate practice in a course approved by the Indiana Public Defender Commission.

Commentary

See Commentary to Standard E. The requirement of six (6) hours of training in appellate practice prior to appointment is effective as of January 1, 1996.

STANDARD G.

COMPENSATION OF SALARIED OR CONTRACTUAL PUBLIC DEFENDERS. The comprehensive plan shall provide that the salaries and compensation of full-time salaried public defenders shall be the same as the salaries and compensation provided to deputy prosecutors in similar positions with similar experience in the office of the Prosecuting Attorney. The compensation of contractual public defenders shall be substantially comparable to the compensation provided to deputy prosecutors in similar positions with similar experience in the office of the Prosecuting Attorney. In counties that have established a county public defender office, the salaries and compensation provided to the chief public defender and deputy chief public defender shall be the same as provided to the elected prosecutor and the chief deputy prosecutor in the county under I.C. 33-39-6-5. Effective 1/1/14.

Commentary

Clearly, the current level of compensation for salaried and contractual public defenders is inadequate. For example, in the fourteen counties with a population over 100,000, the average part-time public defender in felony courts is paid $21,000 and is appointed to an average of 70 new cases per year, which means they are paid $300 per case. Part-time public defenders in these same counties handling misdemeanor cases receive an average of 400 new cases per year, which amounts to $52.50 per case. Brief of the Indiana Public Defender Council, In Re: Request for Rule Making Concerning The Marion County Public Defender System, Cause No. 49SOO-9210MS-822. This level of compensation, inevitably, creates grave concerns about the quality of defense services provided to the accused. However, rather than set minimum levels of compensation, the Commission believes that it is more consistent with notions of home rule and county autonomy to peg compensation to rates approved by the county for the prosecution function.

STANDARD H.

COMPENSATION OF ASSIGNED COUNSEL. The comprehensive plan shall provide that counsel appointed on a case-by-case basis for trial or appeal shall submit a claim for services and reimbursement for expenses.

1. Hourly Rate. Counsel shall be compensated for time actually expended at the hourly rate of not less than ninety dollars ($90.00). Effective January 1, 2017.
2. Incidental Expenses. Counsel shall be reimbursed for reasonable, incidental expenses, e.g., photocopying, long-distance telephone calls, postage, and travel.
3. Periodic Payments. Periodic payment during the course of counsel's representation shall be made monthly upon request of appointed counsel.

Commentary

The hourly rates currently paid to assigned counsel in Indiana range from $30-$60 per hour, with the majority of counties using a rate of $40 per hour for out-of-court time and $50 per hour for in-court time. For many attorneys, this barely covers the office overhead. This standard sets a minimum rate of $60 per hour and requires reimbursement for incidental out-of-pocket expenses. This standard also requires that counsel, upon request, be paid a monthly payment rather than waiting until the end of the case.

The case for adequate compensation for appointed counsel in criminal cases is well stated in the commentary to Standard 5.2-4 of ABA Providing Defense Services:

There are a variety of reasons for requiring that reasonable compensation be paid to assigned counsel. First, it is simply unfair to ask those lawyers who happen to have skill in trial practice and familiarity with criminal law and procedure to donate time to defense representation. It is worth remembering that the judge, prosecutor, and other officials in the criminal courtroom are not expected to do work for compensation that is patently inadequate. Lawyers do, of course, have a public service responsibility, but the dimension of the national need and constitutional importance of counsel is so great that it cannot be discharged by unpaid or inadequately compensated attorneys. Indeed, where payments for counsel are deficient, it is exceedingly difficult to attract able lawyers into criminal practice and to enhance the quality of the defense bar. But most important, the quality of the representation often suffers when adequate compensation for counsel is not available.

More than 25 years ago, the President's Crime Commission recommended that counsel be paid "a fee comparable to that which an average lawyer would receive from a paying client for performing similar services." President's Commission on Law Enforcement and Administration of Criminal Justice, Task Force Report: The Courts 67 (1967). Admittedly, an hourly rate of $60 per hour does not really measure up to the Crime Commission's recommendation and is quite modest when compared to what is commonly paid to attorneys in our society when a person's liberty is not at stake. In federal civil rights cases, for example, the fees are much higher than those paid to appointed lawyers in criminal cases. See, e.g., Von Clark v. Butler (5th Cir. 1990), 916 F.2d 225 (affirming attorneys' fees of $100 per hour for preparation time and $200 per hour for in-court time in civil rights claims of excessive use of force in arrest); Cobb v. Miller (5th Cir. 1987), 818 F.2d 1227 (mandating $90 per hour in civil rights litigation for damages resulting during plaintiffs arrest and conviction); Knight v. Alabama (AD. Ala. 1993), 824 F.Supp. 1022 (attorneys' fees in civil rights action of $275 per hour for lead counsel and rates ranging from $ 100 to $200 per hour for other attorneys held to be reasonable).

Yet, an hourly rate of $60 per hour will provide some improvement for defense counsel in Indiana indigent criminal cases. Moreover, if the Commission is able to reimburse counties 40% of their indigent defense expenses, there ought not to be any significant net increase for counties in their costs for defense services.

STANDARD I.

SUPPORT SERVICES. The comprehensive plan shall provide for investigative, expert, and other services necessary to provide quality legal representation consistent with Standard 5-1.4 of the American Bar Association Standards for Criminal Justice, Chapter 5: Providing Defense Services (3rd ed. 1990).

Commentary

Quality legal representation cannot be rendered unless defense lawyers have adequate support services available. Among these are secretarial, investigative, and expert services, which includes assistance at pre-trial release hearings and sentencing. In addition to personal services, this standard contemplates adequate facilities and equipment, such as computers, telephones, facsimile machines, photocopying, and specialized equipment required to perform necessary investigations.

STANDARD J.

CASELOADS OF COUNSEL. The comprehensive plan shall insure that all counsel appointed under the plan are not assigned caseloads which, by reason of their excessive size, interfere with the rendering of quality representation or lead to the breach of professional obligations. In determining whether the caseloads are excessive, the following caseload guidelines are recommended.

1. Caseloads for Counsel Without Adequate Support Staff. Salaried, contractual, or assigned counsel that do not have support staff consistent with Table 2 should generally not be assigned more than the number of cases in Table 1 in any one category in a 12-month period. The categories in Table 1 should be considered in the disjunctive. Thus, if counsel is assigned cases from more than one category, the percentage of the maximum caseload for each category should be assessed and the combined total should generally not exceed 100%.

Type of Case	Full Time	Part Time (50%)
TRIAL
All Felonies (for use in CR 24 compliance only)	120	60
Non-Capital Murder; Level 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5 Felonies	100	50
Level 6 Felonies only	150	75
Misdemeanors only	300	150
JD-Level 5 Felony and above	200	100
JD-Level 6 Felony	250	125
JD-Misd	300	150
JS-Juvenile Status	400	200
JC-Juvenile CHINS	120	60
JT-TPR	120	60
Juvenile Probation Violation	400	200
JM-Juvenile Miscellaneous	400	200
Other (e.g., probation violation, contempt, extradition)	300	150
APPEAL
Trial Appeal	20	10
Guilty Plea Appeal	40	20

- 2. Caseloads for Counsel With Adequate Support Staff. Salaried counsel with support staff consistent with Table 2 should generally not be assigned more than the number of cases in Table 3 in any one category in a 12-month period. The categories in Table 3 should be considered in the disjunctive. Thus, if counsel is assigned cases from more than one category, the percentage of the maximum caseload for each category should be assessed and the combined total should generally not exceed 100%.

Commentary

One of the most significant impediments to furnishing quality defense representation is the excessive caseloads imposed on salaried and contractual public defenders. Not even the most able and industrious lawyers can provide quality representation when their workloads are unmanageable. Excessive caseloads, moreover, lead to attorney frustration, disillusionment by clients, and undermine the integrity of the adversary system of criminal justice.

In an attempt to cope with the problem of excessive caseloads, eight states have established maximum caseload standards by statute or court rule. See Appendix A. All but one of these states have adopted caseload standards similar to the national caseload standards first formulated in 1973 by the National Advisory Commission on Criminal Justice Standards and Goals (NAC). In Standard 13.12, the NAC recommended the following maximum number of cases per year for a full-time public defender working in an office with support staff:

Felony Cases	not more than 150
Misdemeanor Cases	not more than 400
Juvenile Delinquency Petitions	not more than 200
Mental Health/Civil Commitment Proceedings	not more than 200
Appeals	not more than 25

The NAC caseload standards were subsequently endorsed by the National Legal Aid and Defender Association, and are used extensively throughout the country by evaluators, public defender managers, and funding sources. However, these standards have been criticized for being too high. In the 1988 report of the ABA's Special Committee on Criminal Justice in a Free Society, Criminal Justice in Crisis, the committee emphasized the assumptions underlying these recommended caseload standards:

Emphasis should be placed on the fact that these guidelines set the maximum conceivable caseload that an attorney could reasonably manage. These numbers are unrealistic in the absence of ideal support conditions or if the attorney is carrying any number of serious or complex cases or death penalty cases. Id., at p. 43, fn. 87.

As a result of these concerns and the reality that few, if any, public defender offices in Indiana currently have adequate support staff, the Commission adopted two caseload standards, one applicable to county public defender offices with adequate support staff and another standard for counties without adequate support staff. Table 3 is consistent with the NAC Standards and is applicable to counties with adequate support staff. However, the caseload standards which will be applicable to nearly all counties in Indiana are contained in Table 1, which reflects a reduction by 20-25 percent of the maximum number of cases that may be assigned in a year to one attorney.

Effective July 1, 2012, Table 2 (Support Staff to Attorney Ratio) was amended to reflect the change in support staff job descriptions that has occurred in law offices since this standard was adopted in 1995. Among the changes in the workplace are the significant increase in the use of computer technology that has made lawyers less dependent on secretarial assistance and the increased use of paralegals for witness interviews and document preparation. The result is that some public defender offices have created a position called "legal assistant" which can include secretarial, paralegal, and investigation duties. The revised Table 2 is designed to create more flexibility in job descriptions without changing the ratio of support staff to attorney. Table 2 retains three types of positions as a recommended guideline for staffing a public defender office. The determination of whether a public defender office has adequate support staff to utilize Table 3 for assessing maximum caseloads will be primarily determined by whether the office has .75 support staff for each full-time equivalent (FTE) attorney.

This standard uses the language "should generally not be assigned" in order to avoid a situation where a county would forfeit eligibility for state reimbursement merely because one of its public defenders was assigned a case or two in excess of the maximum number of caseloads in this standard. However, this language should not be interpreted to mean that the Commission will overlook substantial deviations from the caseload standards.

STANDARD K.

EXCESSIVE CASELOADS. The comprehensive plan shall contain policies and procedures regarding excessive caseloads and shall, at a minimum, contain the following provisions:

- 1. Individual Public Defenders. Whenever a salaried or contractual public defender determines, in the exercise of his or her best professional judgment, that the acceptance of additional cases or continued representation in previously accepted cases will lead to the furnishing of representation lacking in quality or to the breach of professional obligations, the attorney is required to inform the county public defender, if any, or other authorities designated by the plan to secure professional independence for indigent defense services in the county.

2. Chief Public Defenders. Whenever the chief public defender determines, in the exercise of his or her best professional judgment, that the acceptance of additional cases or continued representation in previously accepted cases will lead to the furnishing of representation lacking in quality or to the breach of professional obligations, the chief public defender is required to inform the appropriate judges and refuse to accept the appointment of additional cases.

Commentary

This standard is derived from ABA Providing Defense Services, Standard 5-5.3, which provides:

- (a) Neither defender organizations, assigned counsel nor contractors for services should accept workloads that, by reason of their excessive size, interfere with the rendering of quality representation or lead to the breach of professional obligations. Special consideration should be given to the workload created by representation in capital cases.
- (b) Whenever defender organizations, individual defenders, assigned counsel or contractors for services determine, in the exercise of their best professional judgment, that the acceptance of additional cases or continued representation in previously accepted cases will lead to the furnishing of representation lacking in quality or to the breach of professional obligations, the defender organization, individual defender, assigned counsel or contractor for services must take such steps as may be appropriate to reduce further appointments. Courts should not require individuals or programs to accept caseloads that will lead to the furnishing of representation lacking in quality or to the breach of professional obligations.

Standard K.1. is consistent with Rule 1.16 of the Indiana Rules of Professional Conduct which provides, in relevant part, as follows:

- (a) except as stated in paragraph (c) a lawyer shall not represent a client or, where representation has commenced, shall withdraw from the representation of a client if:
  - (1) the representation will result in violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct or other law;

(c) when ordered to do so by a tribunal, a lawyer shall continue representation notwithstanding good cause for terminating the representation.

The commentary to this rule states that "a lawyer should not accept representation in a matter unless it can be performed competently, promptly, without improper conflict of interest, and to completion." In addition, ABA Providing Defense Services, Standard 4-1.3(e), states that defense counsel "should not carry a workload that, by reason of its excessive size, interferes with the rendering of quality representation ....."

Standard K.2. reflects the Commission's belief that, rather than rely on collateral attacks in post-conviction proceedings in which ineffective assistance is litigated, the better approach is to prevent excessive caseloads by authorizing the chief public defender to refuse excessive assignments. This standard also reflects the belief that the determination of whether caseloads are excessive must be entrusted to the chief public defender, rather than to the courts or to county officials. Once it is determined that quality representation is impossible due to an inordinate workload, several options are available. If an assigned counsel panel is used for conflict cases, additional cases can be assigned to assigned counsel attorneys until the caseload is reduced to an acceptable level. A county may also contract with one or more attorneys to handle the public defender's excessive cases. Another option would be to rely upon the inherent authority of the court to appoint counsel on a case-by-case basis. This standard does not contain a preference for any one method of dealing with excessive cases. It merely requires that the county anticipate and plan for such a contingency if the county elects to have a public defender office and include it in the comprehensive plan.

STANDARD L.

CONTRACTS. The comprehensive plan shall contain provisions for contracts for defense services under I.C. 33-40-7-8, in the event that such contracts are used. The plan shall provide that contracts not be awarded primarily on the basis of costs and shall otherwise ensure quality legal representation. Procedures for the award of contracts should be published by the contracting authority substantially in advance of the scheduled date of award. The contracting parties should avoid provisions that create conflicts of interest between the contractor and clients. Contracts for services should include, but not be limited to, the following subjects:

- 1. the categories of cases in which the contractor is to provide services;
- 2. the term of the contract and the responsibility of the contractor for completion of cases undertaken within the contract term;
- 3. the basis and method for determining eligibility of persons served by the contract;
- 4. identification of attorneys who will perform legal representation under the contract and prohibition of substitution of counsel without prior approval;
- 5. a policy for conflict of interest cases and the provision of funds outside of the contract to compensate conflict counsel for fees and expenses;
- 6. supervision, evaluation, training and professional development;
- 7. provision of or access to an appropriate library;
- 8. a system of case management and reporting; and
- 9. the grounds for termination of the contract by the parties.

Commentary

Under I.C. 33-40-7-8, courts in counties with a population under 400,000 are authorized to contract with an attorney or group of attorneys to provide indigent defense representation. The majority of counties in Indiana have at least one court that uses a contract under this statute for providing indigent defense services. The National Criminal Defense Systems Study (National Institute of Justice 1986), estimated that 10% of the counties nationwide employed a contract program as the primary means of providing representation. The Bar Information Program of the ABA estimated that in 1992 that figure may be over 20%.

Nearly all contracts under I.C. 33-40-7-8 are fixed price contracts rather than fixed fee-per-case contracts. The determining characteristic of a fixed price contract is that the contracting lawyer or law firm agrees to accept an undetermined number of cases within an agreed upon contract period for a single, flat fee. The contracting attorney(s) are usually responsible for the cost of support services, investigation, and expert witnesses for all of the cases. Even if the actual caseload in the jurisdiction is higher than projected when the contract was signed, the contractor is responsible for providing representation in all cases without additional compensation.

This type of contract has been criticized because of its failure to assure that quality legal representation will be provided. In State v. Smith (1984), 681 P.2d 1374, 1381, the Arizona Supreme Court concluded that its state's contract defense system was unconstitutional:

- (1) The system does not take into account the time that the attorney is expected to spend in representing his share of indigent defendants;
- (2) The system does not provide for support costs for the attorney, such as investigators, paralegals and law clerks;
- (3) The system fails to take into account the competency of the attorney. An attorney, especially one newly-admitted to the bar, for example, could bid low in order to obtain a contract, but would not be able to adequately represent all of the clients assigned ... ; and
- (4) The system does not take into account the complexity of each case.

In addition, fixed price contracts have been criticized by both the National Legal Aid and Defender Association and the American Bar Association because they frequently result in, competitive bidding with the award going to the lowest bidder without regard to the quality of representation to be provided. In 1985, the American Bar Association's House of Delegates approved a resolution condemning the awarding of contracts for indigent defense services based solely on cost.

In some states, fixed fee-per-case contracts are used which specify a predetermined number of cases for a fixed fee per case. Frequently, funds for support services such as investigations, secretarial help, and expert witnesses are included in the contract. The contracting attorney typically submits a monthly bill indicating the number of cases handled during the period. Once the predetermined number of cases is reached, the contract can be re-negotiated or the attorneys can refuse additional appointments.

This standard is designed to prevent excessive caseloads resulting from the use of fixed price contracts and to avoid competitive bidding and the awarding of contracts based solely on cost. The standard reflects the Commission's belief that contracts under I.C. 33-40-7-8 should be consistent with the recommended elements of a contract for services contained in ABA Providing Defense Services, Standard 5-3.3(b), which provides:

Contracts for services should include, but not be limited to, the following subjects:

- i. the categories of cases in which the contractor is to provide services;
- ii. the term of the contract and the responsibility of the contractor for completion of cases undertaken within the contract term;
- iii. the basis and method for determining eligibility of persons served by the contract, consistent with standard 5-7. 1;
- iv. identification of attorneys who will perform legal representation under the contract and prohibition of substitution of counsel without prior approval;
- v. allowable workloads for individual attorneys, and measures to address excessive workloads, consistent with standard 5-5.3;
- vi. minimum levels of experience and specific qualification standards for contracting attorneys, including, special provisions for complex matters such as capital cases;
- vii. a policy for conflict of interest cases and the provision of funds outside of the contract to compensate conflict counsel for fees and expenses;
- viii. limitations on the practice of law outside of the contract by the contractor;
- ix. reasonable compensation levels and a designated method of payment;
- x. sufficient support services and reasonable expenses for investigative

- services, expert witnesses and other litigation expenses;
- xi. supervision, evaluation, training and professional development;
  - xii. provision of or access to an appropriate library;
  - xiii. protection of client confidences, attorney-client information and work product related to contract cases;
  - xiv. a system of case management and reporting;
  - xv. the grounds for termination of the contract by the parties.

STANDARD M.

TRAINING AND PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT. The comprehensive plan shall provide for effective training, professional development and continuing education of all counsel and staff involved in providing defense services at county expense.

Commentary

Criminal law is a complex and difficult legal area, and the defense of criminal cases requires special knowledge and training. The consequences of mistakes in defense representation can be substantial, including wrongful conviction and the loss of liberty.

Currently, continuing legal education training is provided for judges and prosecutors either at county expense or at no charge to the individuals through the Indiana Judicial Center and the Indiana Prosecuting Attorneys Council. Although specialized training is provided for defense attorneys through the Indiana Public Defender Council, these programs cost an average of $75 per day. The Commission believes that training provided to indigent defense counsel should be at least equal to that provided to judges and prosecutors.

STANDARD N.

COURT AUTHORIZED EXPENDITURES FOR PERSONS REPRESENTED BY RETAINED COUNSEL. The comprehensive plan shall authorize expenditures for investigative, expert, or other services for a person who has retained private counsel for trial or appeal when the person is unable to pay for the services and such services are necessary to prepare and present an adequate defense. Such services are eligible for reimbursement from the public defense fund if authorized by the court.

Commentary

This standard deals with the occasional situation where an accused can provide counsel but does not have funds for support services, such as an investigator or expert witness. In most courts, the only way to obtain such necessary services is for counsel to withdraw and petition for the appointment of a public defender. This practice is not necessarily in the best interest of the client or the taxpayer. Thus, this standard specifies that these services should be included in the comprehensive plan and be subject to reimbursement.

The Federal system provides for this situation in the following section:

18 U.S.C. § 3006A. Adequate representation of defendants

(a) Choice of plan.--Each United States district court, with the approval of the judicial council of the circuit, shall place in operation throughout the district a plan for furnishing representation for any person financially unable to obtain adequate representation in accordance with this section. Representation under each plan shall include counsel and investigative, expert, and other services necessary for adequate representation.

***

(e) Services other than counsel.--

(1) Upon request.--Counsel for a person who is financially unable to obtain investigative, expert, or other services necessary for adequate representation may request them in an ex parte application. Upon finding, after appropriate inquiry in an ex parte proceeding, that the services are necessary and that the person is financially unable to obtain them, the court, or the United States magistrate if the services are required in connection with a matter over which he has jurisdiction, shall authorize counsel to obtain the services.

Indiana law provides that a criminal defendant is not constitutionally entitled, at public expense, to any type or number of expert witness he desires to support his case. Kennedy v. State, 578 N.E.2d 633, 640 (Ind. 1991), cert. denied 503 U.S. 921, 112 S. Ct. 1299, 117 L.Ed.2d 521 (1992). A defendant who requests funds for an expert witness has the burden of demonstrating the need for that expert. Id. However, a trial court must provide a defendant access to experts where it is clear that prejudice will otherwise result. Id. See also, Harrison v. State, 644 N.E.2d 1243, 1253 (Ind. 1995), cert. denied ___ U.S. ___, 117 S.Ct. 307, 136 L.Ed.2d 224 (1996).

A request by retained private counsel for funds for investigation, expert, or other services should be made by motion to the court to declare the defendant indigent. The motion should be made ex parte and include the following information where appropriate:

- the client's affidavit of indigence
- disclosure of the attorney-client fee agreement including the hourly rate and the amount of the fee received by counsel at the time of the motion
- a particularized showing of need for the requested services.

Standards for Indigent Defense Services

[Approved by the Board of Governors June 3, 2011]

STANDARD ONE: Compensation

Standard:

Public defense attorneys and staff should be compensated at a rate commensurate with their training and experience. To attract and retain qualified personnel, compensation and benefit levels should be comparable to those of attorneys and staff in prosecutorial offices in the area.

For assigned counsel, reasonable compensation should be provided. Compensation should reflect the time and labor required to be spent by the attorney and the degree of professional experience demanded by the case. Assigned counsel should be compensated for out-of-pocket expenses.

Contracts should provide for extraordinary compensation over and above the normal contract terms for cases which require an extraordinary amount of time and preparation, including, but not limited to, death penalty cases. Services which require extraordinary fees shall be defined in the contract.

Attorneys who have a conflict of interest shall not have to compensate the new, substituted attorney out of their own funds.

Flat fees, caps on compensation, and lump-sum contracts for trial attorneys are improper in death penalty cases. Private practice attorneys appointed in death penalty cases should be fully compensated for actual time and service performed at a reasonable hourly rate with no distinction between rates for services performed in court and out of court. Periodic billing and payment should be available. The hourly rate established for lead counsel in a particular case should be based on the circumstances of the case and the attorney being appointed, including the following factors: the anticipated time and labor required in the case, the complexity of the case, the skill and experience required to provide adequate legal representation, the attorney's overhead expenses, and the exclusion of other work by the attorney during the case. Under no circumstances should the hourly rate for lead counsel, whether private or public defender, appointed in a death penalty case be less than $125 per hour (in 2006 dollars).

STANDARD TWO: Duties and Responsibilities of Counsel

Standard:

The legal representation plan shall require that defense services be provided to all clients in a professional, skilled manner consistent with minimum standards set forth by the American Bar Association, applicable state bar association standards, the Rules of Professional Conduct, case law and applicable court rules defining the duties of counsel and the rights of defendants in criminal cases. Counsel's primary and most fundamental responsibility is to promote and protect the interests of the client.

STANDARD THREE: Caseload Limits and Types of Cases

Standard:

1. The contract or other employment agreement or government budget shall specify the types of cases for which representation shall be provided and the maximum number of cases which each attorney shall be expected to handle.
2. The caseload of public defense attorneys shall allow each lawyer to give each client the time and effort necessary to ensure effective representation. Neither defender organizations, county offices, contract attorneys nor assigned counsel should accept workloads that, by reason of their excessive size, interfere with the rendering of quality representation. As used in this Standard, "quality representation" is intended to describe the minimum level of attention, care and skill that Washington citizens would expect of their state's criminal justice system.
3. General Considerations: Caseload limits reflect the maximum caseloads for fully supported full-time defense attorneys for cases of average complexity and effort in each case type specified. Caseload limits assume a reasonably even distribution of cases throughout the year.

The increased complexity of practice in many areas will require lower caseload ceilings. The maximum caseload limit should be adjusted downward when the mix of case assignments is weighted toward more serious offenses or case types that demand more investigation, legal research and writing, use of experts and/or social workers or other expenditure of time and resources. In particular, felony caseloads should be assessed by the workload required, and certain cases and types of cases should be weighted accordingly.

If a defender or assigned counsel is carrying a mixed caseload including cases from more than one category of cases, these standards should be applied proportionately to determine a full caseload. In jurisdictions where assigned counsel or contract attorneys also maintain private law practices, the caseload should be based on the percentage of time the lawyer devotes to public defense.

Definition of case: A case is defined as the filing of a document with the court naming a person as defendant or respondent, to which an attorney is appointed in order to provide representation.

4. Caseload Limits: The caseload of a full-time public defense attorney or assigned counsel shall not exceed the following:

150 Felonies per attorney per year; or

300 Misdemeanor cases per attorney per year; or in certain circumstances described below the caseload may be adjusted to no more than 400 cases, depending upon:

- The caseload distribution between simple misdemeanors and complex misdemeanors; or
- Jurisdictional policies such as post-filing diversion and opportunity to negotiate resolution of large number of cases as non-criminal violations;
- Other court administrative procedures that permit a defense lawyer to handle more cases; or

250 Juvenile Offender cases per attorney per year; or

80 open Juvenile Dependency cases per attorney; or

250 Civil Commitment cases per attorney per year; or

1 Active Death Penalty trial court cases at a time plus a limited number of non death penalty cases compatible with the time demand of the death penalty case and consistent with the professional requirements of Standard 3.2 supra; or

36 Appeals to an appellate court hearing a case on the record and briefs per attorney per year. (The 36 standard assumes experienced appellate attorneys handling cases with transcripts of an average length of 350 pages. If attorneys do not have significant appellate experience and/or the average transcript length is greater than 350 pages, the caseload should be accordingly reduced.)

STANDARD FOUR: Responsibility for Expert Witnesses

Standard:

Reasonable compensation for expert witnesses necessary to preparation and presentation of the defense case shall be provided. Expert witness fees should be maintained and allocated from funds separate from those provided for defender services. Requests for expert witness fees should be made through an ex parte motion. The defense should be free to retain the expert of its choosing and in no cases should be forced to select experts from a list pre-approved by either the court or the prosecution.

STANDARD FIVE: Administrative Costs

Standard:

1. Contracts for public defense services shall provide for or include administrative costs associated with providing legal representation. These costs should include but are not limited to travel, telephones, law library, including electronic legal research, financial accounting, case management systems, computers and software, office space and supplies, training, meeting the reporting requirements imposed by these standards, and other costs necessarily incurred in the day-to-day management of the contract.
2. Public defense attorneys shall have an office that accommodates confidential meetings with clients and receipt of mail, and adequate telephone services to ensure prompt response to client contact.

STANDARD SIX: Investigators

Standard:

1. Public defense attorneys shall use investigation services as appropriate.
2. Public defender offices, assigned counsel, and private law firms holding public defense contracts should employ investigators with investigation training and experience. A minimum of one investigator should be employed for every four attorneys.

STANDARD SEVEN: Support Services

Standard:

Public defense attorneys shall have adequate numbers of investigators, secretaries, word processing staff, paralegals, social work staff, mental health professionals and other support services, including computer system staff and network administrators. These professionals are essential to ensure the effective performance of defense counsel during trial preparation, in the preparation of dispositional plans, and at sentencing.

1. Legal Assistants - At least one full-time legal assistant should be employed for every four attorneys. Fewer legal assistants may be necessary, however, if the agency or attorney has access to word processing staff, or other additional staff performing clerical work. Defenders should have a combination of technology and personnel that will meet their needs.
2. Social Work Staff - Social work staff should be available to assist in developing release, treatment, and dispositional alternatives.
3. Mental Health Professionals - Each agency or attorney should have access to mental health professionals to perform mental health evaluations.
4. Investigation staff should be available as provided in Standard Six at a ratio of one investigator for every four attorneys.
5. Each agency or attorney providing public defense services should have access to adequate and competent interpreters to facilitate communication with non-English speaking and hearing-impaired clients for attorneys, investigators, social workers, and administrative staff.

STANDARD EIGHT: Reports of Attorney Activity

Standard:

The legal representation plan shall require that the defense attorney or office maintain a case-reporting and management information system which includes number and type of cases, attorney hours and disposition. This information shall be provided regularly to the Contracting Authority and shall also be made available to the Office of the Administrator of the Courts. Any such system shall be maintained independently from client files so as to disclose no privileged information.

A standardized voucher form shall be used by assigned counsel attorneys seeking payment upon completion of a case. For attorneys under contract, payment should be made monthly, or at times agreed to by the parties, without regard to the number of cases closed in the period.

STANDARD NINE: Training

Standard:

The legal representation plan shall require that attorneys providing public defense services participate in regular training programs on criminal defense law, including a minimum of seven hours of continuing legal education annually in areas relating to their public defense practice.

In offices of more than seven attorneys, an orientation and training program for new attorneys and legal interns should be held to inform them of office procedure and policy. All attorneys should be required to attend regular in-house training programs on developments in criminal law, criminal procedure and the forensic sciences.

Attorneys in civil commitment and dependency practices should attend training programs in these areas. Offices should also develop manuals to inform new attorneys of the rules and procedures of the courts within their jurisdiction.

Every attorney providing counsel to indigent accused should have the opportunity to attend courses that foster trial advocacy skills and to review professional publications and other media.

STANDARD ELEVEN: Monitoring and Evaluation of Attorneys

Standard:

The legal representation plan for provision of public defense services should establish a procedure for systematic monitoring and evaluation of attorney performance based upon publicized criteria. Supervision and evaluation efforts should include review of time and caseload records, review and inspection of transcripts, in-court observations, and periodic conferences.

Performance evaluations made by a supervising attorney should be supplemented by comments from judges, prosecutors, other defense lawyers and clients. Attorneys should be evaluated on their skill and effectiveness as criminal lawyers or as dependency or civil commitment advocates.

STANDARD TWELVE: Substitution of Counsel

Standard:

The attorney engaged by local government to provide public defense services should not sub-contract with another firm or attorney to provide representation and should remain directly involved in the provision of representation. If the contract is with a firm or office, the contracting authority should request the names and experience levels of those attorneys who will actually be providing the services, to ensure they meet minimum qualifications. The employment agreement shall address the procedures for continuing representation of clients upon the conclusion of the agreement. Alternate or conflict counsel should be available for substitution in conflict situations at no cost to the counsel declaring the conflict.

INTRODUCTION

The first edition of the standards concerning the function of the criminal defense lawyer (and the companion standards on the function of the prosecutor) represented the first national effort to collect in an organized way guidelines that have long been adhered to by the best defense advocates and best prosecutors. Because nearly ten years had elapsed since the first edition of the Defense Function standards was approved by the ABA, it was initially believed that it might be necessary to make major changes. However, as each standard was reviewed, debated, and compared with court decisions and recommendations of other groups, it was decided that most of the original black letter standards have stood the test of time. There are, of course, changes from the first edition, but they are for the most part relatively minor and blend well into the format of the standards as originally issued.

Like the first edition, this chapter contains standards pertaining to a wide variety of defense representation problems. Parts III–VIII govern the lawyer-client relationship, the investigation and preparation of cases, the control and direction of litigation, disposition without trial, trial, and duties of counsel after conviction. Part I contains general standards that do not neatly fit into any other subdivision, and part II concerns problems of access to counsel, which are dealt with more fully in the chapter on Providing Defense Services.

The black letter standards themselves also follow the format of the original edition of the Defense Function standards. Thus, the standards often refer to activity by a lawyer as “unprofessional conduct,” meaning that the conduct “is or should be made subject to disciplinary sanctions pursuant to codes of professional responsibility.” Where the term “unprofessional conduct” is not used, “the standard is intended as a guide to honorable professional conduct and performance.” See standard 4-1.1(f).

To a considerable degree, the changes that have been made in these standards are attributable to: (1) changes in concepts of what constitute the most acceptable defense practices, (2) significant legal developments, or, in several instances, (3) errors in phraseology contained in the first edition.

Standard 4-7.6(b) is an example of the first type of change. Contrary to the first edition, this standard now provides that defense counsel can vigorously cross-examine witnesses even when it is known or believed that they are testifying truthfully. Absent this permission, particularly in cases where the defendant does not plan to testify and has little or no defense, it was felt that defense lawyers would be unable, as a practical matter, to require the prosecution to prove its case beyond a reasonable doubt.

The second type of change is illustrated by standard 4-3.5(b), which declares that defense lawyers should ordinarily not represent codefendants in criminal cases, and further states that before such representation is undertaken the informed consent of the defendants should be made a matter of judicial record. This provision is intended to discourage the representation of codefendants and was inspired by the Supreme Court's 1978 decision in Holloway v. Arkansas.<sup>1</sup> Although the Supreme Court in Holloway did not require that a judicial record be made that codefendants consent to joint representation, it did emphasize the considerable risks to codefendants when a lawyer undertakes multiple representation.

Standard 4-7.6(d) is an example of the third type of change—an error in phraseology in the first edition. The original standard stated that a defense lawyer should not ask on cross-examination “a question which implies the existence of a factual predicate which the examiner knows he cannot support by evidence.” But the presence of evidence to support a factual predicate on cross-examination is not the generally accepted evidentiary test; the test is whether the examiner has a “good faith” belief in the existence of the factual predicate, and the black letter standard has been changed accordingly.

PART I. GENERAL STANDARDS

Standard 4-1.1. Role of defense counsel

(a) Counsel for the accused is an essential component of the administration of criminal justice. A court properly constituted to hear a criminal case must be viewed as a tripartite entity consisting of the judge (and jury, where appropriate), counsel for the prosecution, and counsel for the accused.

(b) The basic duty the lawyer for the accused owes to the administration of justice is to serve as the accused's counselor and advocate with courage, devotion, and to the utmost of his or her learning and ability and according to law.

(c) The defense lawyer, in common with all members of the bar, is subject to standards of conduct stated in statutes, rules, decisions of courts, and codes, canons, or other standards of professional conduct. The defense lawyer has no duty to execute any directive of the accused which does not comport with law or such standards. The defense lawyer is the professional representative of the accused, not the accused's alter ego.

1. 435 U.S. 475 (1978).

(d) It is unprofessional conduct for a lawyer intentionally to misrepresent matters of fact or law to the court.

(e) It is the duty of every lawyer to know the standards of professional conduct as defined in codes and canons of the legal profession and in this chapter. The functions and duties of defense counsel are governed by such standards whether defense counsel is assigned or privately retained.

(f) As used in this chapter, the term "unprofessional conduct" denotes conduct which, in either identical or similar language, is or should be made subject to disciplinary sanctions pursuant to codes of professional responsibility. Where other terms are used, the standard is intended as a guide to honorable professional conduct and performance. These standards are not intended as criteria for the judicial evaluation of alleged misconduct of counsel to determine the validity of a conviction. They may or may not be relevant in such judicial evaluation, depending upon all the circumstances.

Role of Defense Counsel

In our legal system, a court constituted to try a criminal case should consist of a judge (and jury), a prosecutor, and a defense lawyer, all essential to the fulfillment of the court's responsibility in the administration of criminal justice.<sup>1</sup> The defense counsel, in protecting the rights of the defendant, may resist the wishes of the judge on some matters, and though such resistance should never lead to disrespectful behavior, defense counsel may appear unyielding and uncooperative at times. In so doing, defense counsel is not contradicting his or her duty to the administration of justice but is fulfilling a function within the adversary system. The adversary system requires defense counsel's presence and zealous professional advocacy just as it requires the presence and zealous advocacy of the prosecutor and the constant neutrality of the judge. Defense counsel should not be viewed as impeding the administration of justice simply because he or she challenges the prosecution, but as an indispensable part of its fulfillment.

The role of counsel for the accused is difficult because it is complex, involving multiple obligations. Toward the client the lawyer is a counselor and an advocate; toward the prosecutor the lawyer is a professional adversary; toward the court the lawyer is both advocate for the client and counselor to the court. The lawyer is obliged to counsel the client against any unlawful future conduct and to refuse to implement any illegal conduct.<sup>2</sup> But included in defense counsel's obligations to the client is the responsibility of furthering the defendant's interest to the fullest extent that the law and the standards of professional conduct permit.<sup>3</sup>

Advocacy is not for the timid, the meek, or the retiring. Our system of justice is inherently contentious, albeit bounded by the rules of professional ethics and decorum, and it demands that the lawyer be inclined toward vigorous advocacy. Nor can a lawyer be half-hearted in the application of his or her energies to a case. Once a case has been undertaken, a lawyer is obliged not to omit any essential honorable step in the defense, without regard to compensation or the nature of the appointment. The lawyer privately retained is free to require assurance of payment of reasonable compensation; if the lawyer has been appointed to provide representation, compensation is governed by other criteria.<sup>4</sup>

Because the law is a learned profession, lawyers must take pains to guarantee that their training is adequate and their knowledge up-to-date in order to fulfill their duty as advocates. Even after the most comprehensive training in fundamentals there remains the final — and large — step of learning the art of advocacy.

The Limits of Professional Conduct

The “alter ego” concept of a defense lawyer, which regards the lawyer as a “mouthpiece” for the client, is fundamentally wrong, unethical, and destructive of the lawyer’s image; more important to the accused, perhaps, this pernicious idea is destructive of the lawyer’s usefulness.<sup>5</sup> The lawyer’s value to each client stems in large part from the lawyer’s independent stance, as a professional representative rather than as an ordinary agent. What the lawyer can accomplish for any one client depends heavily on his or her reputation for professional integrity. Court and opposing counsel will treat the lawyer with the respect that facilitates furthering the client’s interests only if the lawyer maintains proper professional detachment and conduct in accord with accepted professional standards.

It is fundamental that in relations with the court, defense counsel must be scrupulously candid and truthful in representations of any matter before the court.<sup>6</sup> This is not only a basic ethical requirement, but it is essential if the lawyer is to be effective in the role of advocate, for if the lawyer’s reputation for veracity is suspect, he or she will lack the confidence of the court when it is needed most to serve the client.

Familiarity with Professional Standards

Knowledge of the proper professional standards of conduct is obviously a prerequisite to their fulfillment. In recent years, both the law schools and the organized bar have taken steps to ensure that lawyers are cognizant of the standards governing their conduct. While no lawyer can perform adequately in ignorance of the applicable law, knowledge of the standards of conduct of the bar should receive the same priority as that accorded legal principles. There should be ongoing attention to ethical problems in law school curriculums and in continuing legal education programs. Likewise, the bar should undertake to see that every lawyer has access to the published standards of conduct and the decisions interpreting them.

Nature of Defense Counsel's Employment

Standards governing professional ethics apply equally to counsel for the poor and the rich, just as judges must apply the law equally to both. However, there are sometimes differences in the relation of lawyer and client arising from the nature of the lawyer's employment. A lawyer who is privately retained generally has the confidence of the client, who, after all, has made a conscious choice. The client's desire to retain the lawyer gives the lawyer's persuasion greater standing with the client; the threat of withdrawal may be enough to discourage any inclination of the client to engage in impropriety or to demand it of the lawyer. By contrast, the lawyer who is appointed or who serves in an organized defender office must win the confidence of the client, who usually has had no say in the choice of an advocate.<sup>7</sup> Such factors as the eminence of the lawyer will obviously affect the relationship, but it is clear that the nature of the employment will itself have an impact on the relationship. These standards have not been drawn in disregard of such considerations, but at no point has it been thought appropriate to set a different standard according to the nature of the employment. Although the difficulties of fulfilling the standards may vary in this respect, they will also vary according to many other circumstances of individual cases, none of which would justify discrimination in the application of the standards.

Relationship of Standards to Discipline and Judicial Decisions

The tensions of the role and the intensity of the pressure of multiple decisions during trial make it highly desirable that defense counsel be thoroughly familiar with these standards and imperative that counsel be knowledgeable of provisions of codes of professional responsibility governing the lawyer's conduct. Counsel's place in our adversary process of justice requires that counsel be guided constantly by the obligation to pursue the client's interests. Counsel must not be asked to limit zeal in the pursuit of those interests except by definitive standards of professional conduct.

The ABA Code of Professional Responsibility subscribes to the principle that disciplinary rules backed up by sanctions should be stated with specificity.<sup>8</sup> Thus, the ABA Code of Professional Responsibility is divided into three parts: the brief, broadly phrased canons; the discursive ethical considerations; and the precisely stated, detailed disciplinary rules. These standards and the Prosecution Function standards adhere to a somewhat similar pattern. The term "unprofessional conduct" in the black letter standards has been chosen to denote "conduct which, in either identical or similar language, is or should be made subject to disciplinary sanctions pursuant to codes of professional responsibility."<sup>9</sup> This category is reserved for those matters that are of the greatest gravity and that are susceptible to measurement with sufficient accuracy to permit the imposition of sanctions without unfairness to the transgressing lawyer. In other areas, which must necessarily be matters of delicate judgment, enforcement has been left to the individual conscience of the lawyer. Where these standards use phrases such as "the lawyer should," the recommendation is offered as advice to those who seek it and as a guide to the conduct of lawyers, but it is not intended that discipline be imposed on lawyers whose conduct falls short of the standard.

The commentary occasionally refers to judicial decisions involving issues of competency or effectiveness of counsel, insofar as such decisions cast light on standards that courts have concluded are applicable to the conduct of counsel. It is beyond the scope of these standards, however, to attempt to determine the conditions under which deviation from the recommendations herein warrants reversal or vacation of a conviction.

Prompt Disposition; Punctuality

Lack of punctuality in attendance at court disturbs the orderly processes of the court and inconveniences others waiting to be heard. It is costly in terms of wasted time of lawyers, witnesses, jurors, and the judge and staff. It is also a disservice to the client because of the risk that it may irritate the court or the jury. Failure to be punctual in court appearances may sometimes be grounds for punishment for contempt.<sup>1</sup> Punctuality in the filing of briefs and motions is also important.<sup>2</sup> As a corollary to counsel's obligation to be punctual, it is incumbent on counsel to do everything possible to see to it that the client and witnesses are punctual in their attendance at court. Where additional time is needed properly to prepare a case, the correct course is to seek a continuance.<sup>3</sup>

Misrepresentation to Obtain a Continuance

Paragraph (b) recognizes that it is "unprofessional conduct for defense counsel intentionally to mispresent facts or otherwise mislead the court in order to obtain a continuance." This position is fully consistent with provisions in the ABA Code of Professional Responsibility<sup>4</sup> and with court decisions.<sup>5</sup> Equivocation in stating the grounds for a continuance also has been held to warrant disciplinary censure.<sup>6</sup>

Delay for Tactical Advantage

A frequent complaint of the public against our system of justice is that excessive delays are permitted, which undermine the enforcement of law. This is perhaps as true today as when Roscoe Pound wrote about the problem around the turn of the century.<sup>7</sup> Because it is essential that legal procedures be calm and deliberative rather than hasty and unreflective, to some extent the legal process could never be as expeditious as popular sentiment might wish it, especially when that sentiment is inflamed by an outrageous crime or during a period of crisis in law enforcement.

One of the great temptations that befall a lawyer is to abuse procedure and employ dilatory tactics in order to gain time for the advantage of a client. Delays sought in the hope that testimony will be lost or become stale or that the prosecuting parties will be inconvenienced until they abandon the case, or to continue illegal activity or for other corrupt purposes, undermine the entire system. These practices also bring the bar into disrepute. Such tactics may backfire when judge and prosecutor realize they are being employed; stern judicial response may then operate to the disadvantage of an accused.<sup>8</sup> The abuse of procedure for purposes of delay ultimately leads to procedural restrictions that are harmful to those with legitimate needs. Thus, there is an obligation on the lawyer to "do everything possible to avoid delays and to expedite the trial."<sup>9</sup>

Since the reasons for invoking procedural devices that result in delay are buried in the mental processes of the lawyer, it is understandably difficult to enforce sanctions for the use of such devices. Indeed, an overly aggressive concern for delay may impel a lawyer to eschew a remedy which in good faith the lawyer believes should be pursued in the client's interest. It may also tend to imply that the law is more concerned with expedition than with justice, an implication that inevitably will cause disrespect for its processes and thus undermine its efficacy. To the extent that the procedural rules permit dilatoriness by the taking of certain procedural steps, the fault is in the procedure and in lax judicial administration, not alone in the lawyer's conduct. The remedy must come through reform of the procedural system. But instances undoubtedly do occur in which lawyers blatantly demand and courts grant delays without substantial cause, sometimes for crass motivations. Such conduct demeans the administration of justice. The responsibility must rest with counsel not to seek such favors<sup>10</sup> and with the courts to refuse to grant them.

Accepting an Excessive Volume of Work

Although lawyers, like other people, vary in their capacity for effective performance, there is a limit to how much work any one lawyer can effectively perform. Some sophisticated defendants have been known to engage a lawyer because the lawyer had so many cases on the calendar that normal priorities of the docket would preclude an additional case from trial for an inordinate period. Obviously it is improper for a lawyer to participate in such a fraud on the courts; apart from that, the lawyer has a duty to accept no more employment than can be effectively performed without unreasonable delay. Elsewhere these standards provide that "[n]either defender organizations nor assigned counsel should accept workloads that, by reason of their excessive size, interfere with the rendering of quality representation or lead to the breach of professional obligations."<sup>11</sup>

Personal Publicity

A minority of lawyers have sometimes exploited newsworthy cases for their own personal aggrandizement. Often this operates to the detriment of a particular client, and it is demeaning of the proper role of defense counsel. The opportunity for personal publicity may color the lawyer's professional judgment and lead the lawyer to take steps that are not in the best interests of clients, the profession, and, most important, the administration of justice.

Trial Publicity

The tendency of a minority of lawyers, including both prosecutors and defense counsel, to indulge in "trial by press" is a disservice to the client and to the fair administration of justice. Detailed provisions pertaining to fair trial/free press issues and the conduct of counsel in criminal cases are contained in these standards<sup>1</sup> and in codes of professional responsibility.<sup>2</sup> These guidelines strike a careful balance between the needs of the public for information and the necessity of preserving the fairness of the trial procedure. Moreover, they are designed to preserve and uphold the role of counsel as the advocate who defends the case by evidence and argument in the courtroom rather than by emotional and prejudicial appeal to the public outside the courtroom.

Standard 4-1.4. Advisory councils on professional conduct

(a) In every jurisdiction an advisory body of lawyers selected for their experience, integrity, and standing at the trial bar should be established as an advisory council on problems of professional conduct in criminal cases. This council should provide prompt and confidential guidance and advice to lawyers seeking assistance in the application of standards of professional conduct in criminal cases.

(b) Communications between a lawyer and such an advisory council should have the same privilege for protection of the client's confidences as exists between lawyer and client. The council should be bound by statute or rule of court in the same manner as a lawyer is bound not to reveal any disclosure of the client except

(i) if the client challenges the effectiveness of the lawyer's conduct of the case and the lawyer relies on the guidance received from the council, and

(ii) if the lawyer's conduct is called into question in an authoritative disciplinary inquiry or proceeding.

Commentary*Need for Advisory Councils

Disciplinary bodies of courts, local bars, and state bars interpret codes of professional responsibility and apply them in specific cases. These groups, however, invariably operate after the fact by way of judging questioned conduct rather than by acting as a council of advisers to lawyers who desire assistance and are in need of prompt answers. Bar advisory committees on legal ethics do deal with pending problems of lawyers, but the committees are often not constituted to act with the necessary dispatch. Moreover, these committees usually include a cross-section of the bar, so that many members are unfamiliar with the litigation or ethical problems submitted to them. In a bar in which trial lawyers are often a minority and defense lawyers an even smaller fraction, it is unlikely that many members of a disciplinary board or legal ethics committee of the bar will be thoroughly familiar with the problems confronted by defense lawyers in criminal cases.

The standards of the profession are steadfast in their fundamental principles, but their application is frequently difficult in criminal cases, requiring an intimate knowledge of practice and procedure in litigation problems available only to trial specialists. Accordingly, this standard recommends in paragraph (a) that "[i]n every jurisdiction an advisory body of lawyers selected for their experience, integrity, and standing at the trial bar . . . be established as an advisory council on problems of professional conduct in criminal cases." The purpose of the council is to "provide prompt and confidential guidance and advice to lawyers seeking assistance in the application of standards of professional conduct in criminal cases." Ordinarily the state bar, state bar association, or local bar association is the appropriate entity to initiate the creation of the advisory council.<sup>1</sup>

1. The advisory council idea is borrowed from England, where a somewhat similar body has existed for some years. See R. WALKER and M. WALKER, THE ENGLISH LEGAL SYSTEM 226 (4th ed. 1976).

Confidentiality of Advisory Council Opinions

One study has indicated that a major factor in determining whether a lawyer complies with the ethical standards of the profession is the extent of support the lawyer receives from professional colleagues when the lawyer is faced with a difficult ethical decision.<sup>2</sup> An important function of an advisory council is to provide that support. Jurisdiction over discipline should be entirely separate. The maintenance of a record of each inquiry and the response given will be beneficial if the lawyer's conduct is ever challenged again by a client, the bar, or the courts, while avoiding the prejudice to the client that might result if the lawyer were to make a record of the ethical dilemma with the judge or others not necessarily pledged to respect the client's confidence. The fact that a lawyer has made an inquiry to the council and its response should be privileged except in two circumstances. First, the privilege is waived if the lawyer's conduct is challenged by the client, as is already an established doctrine of law. Second, the privilege is waived if the lawyer's conduct becomes the subject of an investigation involving possible discipline for breach of professional standards. In the latter event, the record of the inquiry into the lawyer's conduct and the response may be made available to an authorized professional or judicial body conducting such investigation. The confidentiality of the lawyer's inquiry to the council does not protect the client if the client attacks counsel as ineffective, nor does it protect counsel charged with conduct contrary to the advice given him or her. Of course, the fact that a lawyer fails to follow the advice given by the council does not per se make the conduct improper, but it may be considered by the disciplinary body along with all the evidence. In short, the dialogue between the lawyer and the advisory council is generally confidential and privileged except that the accused may not take advantage of the privilege of confidentiality to injure the lawyer and the lawyer may not exploit it for personal benefit after having sought the advice of the council and failed to follow it.

This standard, although included in the first edition, appears not to have been implemented in any jurisdictions. Nevertheless, the standard has been retained because it is still believed that establishment of advisory councils is a sound idea. It remains exceedingly important for the legal profession to create a more prompt and reliable mechanism for supplying to defense counsel authoritative information for their guidance in criminal cases.

Standard 4-1.5. Trial lawyer's duty to administration of justice

(a) The bar should encourage through every available means the widest possible participation in the defense of criminal cases by experienced trial lawyers. Lawyers active in general trial practice should be encouraged to qualify themselves for participation in criminal cases both by formal training and through experience as associate counsel.

(b) All qualified trial lawyers should stand ready to undertake the defense of an accused regardless of public hostility toward the accused or personal distaste for the offense charged or the person of the defendant.

(c) Qualified trial lawyers should not assert or announce a general unwillingness to appear in criminal cases. Law firms should encourage partners and associates to appear in criminal cases.

Commentary

Goal of Wide Participation

Wide participation in the defense of criminal cases is important to the health of the administration of criminal justice and to the fulfillment of the bar's obligation to ensure the availability of qualified counsel to every accused. However, lawyers and judges are unanimous in acknowledging that not every lawyer licensed to practice is actually able to try a case in court effectively. Though only a fraction of all criminal cases go to trial, the judgment and experience of a trial lawyer are also essential in the process of negotiation leading to a disposition without trial. But the nature of a trial lawyer's experience in civil trial practice is such as to qualify the lawyer for participation in criminal practice if additional training and experience in criminal law and procedure is acquired. Such training is, of course, available through the large number of continuing legal education programs sponsored by state and local bars and by private organizations. "On the job" experience can be appropriately gained by assigning lawyers with little or no criminal trial experience to act as associate counsel to lawyers who are more experienced in the criminal courts.

By encouraging the significant number of lawyers who are now active only in the civil courts to obtain training and experience in criminal practice, and to make themselves available and willing to undertake the defense of criminal cases, the bar will take a significant step toward making certain that competent counsel is provided. At the same time, the participation in the criminal justice system of lawyers whose practice is largely in the civil courts will help avert the undesirable professional isolation of criminal trial specialists. The civil lawyer's familiarity and acquaintance with the procedures and problems of the administration of criminal justice may also encourage the lawyer to play a larger role in the reform and improvement of the criminal law and its processes.<sup>1</sup>

The highest tradition of the American bar is found in the obligation, in the lawyer's oath, never to reject "from any consideration personal to myself, the cause of the defenseless or oppressed." A lawyer has the duty to provide legal assistance "even to the most unpopular defendants."<sup>2</sup> The great tradition of the bar is reflected in the history of eminent lawyers — such as John Adams, who defended the British "redcoats" after the Boston Massacre — who have risked public disfavor to defend a hated defendant.<sup>3</sup> The sure way to guarantee adherence to this tradition of denying no defendant competent legal representation is for all trial

1. This standard complements provisions in ch. 5, Providing Defense Services, e.g., "Assignments should be distributed as widely as possible among the qualified members of the bar. lawyers to prepare themselves to act in criminal cases. Consistent with these standards, the ABA Code of Professional Responsibility admonishes lawyers not to decline proffered employment "lightly."<sup>4</sup> However, declining to accept a case is justified when "the intensity of . . . personal feeling, as distinguished from a community attitude, may impair . . . effective representation of a prospective client."<sup>5</sup>

Announced Unwillingness to Take Criminal Cases

Lawyers who unabashedly state that they do not practice in the criminal courts denigrate their role and function as advocates. The bar should discourage lawyers from privately or publicly proclaiming that they disdain criminal practice. In a more positive vein, the leaders of the trial bar should take the initiative in accepting criminal cases and in encouraging their juniors to do so. More than a decade ago, the President's Crime Commission suggested that "law firms should not discourage prospective associates from a 2- to 5-year stint of defense or prosecution work and should be willing to grant leaves of absence to those of its young lawyers who would like to spend a period in criminal practice and then return."<sup>6</sup> The commission also believed that "it is essential that law firms make lawyers available to handle assigned cases, or to assist a defender's office."<sup>7</sup>

In encouraging broader participation by trial lawyers in the criminal courts, these recommendations are not intended to imply that it is inappropriate for there to be a division of function within a given law office. In a firm of trial lawyers, for example, it is entirely proper for criminal cases to be directed to a particular member or members of the firm.

In the first edition, this standard stated that the duties of counsel to represent the client's legitimate interests did not differ regardless of whether the lawyer was "privately engaged, judicially appointed or serving as part of a legal aid system." This language has been deleted due to its overlap with standard 4-3.9. In addition, the reference to "judicially appointed" was deemed inappropriate since the chapter on Providing Defense Services recommends that "[t]he selection of lawyers for specific cases should not normally be made by the judiciary or elected officials. . . ."<sup>1</sup> The standard is otherwise unchanged, except for stylistic alterations.

Commentary

Although it occurs infrequently, lawyers sometimes, possibly for reasons of personal aggrandizement, pursue a particular course in a case at the expense of the client's best interests.<sup>2</sup> The problem is so subjective in nature that it does not lend itself to anything other than a broadly stated standard.

The natural desire to be in the forefront in developing new legal concepts obviously does not justify a lawyer's risking conviction and a severe sentence for the defendant, for example, where a lesser plea can be negotiated and probation secured, particularly if the prospects of a guilty verdict are strong. This standard emphasizes that the correct role of defense counsel is to strive not for "courtroom victories" but for results that best serve the client's long-range interests. The total "war" is not won by transitory victories in interlocutory battles. An appellate "victory" on a technical point may be a Pyrrhic victory if it is followed by a new trial in which the prosecution repairs technical infirmities and makes a stronger case against the defendant.

STAT. ANN. §481.10 (West 1971) ("All officers or persons having in their custody a person restrained of his liberty upon any charge or cause alleged, . . . upon request . . . shall notify any attorney residing in the county of the request for a consultation with him"); N.H. ANN. §594:15 (1974) ("The officer in charge of a police station . . . shall immediately secure from the prisoner, if possible, the name of the . . . attorney with whom the prisoner may desire to consult, and immediately notify such . . . attorney. . . . Notice shall be given by telephone or messenger when practicable").

nication should be permitted until arrangements for counsel have been completed. Communication facilities should be made available promptly following arrest. In terms of implementation, this may require not one but as many telephones as are reasonably needed to fill the need. One such telephone may be adequate in a small precinct station or jail; numerous phones may be needed in a larger facility. It is part of the function of defense counsel to engage the aid of the organized bar to ensure that adequate communication facilities are made available and that the services of an adequate number of lawyers are available.

This standard is consistent with a similar provision in the chapter on Providing Defense Services: "At the earliest opportunity a person in custody should be effectively placed in communication with a lawyer. There should be provided for this purpose access to a telephone, the telephone number of the defender or assigned-counsel program, and any other means necessary to establish communication with a lawyer."<sup>2</sup>

Standard 4-2.2. Referral service for criminal cases

(a) To assist persons who wish to retain counsel privately and who do not know a lawyer or how to engage one, every jurisdiction should have a referral service for criminal cases. The referral service should maintain a list of lawyers willing and qualified to undertake the defense of a criminal case; it should be so organized that it can provide prompt service at all times.

(b) ~~The availability of the referral service should be publicized.~~
In addition, notices containing the essential information about the referral service and how to contact it should be posted conspicuously in police stations, jails, and wherever else it is likely to give effective notice.

Referral Service

The ABA has energetically supported lawyer reference plans for many years, and hundreds of such plans are now in existence throughout the nation. Typically, a supervisory committee of the local bar selects and maintains a list of attorneys willing to participate and a referral officer is appointed to administer the system. Many plans permit lawyers to indicate those areas of law in which they feel they are specifically qualified. Some provide for screening by the supervisory committee to determine whether the lawyers possess the special skill they claim. Lawyer reference plans have been acclaimed as being "in the highest traditions of public service"<sup>1</sup> and are specifically sanctioned by the ABA Code of Professional Responsibility.<sup>2</sup>

The special problems of providing counsel in criminal cases require certain adjustments in the conventional lawyer reference system for all types of cases. Considerations of time and function suggest that a reference system for criminal cases should be somewhat separate from the ordinary referral service for civil cases. Given the urgency of the accused's need, it is imperative that access to the referral service be possible at any time of day or night, Sundays and holidays included. Telephone answering facilities make this feasible. The list of lawyers willing and able to serve in criminal cases should be compiled and maintained separately from the list of lawyers available for civil cases. The thrust of the referral service should be to provide immediate access to a lawyer who will respond promptly to calls from accused persons at a time of acute stress. The list should also be carefully screened by the supervisory committee so that it includes only lawyers qualified by experience to handle criminal cases. If the regular committee does not include enough lawyers active in criminal trial practice to make this possible, it should consult with such lawyers or a separate committee for referrals in criminal cases should be established. The screening of lawyers presumably will be somewhat simpler in those jurisdictions that certify practitioners as specialists in criminal law. Careful screening hopefully will lead to a situation in which inclusion on the referral list will be considered a badge of distinction among trial lawyers, thus serving the goal of broadening participation in the criminal courts.

Publicity and Notices

A lawyer referral service cannot fulfill its function without publicity to make its existence and purpose known to those who need it. In addition to making the referral plan generally known to the public, there is the special need in criminal cases to give widespread notice of its existence, its purpose, and the manner of contacting the service at those places where accused persons are taken into custody. The idea of posted notice has been adopted in statutory provisions designed to assist accused persons in communicating with counsel.<sup>3</sup>

Standard 4-2.3. Prohibited referrals

(a) It is unprofessional conduct for a lawyer to accept referrals by agreement or as a regular practice from law enforcement personnel, bondsmen, or court personnel.

(b) Regulations and licensing requirements governing the conduct of law enforcement personnel, bondsmen, court personnel, and others in similar positions should prohibit their referring an accused to any particular lawyer and should require them, when asked to suggest the name of an attorney, to direct the accused to the referral service or to the local bar association if no referral service exists.

mission is paid to a law enforcement officer for the referral of cases, or where other benefits or "rewards" are given, there is the highly undesirable temptation for the officer to make arrests or to adjust his or her evaluation of probable cause in order to obtain compensation from the lawyer to whom the case is referred.

The mere existence of any arrangement with lay intermediaries may result in a layperson's exercising control over the lawyer's conduct of the case. This practice is forbidden because of the danger that someone who is not subject to the professional discipline of the bar will attempt to dictate the tactics to be used.<sup>2</sup> If the referral is made by law enforcement personnel, the conflict between their public duty and private interest is apparent. Any solicitation of criminal cases through laypersons is ground for disbarment of a lawyer.<sup>3</sup> However, under proper limitations a legitimate organization may undertake to provide legal services for its own members.<sup>4</sup>

The prohibition of the payment of a fee for the referral of a case also applies to payments by one lawyer to another. A division of fees between lawyers must be on the basis of services rendered to the client and responsibility assumed by the lawyer. A "forwarding" fee is thus impermissible.<sup>5</sup> Payment of such a fee undermines the concept that professional compensation is only for services rendered, and may result in either a client being charged more than he or she should be for services rendered or a lawyer rendering less service than charged for in an effort to offset the fee. In some states the payment of such a fee is not considered unprofessional conduct. There is evidence, however, that lawyers do not always respect the fee splitting prohibitions of the bar.<sup>6</sup>

Regardless of the factor of compensation, the acceptance of regular referrals entails many of the pernicious consequences of compensated solicitation. Even where the police officer, bondsman, or court attaché making the referral is motivated by friendship for the lawyer or honest sympathy for the defendant's plight, the potential for abuse is substantial. A potential conflict of interest exists, for example, when the person making the referral is a police officer regardless of whether or not compensation is involved, since the officer may be called as a witness in the proceedings. Moreover, any practice of police referrals is likely to direct the defense of criminal cases into the hands of a few lawyers, and not necessarily to the competent and ethical members of the bar.<sup>7</sup>

These prohibitions do not preclude a lawyer from accepting referrals from a member of the clergy or other person comparably situated.

Regulation of Police Officers, Court Personnel, Bondsmen, and Others

Unprofessional referral practices that have existed in some jurisdictions cannot be extirpated by action taken against participating lawyers alone. To be effective, sanctions must be directed at all parties to the transaction. Some major police departments have provided by departmental regulation that an officer may not recommend a lawyer to a person in custody. Such regulations should be universal. Likewise, those responsible for the licensing or supervision of bondsmen, or others in a position to be tempted to make such referrals, should undertake to discourage the practice by the imposition of appropriate sanctions pursuant to regulations. Undoubtedly, court rules could aid in achieving this goal in many jurisdictions.

Confidentiality

Nothing is more fundamental to the lawyer-client relationship than the establishment of trust and confidence. Without it, the client may withhold essential information from the lawyer. Thus, important evidence may not be obtained, valuable defenses neglected, and, perhaps most significant, the lawyer may not be forewarned of evidence that will be presented by the prosecution. The obligation of confidentiality in the lawyer-client relation has been established to encourage candor and full disclosure. The ABA Code of Professional Responsibility reflects the ancient doctrine that a lawyer must preserve all confidences that relate to the representation of the accused.<sup>1</sup> There are several well-established exceptions to the duty of confidentiality: the lawyer is free of the obligation to the extent necessary to defend his or her own conduct where the client has called the lawyer's conduct into question, as in a postconviction proceeding or disciplinary proceeding against the lawyer,<sup>2</sup> and the lawyer may disclose, and indeed may be obligated to disclose, the client's stated intention to commit a crime at a future time.<sup>3</sup>

Control of Conduct of a Case

Part V of this chapter deals with the necessity of the lawyer's controlling all technical legal aspects of the defense. However, since laypersons may not understand the reasons and need for the degree of control that the lawyer must have, it is essential that it be clarified at the inception of the lawyer-client relationship. Accordingly, the commentary to standard 4-5.2, which deals more specifically with control and direction of the case, is applicable here.

Facilities for Private Interview

Even if accused persons are permitted to contact a lawyer and counsel is allowed to see the client, the assistance of counsel cannot be rendered fully unless interviews can be held in private and at convenient times. This is true while an accused is in custody pending trial or while incarcerated after conviction if an appeal or a postconviction proceeding is pending or contemplated.

But these matters should not be relegated to postconviction relief or the seeking of court orders before and during trial. Regulations governing custodial institutions and rules of court should provide for adequate opportunities for consultation between lawyer and client. Unfortunately, some jail regulations limit the hours and frequency of consultations in a manner that severely restricts necessary lawyer-client discussions. Restrictions to weekdays during daytime hours, for example, may make such interviews unduly expensive in terms of the lawyer's time or may intrude on the lawyer's other obligations. Courts, in formulating reasonable provisions and in drafting regulations pertaining to them, should emphasize flexibility in all arrangements for lawyer-client contacts. Defense counsel should protest any barriers to reasonable lawyer-client communication.

On a number of occasions courts have been called upon to consider invasions of privacy of attorney-client interviews. Placing a guard in a position to overhear conversations between lawyer and client has been held to be a violation of the right to counsel.<sup>4</sup> It is not necessary that disclosure to the prosecution be shown; the risk of disclosure and the inhibiting effect on full communication are sufficient.<sup>5</sup> Courts have looked even more harshly on secretive encroachment on the privacy of interviews, obviously because in these situations the lawyer and client have acted in the belief that privacy had been afforded. Convictions have been reversed and new trials ordered where telephone conversations between lawyer and client were intercepted<sup>6</sup> or where an informant for the prosecution was present during the interview.<sup>7</sup> At least one court has held that eavesdropping on the discussions between defense counsel and defendant in an interview room at the jail via a hidden microphone created such ineradicable prejudice to the defense that a new trial was not permitted and the case was dismissed.<sup>8</sup> A responsibility rests heavily on the courts, the bar, and law enforcement authorities to see that such invasions of the privacy of the lawyer-client relation do not occur. Law enforcement personnel should be educated concerning the vital interest that society has in maintaining that privacy, and appropriate measures should be taken at all levels to see that it is ensured.

Correspondence Between Lawyer and Client; Censorship of Mail

It is fundamental that the communication between client and lawyer be untrammelled. Courts frequently struggle with the question of censorship of correspondence between prisoner and lawyer.<sup>9</sup> A traditional reluctance to interfere in prison administration and concern for the security of such institutions have led courts to uphold censorship regulations that they have found to be reasonable. The Supreme Court has held that a state may constitutionally require that mail from an attorney to a prisoner be identified as such and that the attorney's name and address appear on the communication and, as a protection against contraband, that the authorities may open such mail in the inmate's presence.<sup>10</sup> The Court further noted that "the ability to open the mail in the presence of inmates . . . could in no way constitute censorship, since the mail would not be read. Neither could it chill such communications, since the inmate's presence insures that prison officials will not read the mail."<sup>11</sup>

The reading by prison officials of correspondence between prisoners and their lawyers inhibits communication and impairs the attorney-client relationship, may compel time-consuming and expensive travel by the lawyer to assure confidentiality, or even prevent legitimate grievances from being brought to light. This standard insists that censorship be prohibited with respect to all correspondence between lawyer and client concerning a pending or prospective case or appeal.<sup>12</sup>

Standard 4-3.2. Interviewing the client

(a) As soon as practicable the lawyer should seek to determine all relevant facts known to the accused. In so doing, the lawyer should probe for all legally relevant information without seeking to influence the direction of the client's responses.

(b) ~~It is unprofessional conduct for the lawyer to instruct the client or to intimate to the client in any way that the client should not be candid in revealing facts so as to afford the lawyer free rein to take action which would be precluded by the lawyer's knowing of such facts.~~

Commentary*Securing Facts from the Client

The client is usually the lawyer's primary source of information for an effective defense. An adequate defense cannot be framed if the lawyer does not know what is likely to develop at trial. The lawyer needs to know essential facts, including the events surrounding the act charged, information concerning the defendant's background, and the defendant's record of prior convictions, if any. In criminal litigation, as in other matters, information is the key guide to decisions and action. The lawyer who is ignorant of the facts of the case cannot serve the client effectively.

The client, whether innocent or guilty, often knows facts that may tend to be incriminating. For example, though the defendant may be innocent, he or she may have been near the scene of the crime at the time it was committed and hence be reluctant to disclose that fact to the lawyer for fear the lawyer will lose confidence in his or her innocence and thus fail to pursue the case zealously. The lawyer must recognize this reluctance and overcome it in order to obtain the facts necessary for an effective defense.

Defense counsel has sometimes been depicted as following the strategy of informing the client of the legal consequences of various factual situations in order to influence the client to adopt the factual version most favorable to a legal defense, for example, the claim of insanity.<sup>1</sup> A lawyer who follows this course handicaps an effective defense by promoting ignorance of facts that may ultimately be revealed at trial.

Calculated Ignorance of Facts by the Lawyer

The most flagrant form of "intentional ignorance" on the part of defense lawyers is the tactic of advising the client at the outset not to admit anything to the lawyer that might handicap the lawyer's freedom in calling witnesses or in otherwise making a defense. This tactic is most unfortunate in that the lawyer runs the risk of being the victim of surprise at trial. A lawyer should make clear to the client the imperative need to know all aspects of the case; the lawyer should explain that all of the client's statements and those of other witnesses must be fully investigated. To secure candid disclosure from the client of facts that are often both incriminating and embarrassing, the client must be sure that these facts will not be divulged by the lawyer. Accordingly, an explanation of the privileged status of all information acquired from the client should be given in most cases, unless it is clear that the client is sophisticated enough to understand the lawyer's obligation of confidentiality.<sup>2</sup>

Standard 4-3.3. Fees

(a) In determining the amount of the fee in a criminal case, it is proper to consider the time and effort required, the responsibility assumed by counsel, the novelty and difficulty of the questions involved, the skill requisite to proper representation, the likelihood that other employment will be precluded, the fee customarily charged in the locality for similar services, the gravity of the charge, the experience, reputation, and ability of the lawyer, and the capacity of the client to pay the fee.

(b) It is unprofessional conduct for a lawyer to imply that compensation of the lawyer is for anything other than professional services rendered by the lawyer or by others for the lawyer.

(c) It is unprofessional conduct for a lawyer to enter into an agreement for, charge, or collect an illegal or clearly excessive fee.

(d) It is unprofessional conduct for a lawyer to divide a fee with a nonlawyer, except as permitted by the Code of Professional Responsibility. A lawyer may share a fee with another lawyer only on the basis of their respective services and responsibility in a case, in accordance with the Code of Professional Responsibility.

(e) It is unprofessional conduct for a lawyer to enter into an arrangement for, charge, or collect a contingent fee for representing a defendant in a criminal case.

2. Both "confidences" and "secrets" are protected pursuant to the Code of Professional Responsibility. "'Confidence' refers to information protected by the attorney-client privilege under applicable law, and 'secret' refers to other information gained in the professional relationship that the client has requested be held inviolate or the disclosure of which would be embarrassing or would be likely to be detrimental to the client." Commentary*Determination of Fee

The factors to be properly considered in establishing a lawyer's compensation trace back at least as far as an ordinance of the City of London of 1280.<sup>1</sup> The factors listed in paragraph (a) to be considered by defense counsel in setting a fee are substantially the same factors set forth in the Code of Professional Responsibility.<sup>2</sup> Since it is common for lawyers to accept criminal cases only if the fee is paid or assured in advance, this requires that factors of time and effort be carefully estimated.

Implication That Fee Is for Other Than Professional Services

Clients in criminal cases are sometimes more willing to pay lawyers for results secured by unethical conduct than for skillful representation within the law and the rules of professional conduct. A lawyer should scrupulously avoid permitting an impression that the fee will be used for undefined purposes or vaguely defined purposes that may be interpreted as including bribery, or that the service provided has a special value because of the lawyer's relationship to the prosecutor, judge, or other officials or because of any factors unrelated to the lawyer's professional services. The creation of such an impression has been held to be ground for professional discipline.<sup>3</sup>

Overreaching

It is generally accepted in the United States that attorneys' fees are a matter of agreement between lawyer and client, although the lawyer should be guided by the considerations enumerated in paragraph (a). However, it is clear that a lawyer may be disciplined where a fee is flagrantly excessive or results from overreaching of the client.<sup>4</sup> In criminal cases, because of the intensity of the values at stake, there is a special danger that a lawyer may exploit a client's apprehensions and difficulties to the lawyer's pecuniary advantage. As a result, disciplinary measures should be invoked when such overreaching can be clearly demonstrated. A lawyer who demands that the client pay an additional fee on the eve of trial beyond that which had been previously agreed is particularly suspect,<sup>5</sup> since once the relationship of lawyer and client has been established the lawyer stands in a fiduciary relationship to the client and no longer can claim that the additional fee demanded in those circumstances results from arm's-length bargaining.<sup>6</sup> Misrepresentation to the client of the extent of the client's predicament is a form of overreaching that should lead to discipline.

Family ties and loyalties often lead others to offer financial assistance to an accused, even though they are not legally obligated to pay for the defense. While it is not improper for a lawyer to accept fees derived from such sources if no conflict of interest results,<sup>7</sup> a lawyer should avoid the appearance of overreaching that in some circumstances may follow if the lawyer urges the accused to appeal to such sources. A fortiori, the lawyer should not bypass the client and appeal directly to family and friends except when requested to do so by a client in custody.

Division of Fees

Any division of fees with laypersons is prohibited because of its tendency to promote control of the conduct of the case by one who is not subject to professional discipline. There is also the danger of a conflict of interest between the client and the person who shares in the fee.<sup>8</sup> The layperson's "fee" is also an added cost to the client.

8. Cf. ABA, CODE OF PROFESSIONAL RESPONSIBILITY DR5-107.

Division of fees with another lawyer is also prohibited except on the basis of a fair division of responsibility and services in a case.<sup>9</sup> The practice of lawyers sharing a "forwarding" fee to be paid out of the fee charged by the lawyer seems to be widespread, however.

Contingent Fees

Fees contingent upon the successful disposition of a case have long been prohibited in criminal cases.<sup>10</sup> Such fee arrangements may tempt the advocate to employ improper or corrupt tactics to enhance the fee. Although the contingent fee conflicts with the principle that the lawyer should not have a pecuniary interest in the litigation, it has been regarded as necessary in some civil cases lest a large segment of the public be denied the opportunity to litigate just claims because of lack of financial capacity. In the administration of criminal justice the stakes are high, and thus the danger of abuse resulting from a contingent fee is especially great. Moreover, the right to counsel is guaranteed by the Constitution in criminal cases, and accused persons therefore should not have to fear a lack of legal representation.

An agreement for payment of an additional fee contingent on acquittal is prohibited. However, an agreement for payment of one amount if the case is disposed of without trial and a larger amount if it proceeds to trial is not a contingent fee but merely an attempt to relate the fee to the time and service involved.

Commentary

A grave conflict of interest can arise out of an agreement between a lawyer and an accused giving the lawyer the right to publish books, plays, articles, interviews, pictures, or related literary rights concerning the case. First, it violates the fiduciary relation by dealing with one's own client on matters apart from professional advocacy. Second, the client is not a free agent, particularly if the client does not have independent legal advice concerning the extraneous transaction. Third, it may place the lawyer under temptation to conduct the defense with an eye on the literary aspects and its dramatic potential. If such an arrangement or contract is part of the fee, in lieu of the fee, or a condition of accepting the employment, it is especially reprehensible. The "inside story" of a sensational criminal case can produce literary royalties and other economic benefits largely in excess of a normal fee for the conduct of the case. Finally, such an arrangement may constitute a blatant form of self-touting, which ought not be engaged in by members of the bar. There also are serious risks in disclosing facts of the client's case to third parties inasmuch as such disclosures may violate the attorney-client privilege.

Standard 4-3.5. Conflict of interest

(a) At the earliest feasible opportunity defense counsel should disclose to the defendant any interest in or connection with the case or any other matter that might be relevant to the defendant's selection of a lawyer to represent him or her.

(b) Except for preliminary matters such as initial hearings or applications for bail, a lawyer or lawyers who are associated in practice should not undertake to defend more than one defendant in the same criminal case if the duty to one of the defendants may conflict with the duty to another. The potential for conflict of interest in representing multiple defendants is so grave that ordinarily a lawyer should decline to act for more than one of several codefendants except in unusual situations when, after careful investigation, it is clear that:

(i) no conflict is likely to develop;

(ii) the several defendants give an informed consent to such multiple representation; and

(iii) the consent of the defendants is made a matter of judicial record. In determining the presence of consent by the defendants, the trial judge should make appropriate inquiries respecting actual or potential conflicts of interest of counsel and whether the defendants fully comprehend the difficulties that an attorney sometimes encounters in defending multiple clients.

In some instances, accepting or continuing employment by more than one defendant in the same criminal case is unprofessional conduct.

(c) In accepting payment of fees by one person for the defense of another, a lawyer should be careful to determine that he or she will not be confronted with a conflict of loyalty since the lawyer's entire loyalty is due the accused. It is unprofessional conduct for the lawyer to accept such compensation except with the consent of the accused after full disclosure. It is unprofessional conduct for a lawyer to permit a person who recommends, employs, or pays the lawyer to render legal services for another to direct or regulate the lawyer's professional judgment in rendering such legal services.

(d) It is unprofessional conduct for a lawyer to defend a criminal case in which the lawyer's partner or other professional associate is or has been the prosecutor.

History of Standard

There has been added to paragraph (b) the requirement that the consent of multiple defendants be "made a matter of judicial record" before the joint representation of such defendants is undertaken. Also added to paragraph (b) is the statement that it is the trial judge's duty to determine that defendants who consent to multiple representation do so with full understanding of the implications of their decision. Specifically, paragraph (b) now provides that "the trial judge should make appropriate inquiries respecting actual or potential conflicts of interest of counsel and whether the defendants fully comprehend the difficulties that an attorney sometimes encounters in defending multiple clients." This language is based on a provision that appeared in original Function of the Trial Judge standard 3.4(b). Finally, paragraph (b) now recognizes that "[i]n some instances" representation of multiple defendants may constitute "unprofessional conduct." In addition, there are stylistic changes.

Disclosure of Conflict of Interest

The obligation of an attorney to disclose to a potential client any relationship to other parties or the subject matter of the case that might undermine or draw into question the attorney's ability to guard the client's confidences and zealously pursue the client's interest governs members of the bar in all aspects of their professional activity.<sup>1</sup> In a criminal case this responsibility rests heavily on the lawyer because the circumstances of the lawyer's initial contact with the client are likely to render the client less sensitive to such considerations or less capable of understanding them. In most instances, the client's confrontation with the criminal law will loom so large that the client will be eager to obtain any representation as soon as possible and thus will not be particularly cautious in evaluating a potential conflict even when it has been disclosed.

While the obligation to disclose a conflicting interest is most apparent when the lawyer has other loyalties that might cause a diminution in zeal of representation, there is a more subtle type of conflict that must also be avoided. Counsel may see in a criminal case an opportunity to further personal or general social interests that are not those of the client. The lawyer who takes a criminal case because of anticipated publicity is in danger of taking action that furthers the interest of the lawyer's publicity at the expense of reaching a quieter disposition more favorable to the client. Another possibility for conflict exists where counsel wishes to test the constitutionality of a law under which the accused is charged although a plea to a minor offense is available. The decision must be made on the basis of the client's best interests, uninfluenced by the lawyer's self-interest in being identified with a "landmark case."

Another subtle type of conflict may arise where a lawyer habitually appears before a certain court or negotiates with a particular prosecutor. The lawyer, in pressing a particular client's case zealously, may risk antagonizing the judge or prosecutor in a way that might prove harmful in later relations with them in other cases. The basic rule that must guide every lawyer is that the lawyer's total loyalty is due each client in each case; the lawyer must never permit the pressing of one point or one case to be guided or influenced by the demands of another case. The risk of jeopardizing other cases, if it in fact exists, presents a conflict that must be resolved in such a way that the immediate responsibility is faithfully discharged.<sup>2</sup>

Representation of Codefendants

Normally, joint representation of codefendants in criminal cases should not occur, except for preliminary matters such as initial hearings or bail proceedings. Where joint representation does take place, it should be preceded by a "careful investigation" from which it is determined "that (i) no conflict is likely to develop; (ii) the several defendants give an informed consent to such multiple representation; and (iii) the consent of the defendants is made a matter of judicial record." This standard is based on the belief that conflicts of interest are either present or potentially present in the great majority of criminal cases where codefendants are represented by the same lawyer or law firm.<sup>3</sup> Whenever there are multiple defendants, frequently there are factual differences in the prosecutor's case against them or in their defense to the charges, or, at the very least, differences in their backgrounds and social history that are relevant at sentencing. Where the differences are patent, separate counsel are obviously essential. If, for example, defendant X states that defendant Y committed the offense, and vice versa, the same attorney clearly cannot represent both parties.

2. This problem is one of the arguments sometimes invoked against the desirability of full-time defender programs. There is evidence, however, that the inbred adversary tendencies of the lawyers from such offices are sufficient protection. See, e.g., SPECIAL COMMITTEE OF THE ASSOCIATION OF THE BAR OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK & NLADA, EQUAL JUSTICE FOR THE ACCUSED 61, 71, 74 (1959). In private defense representation and in prosecution offices many of these same risks are present to some degree. Here, too, the innate competitive instincts of the advocate and the integrity of the bar are society's protection.

3. If a single lawyer should not represent codefendants, it follows that "no partner, or associate, or any other lawyer affiliated with him or his firm, may accept or continue such employment." ABA, CODE OF PROFESSIONAL RESPONSIBILITY DR5-105(D).

Frequently, however, the differences or conflicts are more subtle but still make effective, zealous representation of all defendants impossible. During the plea negotiation stage, for example, a lawyer cannot urge identically favorable plea agreements for all of the defendants unless all are identically situated. The presence of even slight differences in the backgrounds of defendants or in their cases (e.g., one defendant held a gun while the other served as a lookout) means that strong advocacy to the prosecutor on behalf of one codefendant necessarily undermines, by comparison, the position of other defendants. Similar problems are experienced by counsel during trial, whether the issue is deciding what questions to ask on direct examination or cross-examination, which witnesses will testify, or what evidence to introduce. Questions, testimony, or evidence that is particularly beneficial to one defendant may indirectly reflect adversely on other defendants. The difficulty for an attorney is especially acute when it comes to arguing the cases of multiple defendants to the fact finder. Unless the prosecutor's evidence against the defendants and their defenses is identical, attempts by counsel to exploit weaknesses in evidence against one defendant necessarily make the case against other defendants appear stronger.

Moreover, the fact of multiple representation means that the statements of the accused to the lawyer are not given in full confidence. Defense counsel must confront each defendant with any conflicting statements made by others in the course of planning the defense of the cases. In this situation, the lawyer may have to "judge" the clients to determine which is telling the truth, and the lawyer's role as advocate is undermined for one if not all defendants.

If defense counsel does somehow manage to survive the pretrial, trial, and plea stages without confronting either an implicit or explicit conflict in the representation of multiple defendants, conflict problems are likely to be encountered at sentencing. Since the backgrounds of codefendants invariably differ to some degree, an attorney for multiple defendants must be exceedingly careful in arguments related to sentencing, lest it appear that the attorney is favoring one defendant for leniency in contrast to others. At sentencing, just as at all other stages of criminal proceedings, a defendant is entitled to a lawyer who will aggressively advocate his or her cause and who is able to do so without concern for the effects of the representation on any other defendants.<sup>4</sup>

There may, of course, be some situations where codefendants desire the same attorney, have totally consistent defenses and similar backgrounds, and would be spared the expense of higher legal fees incident to separate counsel. Moreover, neither the Code of Professional Responsibility nor decisions of the Supreme Court prohibit representation of multiple defendants in criminal cases. The code urges that a lawyer "decline . . . employment if the exercise of his independent professional judgment in behalf of a client will be or is likely to be adversely affected . . . or if [the employment] would be likely to involve him in representing differing interests. . . ."<sup>5</sup> But even in these situations, representation of multiple clients is still permitted by the code if it is "obvious" that each client can be "adequately" represented and where each client consents after full disclosure of the possible conflict of interest.<sup>6</sup> While the Supreme Court has not prohibited joint representation of criminal defendants, the Court has held that whenever impermissible joint representation occurs, reversal is automatic and no particularized showing of prejudice is required. To rule otherwise, the Court has observed, would be to require difficult judgments to be made respecting the impact of conflicts of interest on an attorney's representation. The Court has also noted that the likelihood of prejudice to one or more clients is substantial when multiple defendants with conflicting interests are represented.<sup>7</sup>

Payment by One for Representing Another

There are other situations in which a conflict may arise. For example, counsel is commonly employed in criminal cases by a relative, friend, employer, or codefendant of the defendant. In such cases there is the possibility that conflicting allegiances will develop. This possibility is especially aggravated if the person paying fees of counsel is a party defendant or witness to the alleged offense, as is sometimes the case where an employer pays for a lawyer for an employee when both the employer and the employee are indicted. There are inherent risks that the person paying the fees may regard himself or herself as the principal to whom counsel's primary loyalty is due. A lawyer for an accused must give complete loyalty to the accused without regard to the source of fees. Payment of fees and costs by a person other than the accused can never be allowed to dilute or influence the undivided loyalty of counsel to the accused or confer on the fee payer any control of the litigation inconsistent with the best interests of the accused.<sup>8</sup>

4. The ability of a jurisdiction to provide separate counsel for codefendants can be greatly facilitated if there is adherence to standard 5-1.2, which recommends that in each jurisdiction there be both defenders and assigned counsel. The presence of both groups of attorneys assures that there will be sufficient numbers of lawyers available to handle multiple defendant cases.

Prosecutors and Their Partners as Defense Counsel

The particular form of conflict of interest that arises when two lawyers who are associated in the practice of law appear on both sides of a case has been the subject of legislation in many states. These statutes typically make it a misdemeanor and provide for the revocation or suspension of the license of an attorney who in any way participates as prosecutor and then advises in the defense of the same case.<sup>9</sup>

A number of courts have imposed professional discipline upon a lawyer who appeared on both sides of the same case, either first as prosecutor and later as defense counsel<sup>10</sup> or first as defense counsel and later as prosecutor.<sup>11</sup> But where the circumstances have shown no division of loyalties, courts have recognized that it is permissible for one who holds prosecutorial office to act as defense counsel in another jurisdiction.<sup>12</sup>

In all of these situations the controlling consideration is the avoidance of any possibility of division or dilution of loyalties. Relationships between lawyers who are associated in practice are so close and the potential for conflict is so great, given the lack of any strong reason for permitting such representation, that a flat prohibition is warranted against lawyers from the same firm or office appearing as prosecutor and defense counsel. Similarly, it would not be sound to permit one who regularly serves as a prosecutor to appear as defense counsel opposing one who ordinarily is his or her associate in the prosecution office.

Yet there are advantages to the operation of the adversary system if lawyers can avoid being stereotyped in their roles. Obviously, in our system of institutionalized prosecution offices, it is difficult if not impossible for prosecutors to appear in the defense role. More feasible is the interchange of roles by having experienced defense counsel appointed as special prosecutors from time to time. The long-range benefits of interchange, however, are such that lawyers who have been trained in prosecution offices should be encouraged to devote some period of their professional careers in defense work, whether privately or as public defenders, after they have left prosecution offices. Correspondingly, public defender staff members should be encouraged to move into prosecution offices.

Commentary*Prompt Protection of Legal Rights

Many of the rights that the law guarantees to an accused person can be vindicated only by prompt action. One of the lawyer's most significant tasks is to inform the client of the nature, extent, and importance of constitutional and legal rights and to take the procedural steps necessary to protect them. This includes advice concerning the privilege against self-incrimination and the appropriate responses to be made to a lineup, interrogation, or problems relating to statements to news media.<sup>1</sup> Many cases require that special steps be taken to preserve existing evidence under the control of others or that prompt ballistics tests, handwriting tests, or medical examinations of the accused be made.

One of the most vital of the accused's rights is the right to be released from custody pending trial. Not only is this essential to the accused's immediate freedom, continuation of employment, and associations with family and friends, but it is also directly related to a favorable disposition of the case. In many cases the accused, if not confined, can personally assist counsel by identifying and locating material witnesses or securing evidence vital to the defense. Moreover, if the defendant is able to continue employment, the groundwork may be laid for a strong showing for probation in the event of a guilty finding.<sup>2</sup>

The particular procedural steps that should be taken to protect the rights of the accused will vary greatly from case to case. These standards reject the notion, however, that a lawyer is obligated to take every step the accused demands. Instead, the lawyer's professional judgment that a particular step can be appropriately invoked to the client's advantage should govern.<sup>3</sup> Among the obvious steps to be considered at the outset are motions for pretrial release, for continuance of the preliminary hearing if that will benefit the accused, for suppression of evidence if grounds exist, for change of venue if that will benefit the accused, or for pretrial psychiatric examination if any reason for such examination appears. At an early stage defense counsel may have to move for access, depending on the nature of the case, to such matters in the possession or control of the prosecution as ballistic test reports, autopsy reports, or other scientific evaluations of evidentiary matter that may be used at trial.

Counsel's role at the pretrial stage is not limited to formal legal steps that should be taken in the accused's behalf. The accused often needs assistance with personal relationships that have been disrupted because the accused has been charged with a crime. This may require advising the accused concerning relationships with an employer, landlord, or creditors, or even direct efforts by the lawyer to persuade them to defer adverse action until final disposition of the case.

Lawyer as Bondsman

In some jurisdictions lawyers are restricted by rule of court or otherwise from acting as sureties on bail bonds. It is particularly important that a lawyer not act as surety with respect to a client. This limitation enables the lawyer to avoid identification and involvement with the client which is beyond the lawyer's role as advocate and which, if not observed, undermines the detachment that an advocate should have.

A member of the bar engaged in practice should not engage in the business of acting as surety on bail bonds even if he or she does not represent the defendant being bonded. A few members of the bar have engaged in occasional or regular activities as bail bondsmen in order to secure clients. Lawyers should advocate rules of court or statutes prohibiting this highly undesirable practice.

(b) It is unprofessional conduct for a lawyer to counsel a client in or knowingly assist a client to engage in conduct which the lawyer knows to be illegal or fraudulent.

(c) It is unprofessional conduct for a lawyer to agree in advance of the commission of a crime that the lawyer will serve as counsel for the defendant, except as part of a bona fide effort to determine the validity, scope, meaning, or application of the law, or where the defense is incident to a general retainer for legal services to a person or enterprise engaged in legitimate activity.

(d) A lawyer may reveal the expressed intention of a client to commit a crime and the information necessary to prevent the crime, and the lawyer must do so if the contemplated crime is one which would seriously endanger the life or safety of any person or corrupt the processes of the courts and the lawyer believes such action on his or her part is necessary to prevent it.

Advising Compliance with Law

Since the system of justice cannot function if the professional participants — the advocates — do not comply with standards of honesty and integrity, the bar is firmly committed to the proposition that the lawyer's function must at every stage be performed within the law. Each of the contending advocates is assigned a different role or function, but each is an indispensable component of the system of justice and bound by its rules. While the justice system demands that defense counsel protect the confidences of the client, it also demands that counsel's duties be performed pursuant to the traditions and standards of professional conduct and in accordance with the law.

A lawyer is entitled to seek withdrawal from a case at any stage if the client states an intent to violate the law.<sup>1</sup> In addition, the attorney-client privilege does not require that a lawyer treat as confidential a client's stated intention to commit a crime in the future.<sup>2</sup>

Advising Unlawful Conduct

It is fundamental that the lawyer's function be performed within the law.<sup>3</sup> The lawyer's professional capacity does not immunize him or her from responsibility if the lawyer aids and abets the commission of a crime.<sup>4</sup> It also has been held improper for a lawyer to advise a client that it would be better to pay a fine under a penal statute than to obey it.<sup>5</sup>

Of course, well-intentioned citizens are entitled to advice concerning the legality of prospective conduct. The lawyer properly may give a candid opinion on the interpretation that may be given to any provision of law, as well as an opinion on its validity.<sup>6</sup> Thus, a lawyer consulted by a person or organization contemplating a test of the constitutionality of a law, as in a civil rights case, is not obliged to counsel against conduct that would provoke prosecution. Similarly, a corporation seeking to determine whether its proposed course of action would violate the antitrust laws can properly be advised by counsel of the applicability of those laws to the proposed conduct.

Representation in Future Criminal Cases

An agreement, whether express or implied, to defend criminal prosecutions arising out of contemplated criminal acts is an incentive to the ~~commission of crime and has been held to be ground for disbarment.~~<sup>7</sup> Thus, it is obviously unprofessional conduct for a lawyer to enter into an arrangement with those engaged in organized crime to provide representation on a regular basis to the participants. The lawyer who agrees to represent a person against future charges of prostitution, gambling, narcotics violations, and the like, in violation of state or federal laws is encouraging illegal activity by his or her willingness to defend.

These situations should be distinguished from that of the lawyer who is under a general retainer or who regularly represents a client engaged in legitimate activity and who is expected to defend criminal charges should they ever be brought against the client.<sup>8</sup> Persons engaged in legitimate business activity may be exposed to possible violation of criminal laws, such as those regulating safety or business economics. The scope of the law may be uncertain and the managers of such enterprises are entitled to counsel. Regular employment or a retainer that contemplates the defense of a criminal charge, if one is brought in these circumstances, does not operate as an encouragement of law violation, provided that the lawyer fulfills the duty to counsel compliance with the law.

A lawyer may properly agree in advance to defend a client who has stated an intention to violate a criminal statute where the violation is for the express purpose of testing in good faith the validity or scope of the law and the lawyer has advised the client that the law is open to question on such grounds.<sup>9</sup>

Duty to Report Threatened Crime

The lawyer's duty of confidentiality does not extend to threatened criminal acts. Not only is the lawyer free to reveal any stated intention of the client to commit a crime, but where the crime is one that would seriously endanger the life or safety of any person or corrupt the processes of the courts, the lawyer has a duty to take action to protect against its commission. Thus, should the client reveal an intention to bribe or coerce a juror or witness and the lawyer does not succeed in discouraging such action, the lawyer must report the matter to the authorities. Obviously, this is most clearly necessary where the lawyer learns that the client intends to injure person or property.<sup>10</sup>

A common complaint of laypersons is that lawyers, whether acting in civil or criminal cases, fail to keep their clients adequately informed. Unfortunately, this sometimes occurs even when the lawyer is preoccupied with performing essential tasks for the client. At best it is difficult for a lawyer to establish and maintain a relationship of confidence and trust with an anxious client in a criminal case, especially one in custody, and this task is made more difficult if the client is not kept reasonably informed. A lawyer must remember that the case is the defendant's case, and the defendant is entitled to know of the progress of the lawyer's work. Here again, the lawyer's duty in this respect is the same whether the lawyer has been retained or assigned. The busy lawyer performing services in many cases at a personal sacrifice may regard the burden of reporting to the client as an added imposition, but it is important to keep the client aware that the lawyer is actively attending to the client's interests.

Commentary

The problem of establishing a relationship of trust and confidence with the accused is discussed elsewhere in these standards. This relationship is often more difficult to establish when the lawyer is assigned or serves in a legal aid or defender system than when the accused has retained the lawyer. Unfortunately, the assigned lawyer is often regarded by the accused as part of the “government establishment” invoked against the accused.

In addition to other difficulties that impede the development of a close relationship with the assigned lawyer, “jailhouse lawyers” or the “jailhouse grapevine” sometimes encourages the accused to put pressure on the assigned lawyer to engage in dilatory or frivolous tactics involving multiple motions or other pretrial processes not warranted by the law or the facts. This situation may become acute if the accused is at liberty and wishes to postpone the proceedings.

Clearly, counsel should conduct a case under appointment no differently than counsel would a case for the client who had retained him or her; neither more nor less should be given, and at every stage the standards of professional responsibility must govern. Specifically, if an accused demands that a dilatory or groundless motion be made, the assigned lawyer should refuse to comply if the lawyer would so act with a private client.<sup>1</sup> Postconviction attacks on the assigned lawyer whose client is convicted is an occupational hazard of assigned counsel, although hardly limited to that relationship. When conflict with a client arises during trial proceedings, the lawyer is well advised to write a memorandum to the client explaining why the lawyer is declining to execute the request, or otherwise make some record of the circumstances. The creation of advisory councils would help to relieve the pressure on lawyers who face such problems.<sup>2</sup>

No lawyer, whether assigned by the court, part of a legal aid or defender staff, or privately retained and paid, has any duty to take any steps or present dilatory or frivolous motions or any actions that are unfounded according to the lawyer's informed professional judgment. On the contrary, to do so is unprofessional conduct.<sup>3</sup>

PART IV. INVESTIGATION AND PREPARATION

Standard 4-4.1. Duty to investigate

It is the duty of the lawyer to conduct a prompt investigation of the circumstances of the case and to explore all avenues leading to facts relevant to the merits of the case and the penalty in the event of conviction. The investigation should always include efforts to secure information in the possession of the prosecution and law enforcement authorities. The duty to investigate exists regardless of the accused's admissions or statements to the lawyer of facts constituting guilt or the accused's stated desire to plead guilty.

Commentary

Facts form the basis of effective representation. Effective representation consists of much more than the advocate's courtroom function per se. Adequate investigation may avert the need for courtroom confrontation. Considerable ingenuity may be required to locate persons who observed the criminal act charged or who have information concerning it. After they are located, their cooperation must be secured. It may be necessary to approach a witness several times to raise new questions stemming from facts learned from others. The resources of scientific laboratories may be required to evaluate certain kinds of evidence: analyses of fingerprints or handwriting, clothing, hair, or blood samples, or ballistics tests may be necessary. Neglect of any of these steps may preclude the presentation of an effective defense.

The prosecutor and law enforcement agencies are important sources of information needed by the defense lawyer. Apart from any formal processes of discovery that are available, prosecutors and law enforcement officers have in their possession facts that defense counsel must know. Prosecutors will often reveal facts freely in the hope of inducing a guilty plea. If defense counsel can secure the information known to the prosecutor, it will obviously facilitate investigation. Defense counsel should always urge the prosecutor to disclose facts even though defense counsel must then proceed to verify them. Overtures to the prosecution are not an indication of weakness, and experienced defense counsel routinely approach the prosecutor at an early stage of their own investigation.

The lawyer's duty to investigate is not discharged by the accused's admission of guilt to the lawyer or by the accused's stated desire to enter a guilty plea. The accused's belief that he or she is guilty in fact may often not coincide with the elements that must be proved in order to establish guilt in law. In many criminal cases the real issue is not whether the defendant performed the act in question but whether the defendant had the requisite intent and capacity. The accused may not be aware of the significance of facts relevant to intent in determining criminal responsibility. Similarly, a well-founded basis for suppression of evidence may lead to a disposition favorable to the client. The basis for evaluation of these possibilities will be determined by the lawyer's factual investigation, for which the accused's own conclusions are not a substitute.

The lawyer's duty is to determine, from knowledge of all the facts and applicable law, whether the prosecution can establish guilt in law, not in some moral sense. An accused may feel a sense of guilt, but the accused's subjective or emotional evaluation is not relevant; an essential function of the advocate is to make a detached professional appraisal independent of the client's belief that he or she is or is not guilty.

The lawyer also has a substantial and important role to perform in raising mitigating factors both to the prosecutor initially and to the court at sentencing. This cannot effectively be done on the basis of broad general emotional appeals or on the strength of statements made to the lawyer by the defendant. Information concerning the defendant's background, education, employment record, mental and emotional stability, family relationships, and the like, will be relevant, as will mitigating circumstances surrounding the commission of the offense itself. Investigation is essential to fulfillment of these functions. Such information may lead the prosecutor to defer or abandon prosecution and will be relevant at trial and at sentencing.

Effective investigation by the lawyer has an important bearing on competent representation at trial, for without adequate investigation the lawyer is not in a position to make the best use of such mechanisms as cross-examination or impeachment of adverse witnesses at trial or to conduct plea discussions effectively. The lawyer needs to know as much as possible about the character and background of witnesses to take advantage of impeachment. If they were eyewitnesses, the lawyer needs to know conditions at the scene that may have affected their opportunity as well as their capacity for observation. The effectiveness of advocacy is not to be measured solely by what the lawyer does at the trial; without careful preparation, the lawyer cannot fulfill the advocate's role. Failure to make adequate pretrial investigation and preparation may be grounds for finding ineffective assistance of counsel.<sup>1</sup>

The use by investigators of wiretaps, electronic surveillance devices, and other prohibited means is common.<sup>1</sup> Such practices are a serious threat to personal privacy. Lawyers who use the services of private investigators are in a strategic position to control the means by which investigation is conducted. One study recommends the use of professional standards for this purpose as a necessary adjunct to other forms of control.<sup>2</sup> Lawyers have a special responsibility to act within the bounds of law and to see that those they employ do so also.<sup>3</sup> Lawyers must also forbid the use of oppressive methods of securing information, as by threats or intimidation. Obviously, the use of fabricated tangible evidence or false testimony is both illegal and forbidden by professional standards.<sup>4</sup>

(a) It is unprofessional conduct to compensate a witness, other than an expert, for giving testimony, but it is not improper to reimburse a witness for the reasonable expenses of attendance upon court, including transportation and loss of income, attendance for depositions pursuant to statute or court rule, or attendance for pretrial interviews, provided there is no attempt to conceal the fact of reimbursement.

(b) It is not necessary for the lawyer or the lawyer's investigator, in interviewing a prospective witness, to caution the witness concerning possible self-incrimination and the need for counsel.

(c) A lawyer should not discourage or obstruct communication between prospective witnesses and the prosecutor. It is unprofessional conduct to advise any person, other than a client, or cause such person to be advised to decline to give to the prosecutor or counsel for codefendants information which such person has a right to give.

(d) Unless the lawyer for the accused is prepared to forgo impeachment of a witness by the lawyer's own testimony as to what the witness stated in an interview or to seek leave to withdraw from the case in order to present such impeaching testimony, the lawyer should avoid interviewing a prospective witness except in the presence of a third person.

History of Standard

There has been added to paragraph (a) authorization to pay witnesses for "attendance for depositions pursuant to statute or court rule, or attendance for pretrial interviews."

Original paragraph (b) stated that "it is proper but not mandatory" for a defense lawyer or the lawyer's investigator to caution a prospective witness concerning possible self-incrimination and the need for a lawyer. The standard now states that "[i]t is not necessary" that such advice be given. This change is due to the belief that the giving of such warnings is probably inconsistent with counsel's responsibilities under the adversary system. Defense counsel's primary duty is to the client, not to prospective witnesses, regardless of the extent to which they may happen to be in need of legal assistance. If the cautionary notice of paragraph (b) were to be given, undoubtedly some witnesses would refuse to speak with the defense, which is difficult to reconcile with the duty of counsel "to seek the lawful objectives of his client" as specified in the Code of Professional Responsibility.<sup>1</sup>

Compensation of Witnesses

Because of the risk of encouraging perjury, or appearing to do so, witnesses may not be compensated by the parties for their testimony, though they may be paid ordinary witness fees. It has long been held that a contract to secure testimony to a given state of facts is against public policy and void.<sup>2</sup> However, it is well accepted that the prohibition against paying for testimony does not forbid reimbursement of witnesses for their actual expenses and reasonable payment for loss of income.<sup>3</sup> These standards are more explicit than the Code of Professional Responsibility, however, in specifically authorizing reimbursement to witnesses for attendance at depositions and at pretrial interviews. As a matter of sound trial tactics, it may be advisable to disclose whatever payments are made.

Self-Incrimination of Witnesses

Occasionally a prospective witness gives a statement to the defense that is helpful to the client on whose behalf the statement is obtained but at the cost of possibly incriminating the prospective witness. The lawyer's paramount loyalty to his or her own client must govern in this situation; accordingly, these standards declare that "[i]t is not necessary for the lawyer or the lawyer's investigator . . . to caution the witness concerning possible self-incrimination and the need for counsel." At least one bar ethics committee considered this problem and concluded that the interest of the client seeking the statement must govern the attorney and investigator, provided the witness is not misled or deceived.<sup>4</sup> The ABA Ethics Committee has considered the converse problem of whether it is proper for a defense lawyer to warn a witness for the prosecution that the testimony might incriminate the witness when it is done for the purpose of discouraging the witness from testifying. It was held that such advice was proper.<sup>5</sup>

Obstructing Communications Between Witnesses and the Prosecution

Prospective witnesses are not partisans. They should be regarded as impartial and as relating the facts as they see them. Because witnesses do not "belong" to either party, it is improper for a prosecutor, defense counsel, or anyone acting for either to suggest to a witness that the witness not submit to an interview by opposing counsel. It is not only proper but it may be the duty of the prosecutor and defense counsel to interview any person who may be called as a witness in the case (except that the prosecutor is not entitled to interview a defendant represented by counsel). In the event a witness asks the prosecutor or defense counsel, or a member of their staffs, whether it is proper to submit to an interview by opposing counsel or whether it is obligatory, the witness should be informed that, although there is no legal obligation to submit to an interview, it is proper and may be the duty of both counsel to interview all persons who may be witnesses and that it is in the interest of justice that the witness be available for interview by counsel.<sup>6</sup>

Counsel may properly request an opportunity to be present at opposing counsel's interview of a witness, but may not make his or her presence a condition of the interview. It is also proper to caution a witness concerning the need to exercise care in subscribing to a statement prepared by another person. In the event that a written statement is signed or otherwise acknowledged by the witness as a correct representation of facts known to the witness, a copy of the statement should be furnished the witness upon request.

Interviews by the Lawyer Personally

Two possible problems can arise in relation to the impeachment of witnesses. The first may arise out of a defense lawyer's interview with a "friendly" witness, for example, an alibi witness. The friendly witness is likely to be cooperative in giving and signing a statement, but the problem of impeaching the witness will arise only if, unexpectedly, the witness's testimony varies from the pretrial statement and takes counsel by surprise.

The more frequently encountered problem is impeachment of an adverse witness whose testimony varies from what the witness stated to defense counsel before trial. In such situations it is necessary to conduct interviews of witnesses with a third person present, particularly since prosecution witnesses do not often sign written statements for defense counsel. The availability of a third person is virtually the only effective means of impeaching an adverse witness. Defense counsel is in an exceedingly difficult situation in seeking leave to withdraw and to substitute other counsel in order to take the stand to relate what the adverse witness previously said to the lawyer. Although a lawyer is sometimes permitted to withdraw in order to testify, this is largely a matter entrusted to the court's discretion, and the court will undoubtedly be influenced by the importance of the testimony, whether other counsel is available to try the case or whether a mistrial must be declared.<sup>7</sup> It is normally not appropriate for a lawyer to offer impeachment testimony and also remain in the case as counsel for the defendant.<sup>8</sup>

After counsel secures written statements from investigators, it is proper, and indeed wise, for counsel to interview such witnesses personally, not only to verify the investigators' reports but to become familiar with the personality of the witness in order to anticipate how the witness will react on the stand. Again, a third person should be present.

Advising the Expert Witness

Statements made by physicians, psychiatrists, and other experts about their experiences as witnesses in criminal cases indicate the need for circumspection on the part of lawyers who engage experts. Nothing should be done by a lawyer to cast suspicion on the process of justice by suggesting that the expert color an opinion to favor the interests of the client the lawyer represents. Depending on the extent of the expert's experience with courtroom procedure, the lawyer should explain the workings of the adversary system and the expert witness's role within it as an independent and impartial expert. The lawyer should also explain that the expert is to testify in accordance with the standards of the expert's discipline without regard to the wishes of the accused or the lawyer.

Fees to Experts

It is important that the fee paid to an expert not serve to influence the substance of the expert's testimony. To avoid both the existence and the appearance of influence, the fee should not be made contingent on a favorable opinion or result in the case, and the amount of the fee should be reasonable.<sup>1</sup>

The development of discovery procedures in criminal cases entails obligations on defense counsel to seek in good faith to make the procedures function effectively. Counsel for the accused should not compel the prosecution to resort to a court order for discovery in order to harass the prosecution, make it more costly, or obstruct the flow of information when defense counsel knows the information is discoverable. Guidelines concerning discovery in criminal cases are contained in chapter 11, Discovery and Procedure Before Trial.

to exert undue influence on the accused's decision as to his or her plea.

Advice on the Plea

The duty of the lawyer to investigate fully the facts of the case, regardless of the anticipated plea, is discussed elsewhere.<sup>1</sup> The lawyer's duty to be informed on the law is equally important; although the client may sometimes be capable of assisting in the fact investigation, the client is not educated in or familiar with the controlling law. The lawyer's responsibility to know the law is a challenging one, given the rapid pace of change in many areas of criminal law and procedure.<sup>2</sup>

The decision to plead guilty can be an intelligent one only if the defendant has been advised fully as to his or her rights and as to the probable outcome of alternative choices.<sup>3</sup> Once the lawyer has concluded that it is in the best interests of the accused to enter a guilty plea, the lawyer should use reasonable persuasion to guide the client to a sound decision.<sup>4</sup> However, defense counsel should make clear that the accused has the right to put the prosecution to its proof and that the decision is ultimately for the accused to make. A lawyer's advice to a defendant to plead guilty merely because the defendant has admitted guilt to the lawyer, without exploring all of the relevant facts or attempting to determine whether the prosecution can establish guilt, is improper.<sup>5</sup> Because of the elements of uncertainty that surround any estimate of probable outcome, the lawyer who has fulfilled the duties of investigation and analysis should not be faulted when subsequent events show that the lawyer's prediction was incorrect.

The matters on which the defendant needs advice before entering a plea go beyond appraisal of the likelihood of conviction or acquittal. Counsel should inform the defendant of the maximum and minimum sentences that can be imposed, but counsel should also be aware of the actual sentencing practices of the court and advise the defendant, when that is possible, what sentence is likely. If a decision is made to enter a plea, counsel should carefully review with the defendant the various subjects the court is likely to question the defendant on when the plea is offered.<sup>6</sup>

Misrepresenting the Risks, Hazards, or Prospects

Overreaching the client by misrepresenting the prospects of the case in order to obtain employment as counsel or to charge a larger fee is unprofessional conduct requiring disciplinary sanction, and the courts have so held.<sup>7</sup> Considerations related to counsel's fee, moreover, should never influence a lawyer's decisions or advice.

proper for the client to do so. Since the accused may be unaware that even casual communication with a juror is an impropriety, the accused should be so cautioned in order to avoid even the appearance of impropriety.

The client's relations with witnesses can pose complex problems. Often persons to be called as witnesses are relatives, friends, or fellow workers with whom normal communication cannot be avoided. The defendant's familiarity with witnesses and their whereabouts may require the defendant's participation in locating them, and the defendant's aid may be needed in securing their willingness to discuss the case with defense counsel and their appearance at trial. Contact by the accused with witnesses involves the risk that something may be said that could later give rise to embarrassment or misunderstanding. The lawyer should caution the defendant to avoid communication with witnesses unless approved by the lawyer.

Obviously, just as it is the lawyer's duty to tell all witnesses to tell the truth under all circumstances, so it is the lawyer's duty to admonish the client to so advise any witnesses the client may contact. Counsel should make clear to the client that any conduct of the client's that has even the appearance of an effort to influence or color the testimony of a witness may provide ammunition that the prosecution can use at trial to suggest a consciousness of guilt. Such conduct may also be used to impeach the credibility of the witness. At worst, improper conduct by the client could lead to a charge of obstructing justice or suborning perjury.

Allocation of Decision-making Power

As established by the history of the criminal justice process and the rights vested in an accused under the Constitution, certain basic decisions have come to belong to the client while others fall within the province of the lawyer. The requirement that the defendant personally enter a guilty plea and that it be voluntary and informed carries the implication that it is the defendant who must make the choice.<sup>1</sup> Similarly, the decision whether to waive a jury trial has been considered as belonging to the defendant.<sup>2</sup> With respect to the decision whether the defendant should testify, the lawyer "should give his client the benefit of his advice and experience, but the ultimate decision must be made by the defendant, and the defendant alone."<sup>3</sup> In making each of these decisions — whether to plead guilty, whether to waive jury trial, and whether to testify — the accused should have the full and careful advice of counsel. Although counsel should not demand that the defendant follow what counsel perceives as the desirable course, counsel is free to engage in fair persuasion and to urge the client to follow the proffered professional advice. Ultimately, however, because of the fundamental nature of these three decisions, so crucial to the accused's fate, the accused must make the decisions.

Some other significant decisions fall into a gray zone. The Supreme Court has indicated, for example, that on a petition for habeas corpus the federal courts should hold the petitioner to have waived a constitutional right only if it is established that the petitioner deliberately bypassed the available state procedure. The court emphasized that the waiver would be found only if the defendant made the choice.<sup>4</sup> The Court also has stated that the defendant would be bound by the attorney's deliberate choice of a trial strategy to forgo an objection available on constitutional grounds.<sup>5</sup>

Strategy and Tactics

In general, however, it may be said that the power of decision in matters of trial strategy and tactics rests with the lawyer.<sup>6</sup> The lawyer must be allowed to determine which witnesses should be called on behalf of the defendant.<sup>7</sup> Similarly, the lawyer must be allowed to decide whether to object to the admission of evidence,<sup>8</sup> whether and how a witness should be cross-examined,<sup>9</sup> and whether to stipulate to certain facts.<sup>10</sup> Cases that have reversed convictions for failure of counsel to call certain witnesses, cross-examine, object to evidence, and the like, have been decided not on the ground that counsel should have heeded the client's wishes on such matters, but on a determination that these actions of counsel in these cases were not strategic or tactical decisions but, rather, revealed ineptitude, inexperience, lack of preparation, or unfamiliarity with basic legal principles amounting to ineffective assistance of counsel.<sup>11</sup>

Many of the rights of an accused, including constitutional rights, are such that only trained experts can comprehend their full significance, and an explanation to any but the most sophisticated client would be futile. Numerous strategic and tactical decisions must be made in the course of a criminal trial, many of which are made in circumstances that do not allow extended, if any, consultation. Every experienced advocate can recall the disconcerting experience of trying to conduct the examination of a witness or follow opposing arguments or the judge's charge while the client "plucks at the attorney's sleeve" offering gratuitous suggestions. Some decisions, especially those involving which witnesses to call and in what sequence and what should be said in argument to the jury, can be anticipated sufficiently so that counsel can ordinarily consult with the client concerning them. Because these decisions require the skill, training, and experience of the advocate, the power of decision on them must rest with the lawyer, but that does not mean that the lawyer should completely ignore the client in making them. The lawyer should seek to maintain a cooperative relationship at all stages while maintaining the ultimate choice and responsibility for the strategic and tactical decisions in the case.

It is also important in a jury trial for the defense lawyer to consult fully with the accused about any lesser included offenses the trial court may be willing to submit to the jury. Indeed, because this decision is so important as well as so similar to the defendant's decision about the charges to which to plead, the defendant should be the one to decide whether to seek submission to the jury of lesser included offenses. For instance, in a murder prosecution, the defendant, rather than the defense attorney, should determine whether the court should be asked to submit to the jury the lesser included offense of manslaughter.

tion proceedings questioning the effectiveness of the lawyer's performance. Rather than leave the matter to be determined on the strength of the memories of the lawyer and client, which are invariably in conflict if the issue arises, some record should be made. This may be accomplished by a notation of the nature of the disagreement, the advice given, and the action taken, either in the lawyer's file or by letter to the client, depending on the gravity of the problem. If advisory councils are established,<sup>12</sup> a new means will be available to lawyers to meet this problem.*

12. See standard 4-1.4.

*Note on the deletion of original standard 5.3. — Essentially, original standard 5.3 provided that if a defendant seeks to plead guilty, acknowledging guilt in open court but privately maintaining to defense counsel that he or she is innocent, counsel is obliged to inform the court of the defendant's true position. This standard is unnecessary if the court is willing to accept a guilty plea even though the defendant claims innocence. Such pleas may be accepted by trial judges, as the Supreme Court made clear in North Carolina v. Alford, 400 U.S. 25 (1970), and the chapter on Pleas of Guilty recommends that such pleas not be refused in the absence of "specific reasons for doing so which are made a matter of record." See standard 14-1.6. If, however, a so-called Alford plea is either not accepted by the court or is not offered by the defendant, it does not follow that defense counsel should be required to reveal to the court that the defendant privately denies guilt to counsel. As long as the defendant openly acknowledges guilt to the court and a factual basis for the plea is present, this is deemed sufficient. If counsel were to tell the court that the defendant privately insists that he or she is innocent, the result is likely to be unsatisfactory. The defendant will most likely insist to the court that he or she is, in fact, guilty because the defendant wants the plea to be accepted, and that any statements previously made to counsel were false. It is probable; moreover, that prior to entry of the guilty plea, defense counsel will have devoted considerable effort to convincing the defendant to do just what the defendant has finally done — to openly admit wrongdoing. When the defendant finally does plead guilty, and defense counsel then reports to the court that the defendant privately maintains innocence, the defendant is likely to find counsel's actions baffling. Meanwhile, acceptance of the guilty plea will be jeopardized, despite the presence of a factual basis and the defendant's public admission of guilt. The attorney-client relationship will also probably have been destroyed. As a matter of practice among defense counsel, it is believed that adherence to original standard 5.3 was virtually nonexistent. Under no circumstances, however, should a lawyer recommend to a defendant acceptance of a plea unless a full investigation and study of the case has been completed, including an analysis of controlling law and the evidence likely to be introduced at trial. See standards 4-4.1, 4-5.1(a), and 4-6.1(b).

If the defendant is placed under oath when the plea is offered, the problem for defense counsel seemingly becomes more difficult because the defendant's statements will be perjurious. This situation obviously is similar to that confronted when a defendant seeks to lie under oath at his or her trial. This chapter, however, does not address the so-called client perjury problem. See the editorial note to 4-7.7.

PART VI. DISPOSITION WITHOUT TRIAL

Standard 4-6.1. Duty to explore disposition without trial

(a) Whenever the nature and circumstances of the case permit, the lawyer for the accused should explore the possibility of an early diversion of the case from the criminal process through the use of other community agencies.

(b) A lawyer may engage in plea discussions with the prosecutor, although ordinarily the client's consent to engage in such discussions should be obtained in advance. Under no circumstances should a lawyer recommend to a defendant acceptance of a plea unless a full investigation and study of the case has been completed, including an analysis of controlling law and the evidence likely to be introduced at trial.

History of Standard

Original paragraph (b) stated that a lawyer should seek to engage in plea discussions when the lawyer determines, based upon full investigation and study, that conviction is probable. As revised, the standard does not require that defense counsel conclude that conviction is probable before engaging in plea negotiations. Indeed, even in instances where counsel believes that acquittal is likely, counsel may still wish to ascertain whether, for example, there are lesser charges to which the prosecutor would accept a plea. The suggestion that the permission of the defendant "ordinarily" be obtained before engaging in plea discussions was contained in the original standard in a separately lettered paragraph (c). There also has been added to paragraph (b) the suggestion that counsel not urge acceptance of a plea by the defendant "unless a full investigation and study of the case has been completed." This provision complements standard 4-4.1, which states that "[t]he duty to investigate exists regardless of the accused's admissions or statements to the lawyer of facts constituting guilt or the accused's stated desire to plead guilty."

Exploring Early Diversion

The criminal process is only one of a number of methods society uses to deal with antisocial conduct. But in many cases involving law violations it may not be in the best interests of either society or the accused to pursue criminal prosecution. Prosecutors long have exercised their discretion to informally defer prosecution when they have concluded that an offender, particularly a first offender, ought not be subjected to full-scale criminal prosecution, for example, where an offender is seeking psychiatric or other expert assistance. This practice is described and endorsed in the chapter on the Prosecution Function.<sup>1</sup> The existence of diversionary procedures or the willingness occasionally to work out a specialized form of diversion from the criminal process emphasizes the need for defense counsel to be aware both of the prosecutor's attitudes in appropriate cases and of the need to outline to the prosecutor an appropriate course of action outside the criminal process.

Participation in Plea Discussions

Most cases are disposed of not by trial but as the result of a plea of guilty. In large measure this reflects the fulfillment by prosecutors of their screening function and their obligation not to press charges unless a conviction is likely. The disposition by plea satisfies a variety of interests of the administration of justice as a whole as well as of the defendant. To the defendant it affords the opportunity of avoiding the ordeal of trial, mitigating the penalties, and of having sentence determined without the sentencing court hearing all of the adverse testimony that would be produced at trial. To the prosecutor it offers the certainty of conviction with the least drain on prosecutorial resources and in an atmosphere free of the tensions of conflict. To the administration of justice as a whole, disposition by plea represents substantial savings to the public in terms of prosecutorial and judicial time, and also a greater confidence in the certainty of the guilt of the accused. Moreover, assuming an adequate record will be made of the factual basis for the plea at the time of plea and sentence, the problems of postconviction attacks are lessened.<sup>2</sup>

1. See standard 3-3.8.

2. Guidelines for plea negotiations and the acceptance of guilty pleas are contained in standards 14-1.4 to 14-1.6, 14-3.1, and 14-3.3.

Since disposition by plea is mutually advantageous in many circumstances, plea discussions are a significant part of the duty of defense counsel. Courts and prosecutors have developed criteria that guide the exercise of their discretion. These standards and rules of thumb are not to be found in codes, case reports, and other sources of law, but a working understanding of them is part of the accumulated skill and experience of the defense lawyer. Ignorance of the prevailing practices and attitudes of the prosecutor and the court as to plea discussions may be as much a handicap to effective representation as is unfamiliarity with the facts or law related to the case; hence it is imperative that the defense lawyer be aware of them. If the defense lawyer lacks sufficient personal experience, he or she should consult experienced colleagues. The staff of defender offices also serves as a repository of such information, to which all members of the bar may turn.

A corollary to the obligation to explore the possibility of disposition by plea when a lawyer concludes that conviction of some kind is likely is the duty to try to seek dismissal of charges if the lawyer concludes that the accused is not guilty or ought not be convicted. The lawyer's investigation may have disclosed an erroneous identification, a misconception by the prosecutor as to the scope of a statute, or other basis for pressing for a dismissal of the charge. Although no accused person has any burden to prove he or she is not guilty, if the accused can do so it is to the accused's advantage, ordinarily, to try to avoid undergoing the burden of a trial. In such circumstances the lawyer should consider whether to present the exculpatory facts to the prosecutor in order to secure a dismissal. Even an accused who has violated the law may be able to present to the prosecutor facts in extenuation that can lead to dismissal of charges. For example, in the case of an employee who has embezzled funds of an employer, the lawyer may be able to work out means of restitution. With the employer's acquiescence, many prosecutors are likely to drop or suspend further proceedings.

Plea discussions should be considered the norm and failure to seek such discussion an exception unless defense counsel concludes that sound reasons exist for not doing so. In some cases the factual or legal situation or considerations of strategy may dictate that no overtures to the prosecution be made. Ultimately, the definitive decision whether to engage in plea discussions is for the client, as is the decision of how to plead. However, in many cases it will be appropriate to make an early contact with the prosecutor to secure information concerning the charge. In the course of this contact, the possibility of reducing the charge or making a plea may arise and counsel may have an opportunity to advance the client's interests without making any disclosures concerning the defense. Ordinarily the client's consent should be sought and obtained before any approaches are made, but there will be occasions when some discussion, perhaps only of a very tentative and preliminary nature, will occur before an opportunity arises to obtain the defendant's consent. Especially when good professional relations exist between the lawyer and the prosecutor, even the most casual and informal discussion of the case can produce information useful to the defense.

In all circumstances, defense counsel should challenge the government's case if there is genuine doubt that the prosecution can carry its burden of proof. That the accused is guilty in fact is, of course, not relevant. It is not the function of the advocate to make a moral judgment as to the guilt of the accused.

Standard 4-6.2. Conduct of discussions

(a) In conducting discussions with the prosecutor the lawyer should keep the accused advised of developments at all times and all proposals made by the prosecutor should be communicated promptly to the accused.

(b) It is unprofessional conduct for a lawyer knowingly to make false statements concerning the evidence in the course of plea discussions with the prosecutor.

(c) It is unprofessional conduct for a lawyer to seek or accept concessions favorable to one client by any agreement which is detrimental to the legitimate interests of any other client.

Commentary*Informing the Client of Progress of Plea Discussion

Plea discussion is inherently a "two-way street." Settlement negotiations in a civil suit for personal injury usually begin with an assumption, however tentative, of the defendant's liability. In a criminal case defense counsel may proceed on the assumption, for purposes of discussion, that the defendant may be willing to enter a plea of guilty to some charge. It is because of this that the consent of the accused to such discussions is important. This does not mean that the lawyer yields on the position that the accused can, if the accused desires, put the prosecution to its proof.

Although statements made during plea discussions by counsel cannot be used against the accused in the event of trial, admissions made directly by the accused may be admissible against the accused in a minority of jurisdictions.<sup>1</sup> This is one reason, among others, why it may be undesirable for the accused to be present during plea discussions. If the accused is present, either because the accused insists or because counsel considers it advantageous, the accused should be cautioned by counsel against making any statements that have not been carefully explored in advance with counsel.

Apart from the risk of admissions, the presence of the client during plea discussions may be a hindrance in other ways. The discussions are best conducted on a level of mutual professional respect that may be undermined by the presence of the accused, or indeed misunderstood by the accused. Both sides may be hampered by an unwillingness to be as candid as necessary in the presence of the accused, or by the added burden of explaining to the accused the significance of what is taking place.

Because plea discussions are usually held without the accused being present, the lawyer has the duty to communicate fully to the client the substance of the discussions. It is important that the accused be informed of proposals made by the prosecutor; the accused, not the lawyer, has the right to decide on prosecution proposals, even when a proposal is one that the lawyer would not approve. If the accused's choice on the question of a guilty plea is to be an informed one, the accused must act with full awareness of the alternatives, including any that arise from proposals made by the prosecutor.

1. See standard 14-3.4 and commentary.

It is also important that the accused be informed that the action of the sentencing judge cannot be definitely predicted. Sometimes an accused who has consented to a particular plea on the basis of discussions between the prosecutor and defense counsel has the impression either that the judge is a party to the arrangement or that estimates made by the lawyer are guarantees of what the sentence will be. This situation should be anticipated by defense counsel. If the lawyer has any doubt about the defendant's complete understanding of the alternatives, the lawyer should seek to clarify the situation, for example, by calling in a relative of the accused or a trusted friend, with the defendant's permission.<sup>2</sup>

It cannot be emphasized too much that a crucial factor in plea discussions is the duty of counsel to explain fully to the accused the consequences of a guilty plea in terms of the range of sentences the court can impose. Special care must be exercised to distinguish between what a particular judge may do or usually does from what the judge is authorized to do by law. An accused under tension, whether incarcerated or at large, will sometimes not easily distinguish among or remember matters that are clear to the lawyer. Moreover, the "jailhouse lawyer" with whom the accused confers may leave him or her confused by the difference between what is heard in the cellblock and what the defense lawyer says. In some instances experienced defense lawyers give the accused a brief memorandum setting forth the range of possible sentences for various crimes or counts of an indictment, retaining a copy in their files. The need for the accused to understand the range of possible penalties is obvious; without such understanding, a truly intelligent and voluntary choice is not possible. Even if the choice is in fact an informed and voluntary one, it is important that the record demonstrate this.<sup>3</sup> plea discussions — indeed, counsel must preserve the client's confidences unless granted consent to make disclosures for this purpose — truth is required in the presentation to the prosecutor of facts relating to the case or any mitigating facts. Not only does misrepresentation reflect on the integrity of counsel, but it severely handicaps counsel's usefulness to the accused and to future clients, since the prosecutor will understandably be reluctant to negotiate with a lawyer who cannot be trusted.

Trading the Interest of One Client for That of Another

The fear has sometimes been expressed that lawyers, particularly public defenders, may be tempted to compromise the interest of one client in return for advantages to another.<sup>5</sup> In reply to this concern, it should be noted that the pressure on defenders is little different from that which confronts private counsel having a substantial criminal law practice. Whether the lawyer is a public defender or is privately retained, the lawyer may have pending other cases that the prosecutor is eager to dispose of without trial, and defense counsel may volunteer the suggestion or be offered the possibility of a more favorable disposition of the case at hand if defense counsel will "cooperate" in the disposition of some other case. Regardless of the motivation for the proposal and whether it originates with the defense attorney or the prosecutor, such conduct plainly violates the lawyer's fundamental duty of undivided loyalty to each client.<sup>6</sup>

(d) The lawyer should comply promptly with all orders and directives of the court, but the lawyer has a duty to have the record reflect adverse rulings or judicial conduct which the lawyer considers prejudicial to his or her client's legitimate interests. The lawyer has a right to make respectful requests for reconsiderations of adverse rulings.

(e) Lawyers should cooperate with courts and the organized bar in developing codes of decorum and professional etiquette for each jurisdiction.

There has been added to paragraph (a) the requirement that defense counsel manifest respect toward "others in the courtroom," as well as toward the judge, opposing counsel, witnesses, and jurors. ### Commentary

Dignity of Judicial Proceedings

Rules or standards of conduct are needed to ensure that contending advocates work in harmony for what is their common cause, the administration of justice. They must not allow themselves to be diverted by irrelevant, extraneous, or disrupting factors. Basic to an efficient and fair functioning of our adversary system of justice is an atmosphere of mutual respect by all participants. This can be achieved only by strict adherence to firm standards of what may be called, for want of a better term, professional etiquette and deportment. There is no place and no occasion for rudeness or overbearing, oppressive conduct. The control of courtroom decorum lies in the advocates' acceptance of standards of elementary courtesy and politeness in human relations, but ultimately the presiding judge has the responsibility to govern the conduct of all persons in the courtroom, and especially the conduct of the advocates who, as officers of the court, are subject to the court's control.

The objective of such standards is to keep the understandably contentious spirit of the opposing advocates within appropriate bounds and constructive channels, in order that issues may be resolved on the merits, and proceedings not be diverted by the intrusion of factors such as personality, acrimonious exchanges between advocates or between advocates and witnesses, and histrionics in an effort to sway jurors by other than legitimate evidence. "Baiting" of witnesses of the other side, or of the trial judge, blurs and confuses the very issues that the trial is intended to sharpen and clarify. Lawyers must expect that every intrusion of bad manners or other rudeness into a trial will be dealt with swiftly and sternly by the presiding judge. Necessarily, the "ground rules" of professional conduct must be known by counsel and violations of rules made the subject of disciplinary action by courts and bar grievance committees.

The same considerations that call for certain standards of conduct for advocates require that the judge maintain a scrupulously neutral and fair attitude. Deviations from standards of appropriate judicial conduct should be made part of the record so as to be brought to the attention of reviewing courts.

Exchanges Between Lawyers

A breach of courtroom decorum occurs when lawyers address each other directly, rather than through the court. Such exchanges may begin with innocent purpose relating to the trial and escalate because of the natural tensions of the courtroom. Sometimes a lawyer will deliberately "bait" a less-experienced opponent to shake the lawyer's composure or to impress the jury. In the courtroom, as in legislative bodies or where other formal proceedings occur, the surest protection against the degeneration of the controversy into personal acrimony is the requirement that the participants address the presiding officer and do so in certain prescribed forms. A challenge to a statement of opposing counsel should be made in the form of an objection or a request to the judge rather than to the opposing counsel directly. Both the formality of the request and the intermediary role it imposes on the judge serve to temper the exchange and provide an insulation that reduces the risk of friction. The need to curb direct exchanges between counsel is greatest when a jury is present, since there is substantial risk that the jury will be distracted from its task by the spectacle created by the lawyers.

Respect for the Judge, Opposing Counsel, and Witnesses

The obligation of the lawyer to maintain a respectful attitude toward the court is necessary to give due recognition to the position held by the judge in the administration of the law. The lawyer's attitude communicates to the layperson in the courtroom the professional relation that exists between judge and lawyer. The appropriate way to challenge the judge's decisions is through appropriate procedural devices, including objections and appeals designed for that purpose, not by seeking to impress the client by a show of belligerency that exceeds the need to make a record of what the lawyer believes is error in the case. A restrained, respectful attitude on the part of each advocate toward the other helps reinforce the concept that the adversary system, although based on contention, is a mechanism that depends on evidence and the rule of law, not vituperation or personality conflicts.<sup>1</sup>

A reasonable balance must be reached on matters of conduct so that judicial proceedings are not permitted to degenerate to the level of donnybrooks, but it is also important that no artificial standards of courtroom conduct impede lawyers from rendering vigorous advocacy of their viewpoints. It is for this reason that the law grants lawyers an absolute privilege against defamation actions for anything said or written in the course of judicial proceedings pertinent to that proceeding, under a broad standard of pertinence.<sup>2</sup>

Public respect for law derives in large measure from the image that the administration of justice presents. It is not enough that justice be done; there must also be the appearance of justice. The law is a great teacher not only in its substantive principles but also in the example it sets of dispassionate and rational methods for the resolution of conflicts. An important aspect of the image of justice is the relations that are seen to exist in the courtroom among the lawyer-participants: defense counsel, prosecutor, and judge.<sup>3</sup>

Of necessity, the lawyer must often be forceful and vigorous in questioning witnesses and in arguing to the jury. This does not mean, however, that the lawyer may make a farce of the trial or undermine the dignity of the legal process by excessive histrionics. The line between legitimate cross-examination and "witness baiting" is difficult to draw. Ultimately an experienced and vigilant trial judge will draw such a line if the advocates fail to stay within reasonable bounds.<sup>4</sup>

These standards seek to suggest certain limited forms of courtroom misconduct deserving imposition of disciplinary sanctions. To avoid undue limitation on appropriate advocacy, extreme sanctions are limited to conduct purposefully calculated to annoy or irritate. Repetition of misconduct after a warning from the bench should be considered sufficient to establish a prima facie showing of purposeful misconduct.

Compliance with Court Orders

The relationship between court and counsel is most severely put to the test on those occasions when the judge issues a direct command to counsel, for example, instructing counsel to cease interrogation of a witness or to desist from a particular line of argument.

Of course, it is the right of counsel for every litigant to press his claim, even if it appears farfetched and untenable, to obtain the court's considered ruling. . . . But if the ruling is adverse, it is not counsel's right to resist it or to insult the judge — his right is only respectfully to preserve his point for appeal.<sup>5</sup>

---

Corresponding to the lawyer's obligation to accede to the court's command in good grace is the duty of the court to permit an adequate record to be made of the court's order and the circumstances under which it was made, as seen by counsel.

Code of Decorum

The particular formalities observed in American courts differ from place to place. A lawyer is entitled to know what standards of decorum are expected in a particular court, especially with regard to the use of conventional forms of address, when the lawyer is required to stand, and where he or she is allowed to be in the courtroom during trial, and other such matters. To avoid misunderstanding between court and lawyer concerning such formalities, achieve greater uniformity within jurisdictions, and generally improve the dignity of courtroom proceedings, lawyers should take the lead in developing rules governing these matters.

Standard 4-7.2. Selection of jurors

(a) The lawyer should prepare himself or herself prior to trial to discharge effectively his or her function in the selection of the jury, including the raising of any appropriate issues concerning the method by which the jury panel was selected and the exercise of both challenges for cause and peremptory challenges.

(b) In those cases where it appears necessary to conduct a pretrial investigation of the background of jurors, investigatory methods of the lawyer should neither harass nor unduly embarrass potential jurors or invade their privacy and, whenever possible, should be restricted to an investigation of records and sources of information already in existence.

(c) The opportunity to question jurors personally should be used solely to obtain information for the intelligent exercise of challenges. A lawyer should not intentionally use the voir dire to present factual matter which the lawyer knows will not be admissible at trial or to argue the lawyer's case to the jury.

History of Standard

There are stylistic changes in paragraphs (a) and (b). Original paragraph (c) referred to those "jurisdictions where counsel is permitted personally to question jurors on voir dire." This language has been deleted, due to concern that it may have been construed to imply tacit approval of jurisdictions where lawyers are not permitted to question jurors personally. Chapter 15, on Trial by Jury, recommends that "counsel for each side should have the opportunity, subject to reasonable time limits, to question jurors directly, both individually and as a panel."

Commentary

Preparation for Jury Selection

The selection of a jury is an important phase of the trial, although the process is sometimes beyond the comprehension of the lay client and prospective jurors. The procedure requires the alert attention of the lawyer. As elsewhere in the trial, in the selection of the jury the advocate's decisions must be made under time pressure. They can be made wisely only if the lawyer has prepared adequately before trial. The lawyer should consider whether the case is an appropriate one to raise objections to the jury selection mechanism as it operates in the particular jurisdiction. More frequently, counsel needs to prepare carefully for the exercise of challenges for cause and peremptory challenges.

Pretrial Investigation of Jurors

Pretrial investigation of jurors may permit a more informed exercise of challenges than reliance solely on voir dire affords. The practice of conducting out-of-court investigations of jurors presents serious problems, however. It may have a tendency to make jury service, already unpopular with many persons, even more onerous because of the fear of invasion of privacy. It may also have the appearance, even if unintended, of an effort to intimidate jurors. To minimize these risks, counsel should be careful to conduct investigations of jurors in a manner that avoids invasions of privacy. Except in unusual circumstances of necessity, counsel should limit the inquiry to records already in existence rather than, for example, question contemporaneously a potential juror's neighbors.<sup>1</sup>

1. See ABA, CODE OF PROFESSIONAL RESPONSIBILITY DR7-108(E), EC7-29 to EC7-31.

Use of Voir Dire

The process of voir dire examination of prospective jurors by the lawyer is often needlessly time consuming and is frequently used to influence the jury in its view of the case. These standards elsewhere recommend that jurors be questioned "initially and primarily by the judge, but counsel for each side should have the opportunity . . . to question jurors directly. . . ."<sup>2</sup> In those jurisdictions that retain the practice of permitting the lawyer to conduct all of the questioning of jurors, the responsibility must rest with the lawyer, supervised by the court, to limit questions to those that are designed to lay a basis for the lawyer's challenges. The observation that the voir dire may be used to influence the jury in its view of the case is rejected as an improper use of the right of reasonable inquiry to ensure a fair and impartial jury.

The use of the voir dire to inject inadmissible evidence into the case is a substantial abuse of the process.<sup>3</sup> Treatment of legal points in the course of voir dire examination should be strictly confined to those inquiries bearing on possible bias in relation to the issues of the case.

Standard 4-7.3. Relations with jury

(a) It is unprofessional conduct for the lawyer to communicate privately with persons summoned for jury duty or impaneled as jurors concerning the case prior to or during the trial. The lawyer should avoid the reality or appearance of any such improper communications.

(b) The lawyer should treat jurors with deference and respect, avoiding the reality or appearance of currying favor by a show of undue solicitude for their comfort or convenience.

(c) After discharge of the jury from further consideration of a case, it is unprofessional conduct for a lawyer to intentionally make comments to or ask questions of a juror for the purpose of harassing or embarrassing the juror in any way which will tend to influence judgment in future jury service. If the lawyer believes that the verdict may be subject to legal challenge, the lawyer may properly, if no statute or rule prohibits such course, communicate with jurors to determine whether such challenge may be available.

History of Standard

Paragraph (c) now provides that it is "unprofessional conduct" for a lawyer to engage intentionally in the conduct proscribed by this standard. Also, the original standard applied "[a]fter verdict." This has been modified and the standard is now applicable "[a]fter discharge of the jury from further consideration of a case." Finally, the last sentence of paragraph (c) permits a lawyer to communicate with jurors to determine whether a legal challenge to the verdict is available. Unlike the first edition, the standard now does not require that a lawyer have "reasonable grounds" before embarking upon such an inquiry nor must notice that such an inquiry is going to be made be furnished to the prosecutor and the court. However, the lawyer should "believe" that the verdict may be subject to legal challenge. Paragraphs (a) and (b) are unchanged.

Communication with Jurors Before or During Trial

Discussing the case privately with a juror before verdict is obviously a gross breach of professional standards of conduct.<sup>1</sup> Courts have sometimes considered the broader question of the propriety of any conversation, however innocent in purpose or trivial in content, between counsel and juror during trial, since the mere fact that counsel is seen conversing with a juror may raise the question of whether the juror reached the verdict solely on the evidence.<sup>2</sup> The issue usually is raised as a ground for a new trial, and the lawyer's communication with a juror may constitute reversible error.<sup>3</sup> The lawyer's legitimate communication must be with the jury as an entity — not with jurors individually. For obvious reasons, these strictures apply as well to communications with persons summoned for jury duty who may or may not be impaneled as jurors in a particular case.

Attitude Toward Jury

The lawyer "should avoid undue solicitude for the comfort or convenience of judge or jury and should avoid any other conduct calculated to gain special consideration."<sup>4</sup> Referring to individual jurors by name during trial has been ruled unethical,<sup>5</sup> and courts also have condemned the practice.<sup>6</sup> Just as respect for the position of the judge requires that the judge be addressed formally as "your honor," the jury's symbolic position as representing the community in the court requires that a degree of formality be observed in addressing the jury. The typical form of address is, of course, "ladies and gentlemen of the jury" or "members of the jury."

Posttrial Interrogation

Since it is vital to the functioning of the jury system that jurors not be influenced in their deliberations by fears that they subsequently will be harassed by lawyers or others who wish to learn what transpired in the jury room, neither defense counsel nor the prosecutor should discuss a case with jurors after trial in a way that is critical of the verdict.<sup>7</sup> Where there is evidence of juror misconduct that might undermine the verdict, a lawyer may make inquiries for the purpose of ascertaining the facts, carefully avoiding any harassment. A lawyer also may properly

Standard 4-7.4. Opening statement

The lawyer's opening statement should be confined to a brief statement of the issues in the case and evidence the lawyer intends to offer which the lawyer believes in good faith will be available and admissible. It is unprofessional conduct to allude to any evidence unless there is a good faith and reasonable basis for believing such evidence will be tendered and admitted in evidence.

Standard 4-7.5. Presentation of evidence

(a) It is unprofessional conduct for a lawyer knowingly to offer false evidence, whether by documents, tangible evidence, or the testimony of witnesses, or fail to seek withdrawal thereof upon discovery of its falsity.

(b) It is unprofessional conduct for a lawyer knowingly and for the purpose of bringing inadmissible matter to the attention of the judge or jury to offer inadmissible evidence, ask legally objectionable questions, or make other impermissible comments or arguments in the presence of the judge or jury.

(c) It is unprofessional conduct to permit any tangible evidence to be displayed in the view of the judge or jury which would tend to prejudice fair consideration of the case by the judge or jury until such time as a good faith tender of such evidence is made.

(d) It is unprofessional conduct to tender tangible evidence in the presence of the judge or jury if it would tend to prejudice fair consideration of the case unless there is a reasonable basis for its admission in evidence. When there is any substantial doubt about the admissibility of such evidence it should be tendered by an offer of proof and a ruling obtained.

Commentary*Using False Evidence or Known Perjury

The subject of the lawyer's duty with respect to false evidence, fabricated documents, or perjured testimony by witnesses is also covered in the Code of Professional Responsibility, which states that the duty of the lawyer to the client is to be performed "within the bounds of the law,"<sup>1</sup> and which requires that "a lawyer shall not . . . [k]nowingly use perjured testimony or false evidence."<sup>2</sup> The presentation of false evidence has been considered ample grounds for disbarment.<sup>3</sup> The lawyer who presents a witness knowing that the witness intends to commit perjury thereby engages in subornation of perjury.<sup>4</sup> Even if the witness does not realize the testimony will be false, the lawyer who knows that it is and nevertheless presents it may be guilty of an attempt to suborn perjury or a like offense.<sup>5</sup>

Presenting Inadmissible Evidence

The rules of evidence determine what can properly be presented to the trier of fact, whether judge or jury, and the procedures by which it must be presented. These rules operate to keep from the judge or jury incompetent, irrelevant, and unreliable evidence and thus to limit the kinds of evidence that may be considered in deciding a case. The mere offer of inadmissible evidence or asking an improper question may be sufficient to communicate the precise fact that the rules of evidence are designed to keep from the fact finder. Moreover, the damage may be emphasized if it is challenged by an objection, so that the mere offer of inadmissible matter may leave the opposing party with no effective remedy.

Yet this is a common offense on the part of many who would resent the imputation of unfair practices, and not little ingenuity is often employed to draw out statements that are promptly stricken out. . . . [H]e who resorts to such methods places himself on the plane of the shyster and the pettifogger.<sup>6</sup>

These practices and the similar tactic of arguing to the bench or making comments on or off the record in a manner calculated to influence the jury are condemned by the Code of Professional Responsibility.<sup>7</sup> These tactics are particularly pernicious because the mere fact that evidence is ruled inadmissible, a question is deemed improper by the court, or an argument is addressed to the court on a question of admissibility may tend to arouse the curiosity of the jury. Many cases have held such conduct to be ground for declaring a mistrial or granting a new trial.<sup>8</sup> Such remedies are inadequate, however, because the matter may be held not to be prejudicial and, in criminal cases, because of the unavailability of an appeal by the government from an acquittal. When counsel is honestly uncertain about whether a particular question or item of evidence is subject to objection, counsel should be permitted to inquire of the court, out of the presence of the jury, regarding the propriety of the proposed action and to secure a ruling.<sup>9</sup>

Display and Tender of Tangible Evidence

The rationale underlying paragraph (b), as explained above, applies as well to paragraphs (c) and (d). Tangible evidence requires special treatment because such evidence is immediately subject to scrutiny once it is brought into the courtroom. As in paragraph (b), dealing with testimonial evidence, the purpose of paragraphs (c) and (d) is to prevent tangible evidence from coming to the attention of the trier of fact unless and until it is offered. The premature display of a tangible article in the courtroom may be unduly inflammatory even though it is later admitted. Hence, such an article should not be exposed to view until it is formally offered for admission in evidence. Moreover, the offer must be made in good faith. If there is any doubt as to the admissibility of the article, the display and tender should be made outside the presence of the jury.

Standard 4-7.6. Examination of witnesses

(a) The interrogation of all witnesses should be conducted fairly, objectively, and with due regard for the dignity and legitimate privacy of the witness, and without seeking to intimidate or humiliate the witness unnecessarily. Proper cross-examination can be conducted without violating rules of decorum.

(b) A lawyer's belief or knowledge that the witness is telling the truth does not preclude cross-examination, but should, if possible, be taken into consideration by counsel in conducting the cross-examination.

(c) A lawyer should not call a witness who the lawyer knows will claim a valid privilege not to testify, for the purpose of impressing upon the jury the fact of the claim of privilege. In some instances, doing so will constitute unprofessional conduct.

(d) It is unprofessional conduct for a lawyer to ask a question which implies the existence of a factual predicate for which a good faith belief is lacking.

History of Standard

Original paragraph (b) provided that defense counsel "should not misuse the power of cross-examination or impeachment by employing it to discredit or undermine a witness if he knows the witness is testifying truthfully." This standard has been changed to make clear that it is permissible, if necessary, for defense counsel to cross-examine vigorously witnesses who are believed or known to be testifying truthfully. There are some cases where, unless counsel challenges the prosecution's known truthful witnesses, there will be no opposition to the prosecution's evidence and the defendant will be denied an effective defense. However, lawyers are encouraged in paragraph (b) to take into consideration in conducting cross-examination the fact that the state's witness is testifying truthfully.

Original paragraph (d) stated that "[i]t is unprofessional conduct to ask a question which implies the existence of a factual predicate which the examiner knows he cannot support by evidence." The accepted test, however, for determining the propriety of questions on cross-examination is whether the examiner has a good faith belief for the questions asked, not whether evidence is available to introduce in support of the question. Accordingly, paragraph (d) has been changed and now contains a "good faith" test as the basis for asking cross-examination questions.

There are stylistic changes in paragraphs (a) and (c).

Commentary

Character and Scope of Direct and Cross-examination

The ethic of our legal tradition has long recognized that there are limitations on the manner in which witnesses should be examined beyond those contained in rules of evidence. The Code of Professional Responsibility forbids a lawyer to "[a]sk any question that he has no reasonable basis to believe is relevant to the case and that is intended to degrade a witness or other person."<sup>1</sup> Another source states that "[a] lawyer should never be unfair or abusive or inconsiderate to adverse witnesses or opposing litigants, or ask any question intended not legitimately to impeach but only to insult or degrade the witness."<sup>2</sup> Some states have by statute guaranteed "the right of a witness to be protected from irrelevant, improper or insulting questions, and from harsh or insulting demeanor. . . ."<sup>3</sup> An eminent British barrister has spoken on the subject in these terms:

The right of cross examination is important: it is one of the things which distinguishes the procedures of trial in the common law countries from those derived from Roman law and I think distinguishes it to the advantage of our system. But it is a right easily abused. One has always to remember that its object is not to examine crossly, as Mr. Baron Alderson put it; not to blackguard the witness; not to bring out unhappy or discreditable things there may have been in the witness's past unless they have a clear and direct bearing on the witness's credibility in the instant case.<sup>4</sup>

Ultimately, a lawyer must always exercise discretion in determining the extent to which the damage done to the reputation of a witness is justified by the contribution that a particular line of questioning may make to the truth-finding function of the trial.

Undermining a Truthful Witness

The mere fact that defense counsel can, by use of impeachment, impair or destroy the credibility of an adverse witness does not impose on counsel a duty to do so. Cross-examination and impeachment are legal tools that are a monopoly of licensed lawyers, given primarily for the purpose of exposing falsehood. A prosecution witness, for example, may testify in a manner that confirms precisely what the defense lawyer has learned from the defendant and has substantiated by investigation. But defense counsel may believe that the temperament, personality, or inexperience of the witness provide an opportunity, by adroit cross-examination, to confuse the witness and undermine the witness's testimony in the eyes of the jury. If defense counsel can provide an effective defense for the accused and also avoid confusion or embarrassment of the witness, counsel should seek to do so.

Another example of a situation where restraint may be called for is where a witness whose testimony the lawyer believes to be truthful is subject to impeachment by revealing to the jury that the witness was convicted of a crime many years earlier. The use of this conventional method of impeachment against a witness who has testified truthfully should be avoided if it is possible for defense counsel to do so without jeopardizing the defense of the accused. In deciding whether to use such impeachment, counsel undoubtedly will want to consider the tactical implications, since the jury may recognize the undue humiliation to the witness and thus react adversely to the lawyer.

There also is a public policy factor underlying restraint in use of impeachment powers vested in a lawyer. The policy of the law is to encourage witnesses to come forward and give evidence in litigation. If witnesses are subjected to needless humiliation when they testify, the existing human tendency to avoid "becoming involved" will be increased.

Notwithstanding the foregoing comments, there unquestionably are many cases where defense counsel cannot provide the accused with a defense at all if counsel is precluded from engaging in vigorous cross-examination of witnesses either believed or known to have testified truthfully. For example, where the defendant has admitted guilt to the lawyer and does not plan to testify, and the lawyer simply intends to put the state to its proof and raise a reasonable doubt, skillful cross-examination of the prosecution's witnesses is essential. Indeed, were counsel in this circumstance to forgo vigorous cross-examination of the prosecution's witnesses, counsel would violate the clear duty of zealous representation that is owed to the client.<sup>5</sup> Justice White, in a 1967 Supreme Court opinion, addressed the sometimes professional obligation of defense counsel to impeach truthful witnesses:

[A]bsent a voluntary plea of guilty, we . . . insist that [defense counsel] defend his client whether he is innocent or guilty. The State has the obligation to present the evidence. Defense counsel need present nothing, even if he knows what the truth is. He need not furnish any witnesses to the police, or reveal any confidences of his client, or furnish any other information to help the prosecution's case. If he can confuse a witness, even a truthful one, or make him appear at a disadvantage, unsure or indecisive, that will be his normal course. Our interest in not convicting the innocent permits counsel to put the State to its proof, to put the State's case in the worst possible light, regardless of what he thinks or knows to be the truth. Undoubtedly there are some limits which defense counsel must observe but more often than not, defense counsel will cross-examine a prosecution witness, and impeach him if he can, even if he thinks the witness is telling the truth, just as he will attempt to destroy a witness who he thinks is lying. In this respect, as part of our modified adversary system and as part of the duty imposed on the most honorable defense counsel, we countenance or require conduct which in many instances has little, if any, relation to the search for truth.<sup>6</sup>

Forcing Claim of Privilege Before the Jury

Although the situation arises more frequently for the prosecutor than it does for defense counsel, it is equally unprofessional for either to call a witness he or she knows will assert a claim of privilege in order to encourage the jury to draw inferences from the fact that the witness claims a privilege. If there is genuine doubt whether the witness will claim the privilege or whether the validity of the privilege will be recognized, the matter should be resolved out of the presence of the jury.

Unfounded Question

It is an improper tactic for either the prosecutor or defense counsel to attempt to communicate impressions by innuendo through questions that would be to the defendant's advantage to answer in the negative, for example, "Have you ever been convicted of the crime of robbery?" or "Weren't you a member of the Communist party?" or "Did you tell Mr. X that . . . ?" when the questioner has no evidence to support the innuendo.<sup>7</sup> Generally, a question may be asked on cross-examination if, as recommended in paragraph (d), a "good faith belief" in the factual predicate implied in the question is present.<sup>8</sup>

[Standard 4-7.7. Testimony by the defendant]

However, in some situations in some jurisdictions, it may be necessary to have more than a good faith basis present for asking a question on cross-examination. It has been held, e.g., that a witness may not be cross-examined as to prior convictions if the examiner does not have a certified record of the conviction available to rebut a denial of the conviction. See, e.g., State v. Williams, 297 Minn. 76, 210 N.W.2d 21 (1973); People v. Di Paolo, 366 Mich. 394, 115 N.W.2d 78 (1962). Contra, People v. Lewis.

[(c) If withdrawal from the case is not feasible or is not permitted by the court, or if the situation arises immediately preceding trial or during the trial and the defendant insists upon testifying perjuriously in his or her own behalf, it is unprofessional conduct for the lawyer to lend aid to the perjury or use the perjured testimony. Before the defendant takes the stand in these circumstances, the lawyer should make a record of the fact that the defendant is taking the stand against the advice of counsel in some appropriate manner without revealing the fact to the court. The lawyer may identify the witness as the defendant and may ask appropriate questions of the defendant when it is believed that the defendant's answers will not be perjurious. As to matters for which it is believed the defendant will offer perjurious testimony, the lawyer should seek to avoid direct examination of the defendant in the conventional manner; instead, the lawyer should ask the defendant if he or she wishes to make any additional statement concerning the case to the trier or triers of the facts. A lawyer may not later argue the defendant's known false version of facts to the jury as worthy of belief, and may not recite or rely upon the false testimony in his or her closing argument.]

Commentary

Inferences Warranted by the Evidence

Because of the general unavailability of government appeals, courts rarely have occasion to pass directly on the question of the limits of propriety of argument to the jury by defense counsel. The issue has been raised indirectly, however, in many cases in which the propriety of the prosecutor's summation has been questioned, where some courts have held that statements made by the prosecutor that would otherwise be improper would not lead to reversal because the statements were fairly responsive to impermissible arguments or questions of defense counsel.<sup>1</sup> It should be accepted that both prosecutor and defense counsel are subject to the same general limitations in the scope of their argument.<sup>2</sup>

Defense counsel is no more entitled than the prosecutor to assert as fact that which has not been introduced in evidence.<sup>3</sup> The rules of evidence cannot be subverted by putting to the jury, in argument or opening statements, matters not in the record. For example, where the defendant's willingness to take a lie detector test has been held inadmissible, defense counsel has been precluded from suggesting that willingness in argument.<sup>4</sup> On the other hand, attorneys are entitled to reasonable latitude in arguing inferences from the evidence.<sup>5</sup>

There are often circumstances in which counsel may be entitled to argue to the jury that they should draw an inference adverse to the prosecution as the result of its failure to bring forth some particular item of evidence or to call as a witness someone who has a special relation to the facts of the case.<sup>6</sup> But it is a form of misrepresentation, and therefore improper, for counsel to argue such an inference when counsel knows that the evidence was not presented because it had been excluded by the court or is inadmissible.<sup>7</sup> A lawyer who has successfully urged the court to exclude evidence should not be allowed to point to the absence of that evidence to create an inference that it does not exist.

The obligation to avoid misrepresentation to the jury is broad. An argument to the jury that the accused has a "clean record" when counsel is aware of prior convictions, although the evidence is silent, is an affirmative misrepresentation of a fact. On the other hand, if the record shows the accused has a long and stable work record, a family, and other ties to the community, it is not improper to argue from this that the accused is a person whose credibility can be relied on.

The Code of Professional Responsibility provides that a lawyer shall not "[k]nowingly make a false statement of . . . fact" or "[s]tate or allude to any matter that . . . will not be supported by admissible evidence."<sup>8</sup>

Personal Belief

"[A] lawyer shall not . . . [a]ssert his personal opinion . . . as to the guilt or innocence of an accused. . . ."<sup>9</sup> This statement of the profession's well-established rule, contained in the Code of Professional Responsibility, is justified on several grounds:

In the first place, [the lawyer's] personal belief has no real bearing on the issue; no witness would be permitted so to testify, even under oath, and subject to cross-examination, much less the lawyer without either. Also, if expression of personal belief were permitted, it would give an improper advantage to the older and better known lawyer, whose opinion would carry more weight, and also with the jury at least, an undue advantage to an unscrupulous one. Furthermore, if such were permitted, for counsel to omit to make such a positive assertion might be taken as an admission that he did not believe in his case.<sup>10</sup>

In addition, this prohibition is essential to the maintenance of the appropriate independence of the lawyer from identification with the client. "He is the representative but not the alter ego. . . . Counsel in England never says 'I think.' He says 'I submit' or, 'I suggest,' or, to the Judge or Jury, 'You may think.'"<sup>11</sup> "[No] advocate in any circumstances should ever permit himself to assert his own belief in the merits of the case which he is arguing or in the innocence of the prisoner whom he is defending. The moment he does so he steps outside his role of the advocate."<sup>12</sup>

The argument in a criminal case will sometimes include points based on probabilities, but this is permissible only if those probabilities are supported by the record or by common experience. Counsel may not suggest, for example, that the evidence is consistent with the probability that someone other than the defendant committed the crime unless there is some basis in the record for doing so. Thus, if an accomplice has testified against the defendant, defense counsel may argue that the accomplice is seeking self-protection or the protection of a friend. The naming of a specific person other than the defendant as the one responsible for the crime, however, is subject to an important limitation. Since such a line of argument could lead to the prosecution of the person named and, at least, may be destructive of the person's good name and reputation, counsel should not make such an argument unless there is reasonable ground in the evidence to support that position.

Appeals to Prejudice; Attacks on the Prosecutor; Digression from the Evidence

The prohibition of personal attacks on the prosecutor in closing argument is but part of the larger duty of counsel to avoid acrimony in relations with opposing counsel during trial and to confine argument to record evidence.<sup>13</sup> It is firmly established that the lawyer should abstain from any allusion to the personal peculiarities and idiosyncrasies of opposing counsel.<sup>14</sup> A personal attack by the prosecutor on defense counsel is improper,<sup>15</sup> and the duty to abstain from such attacks is obviously reciprocal.<sup>16</sup>

Remarks calculated to evoke bias, passions, or prejudice "should never be made in a court of justice by any one."<sup>17</sup> There are many cases in which courts have reversed convictions as the result of inflammatory remarks made by the prosecutor containing references to the defendant's race, religion, or ethnic background.<sup>18</sup> This duty is reciprocal and it is improper conduct for defense counsel to make arguments calculated to appeal to such prejudices.<sup>19</sup> There are, of course, occasions on which the matter of prejudice is itself an issue. In such circumstances, reference to it in argument would be appropriate if restricted to the evidence.

It is also improper for counsel to divert the jury from its duty to decide the case on the evidence by introducing broad social issues that are not based on evidence in the record.<sup>20</sup> Just as a prosecutor should not be permitted to argue to the jury that the defendant should be found guilty because of widespread crime in the community, it is improper for defense counsel to encourage the jury to disregard their duty because of political or social implications of the case.

Commentary

The problem of digression from the record can arise at both the trial and the appellate levels. At the trial level it is highly improper for a lawyer to refer in colloquy, argument, or other context to factual matter beyond the scope of the evidence or the range of judicial notice. This is true whether the case is being tried to a court or to a jury, but it is particularly offensive in a jury trial. It can involve the risk of serious prejudice, with a mistrial as a possible remedy. Ordinarily a trial court should summarily exclude any reference to factual matter beyond the scope of the evidence in any significant way. The broad discretion a trial court has in such matters enables it to deal with them as they arise by allowing a party to reopen the case or to take other appropriate steps to enlarge the record, so as to provide an evidentiary basis for the matter the party wishes to argue but has for some reason failed to establish. At the appellate level it is also a grave violation of ethical standards to argue factual matters outside the record.<sup>1</sup>

The typical agreement for representation made by retained counsel in a criminal case provides for representation through trial, including post-trial motions. This is as it should be. Consistent with this notion, these standards elsewhere provide that "[c]ounsel initially provided should continue to represent the defendant throughout the trial court proceedings," which is explained as including the filing of any necessary post-trial motions.<sup>1</sup> Moreover, failure to make a motion for a new trial, or to pursue a motion once filed, has been considered ineffective assistance of counsel.<sup>2</sup> Continuity of representation at the stage of posttrial mo-

PART VIII. AFTER CONVICTION

Standard 4-8.1. Sentencing

(a) The lawyer for the accused should be familiar with the sentencing alternatives available to the court and should endeavor to learn its practices in exercising sentencing discretion. The consequences of the various dispositions available should be explained fully by the lawyer to the accused.

(b) Defense counsel should present to the court any ground which will assist in reaching a proper disposition favorable to the accused. If a presentence report or summary is made available to the defense lawyer, he or she should seek to verify the information contained in it and should be prepared to supplement or challenge it if necessary. If there is no presentence report or if it is not disclosed, the lawyer should submit to the court and the prosecutor all favorable information relevant to sentencing and in an appropriate case be prepared to suggest a program of rehabilitation based on the lawyer's exploration of employment, educational, and other opportunities made available by community services.

(c) Counsel should alert the accused to the right of allocution, if any, and to the possible dangers of making a judicial confession in the course of allocution which might tend to prejudice an appeal.

Commentary*Sentencing Alternatives and Practices

The importance of the role of counsel in the sentencing stage of the criminal process is suggested in part by decisions invalidating sentences because of the absence of defense counsel at the sentencing proceeding.<sup>1</sup> The Supreme Court has suggested that the need for counsel may be greater at sentencing than in the determination of guilt because "[t]here a judge usually moves within a large area of discretion and doubts. . . . Even the most self-assured judge may well want to bring to his aid every consideration that counsel for the accused can appropriately urge."<sup>2</sup> Additionally, defense counsel should determine the statutory alternatives available to the judge in exercising discretion in sentencing for the particular offense involved. But it is not enough for the lawyer to function as a check on the judge in this regard; the lawyer should serve also as counsel to the client. The lawyer should carefully explain to the defendant the sentencing alternatives available to the court and what they will mean for the defendant personally should any of them be selected.

Preparation and Presentation of Sentencing Data

Sentencing normally takes place in a context in which neither judge nor counsel is personally acquainted with the defendant. Moreover, the prognosis for rehabilitation depends heavily on the opportunities available to the defendant for gainful employment. This, in turn, may depend on educational opportunities. The defendant may be in need of family counseling or mental health assistance. In most courts these and other considerations are the subject of a presentence report prepared by a probation officer or other staff assistant to the court. Where the probation report is made available to the defense, counsel has a role to play in determining the accuracy of information on which the report is based and in evaluating the soundness of its conclusions. To do so, counsel will need to make some independent investigation. Where there is no such report or it is not released to the defense, counsel will need to develop a defense equivalent to the report for presentation to the court. But even when a presentence report on the defendant has been prepared by the court, counsel may still wish to file with the court written information concerning the defendant's background.

In presenting to the court facts bearing on the sentence, defense counsel must often personally vouch for their accuracy, since the formal processes of receiving testimony are not usually employed at the sentencing stage. Counsel may well advance the interest of the client best by demonstrating a measure of objectivity, but "[h]e should continue, as he has done throughout the trial itself, to advance and protect the best interests of his client. . . . [H]is participation should be as objective and realistic as is consistent with illuminating the most favorable factors bearing upon the requested disposition."<sup>3</sup>

In the trial stage, defense counsel is an advocate in a representative capacity participating in an adversary proceeding. Termination of the trial does not terminate counsel's duties to the client, but the duties are not precisely the same as before. Counsel may not present facts that are known to be false in a manner that creates an inference that they are true. Counsel may not, for example, present facts concerning the defendant's character that would suggest to the judge that the defendant does not have a prior record of crime if it is known that the defendant has such a record and that fact has not been disclosed to the court.

Allocution

It sometimes happens that in the course of exercising the right of allocution, the defendant will freely admit the guilt that he or she has, up to the time of verdict, denied; the defendant, for example, may have taken the stand and controverted the evidence by a denial of any participation. Most judges are not unduly surprised by this, but there are risks involved. Some judges may impose a heavier sentence if it is felt the defendant has committed gross perjury.<sup>4</sup> Even more serious perhaps is that the defendant's statement on allocution admitting guilt is part of the record and, if the conviction is appealed, that admission may compromise the appeal, especially if it is based on insufficiency of the evidence.

The other side of the coin is that if the assumptions underlying the right of allocution are correct, the right is one not to be waived lightly. The more realistic view may be that an accused does not often by his or her own utterance influence the sentence. Because of the risks of a judicial confession, defense counsel should be alert to the problem and would be well advised to recommend to the defendant that counsel make all statements in mitigation or that the client exercise the right of allocution with these hazards in mind.

Standard 4-8.2. Appeal

(a) After conviction, the lawyer should explain to the defendant the meaning and consequences of the court's judgment and defendant's right of appeal. The lawyer should give the defendant his or her professional judgment as to whether there are meritorious grounds for appeal and as to the probable results of an appeal. The lawyer should also explain to the defendant the advantages and disadvantages of an appeal. The decision whether to appeal must be the defendant's own choice.

(b) The lawyer should take whatever steps are necessary to protect the defendant's right of appeal.

Commentary*Advising Defendant Concerning Appeal

A defendant needs effective representation and advice in the relatively short period immediately following conviction when the decision whether to appeal must be made. Yet it happens on occasion that no legal representation exists, sometimes for months, at this juncture. Lawyers, whether retained or assigned at trial, sometimes take the view that their responsibilities end with the final judgment of the trial court and communication between defendant and attorney frequently ceases.<sup>1</sup> Whatever the cause, the effects are most undesirable. To make the right to counsel meaningful, representation must be continuous throughout the criminal process. Because of the intimate familiarity with the record of the trial proceedings, trial counsel is in the best position to advise the defendant concerning the factors to be weighed in reaching the decision whether to appeal.<sup>2</sup>

Counsel's first duty is to make sure the defendant understands the meaning and consequences of the judgment of the court. For example, if the defendant has been sentenced to a term of imprisonment, counsel should explain to the defendant the applicable provisions of law relating to parole and reduction of sentence for good behavior.

Of greater importance is the duty of counsel to discuss frankly and objectively with the defendant the matters to be considered in deciding whether to appeal. Careful exploration should be made of the possible errors that could be pressed on appeal, their relative strengths and weaknesses, and the probable outcome of an appeal. Counsel should also attempt to learn and evaluate the doubts that the defendant may have about the adjudication of the case. To make the defendant's ultimate choice a meaningful one, counsel's evaluation of the case must be communicated in a comprehensible manner. Possible disadvantages and risks involved in an appeal should also be explained to the defendant. The consequences of an appeal may not be apparent to the defendant. In some circumstances even a successful appeal followed by a new trial may offer little prospect other than postponement of the service of the sentence. On the other hand, the defendant may be unduly chastened by the adverse verdict. Where it is appropriate to do so, the advantages of an appeal should be explained to the defendant. Whatever the defendant's situation, the decision is a critical one, since claims of trial error are lost if they are not raised on appeal. Because of the importance of the decision, trial counsel should always consult promptly with the defendant after making a careful appraisal of the prospects of an appeal.

Protecting the Right of Appeal

A considerable body of postconviction litigation has been generated involving failures on the part of trial counsel to protect the defendant's right of appeal. A few state courts have held that the failure of counsel to advise the defendant of the right to appeal is not a basis for postconviction relief.<sup>3</sup> Federal district courts have reached similar conclusions where the courts believed the defendants had seemed satisfied with the outcome of the litigation at the state trial court stage.<sup>4</sup> In other federal habeas corpus cases based on the failure of defense counsel to inform the defendant of the right to appeal, relief has been granted.<sup>5</sup> In other cases, habeas corpus relief has been granted on the related claim that defense counsel had known of possibly meritorious grounds for appeal which had not been communicated to defendants, who had not appealed.<sup>6</sup>

Where the claim for postconviction relief has been based on the failure of defense counsel to execute defendant's instructions to appeal, the cases are again mixed in outcome. A few courts have denied relief.<sup>7</sup> Most, however, have granted a nunc pro tunc remedy to the defendant thus deprived of appeal.<sup>8</sup> The fact situations out of which many cases have arisen indicate genuine uncertainty on the part of lawyers concerning their responsibilities after verdict. There is often misunderstanding between lawyer and client concerning the action that will be taken by each.<sup>9</sup> Rather than continue to face the problem in the form of petitions for relief from time limitations on filing appeals or of postconviction collateral attacks on the ground of inadequate representation, trial counsel's obligation to protect the defendant's right of appeal should be affirmed. Accordingly, paragraph (b) recommends that "[t]he lawyer . . . take whatever steps are necessary to protect the defendant's right of appeal." Frequently this will include perfecting the appeal, even though arrangements may have to be made for other counsel to represent the defendant before the appellate court.

This language has been deleted in view of a provision in chapter 5, on Providing Defense Services, recommending that counsel "should continue to represent the defendant throughout the trial court proceedings." As the commentary to standard 5-5.2 reflects, the failure to recommend that counsel initially appointed should continue to represent the defendant throughout the appellate proceedings is deliberate. The chapter on Providing Defense Services also urges that counsel not be appointed by

Commentary

The responsibility of counsel assigned to represent a person unable to afford representation requires that the lawyer serve the client as an advocate. It is not appropriate for counsel to act as an amicus curiae or as adviser to the court. Before the merits of an appeal are determined by a court, the defendant is entitled to the advocacy of a lawyer.<sup>1</sup> The possibility exists in every appeal, by those with retained as well as assigned counsel, that the defendant will want to raise claims that the lawyer finds lack merit. The defendant who has selected a lawyer and is paying for the service is not likely to reject counsel's advice. Where counsel has been assigned and receives no compensation from the client, the chances are greater that the client will take a position independent of, and perhaps in total opposition to, that recommended by the lawyer.

As stated earlier, every lawyer has a primary obligation to give the client sound professional advice on the matter for which the lawyer is retained.<sup>2</sup> If a convicted defendant wants to appeal on entirely frivolous grounds, trial counsel should attempt to dissuade the defendant from appealing and appellate counsel should seek to persuade the defendant to withdraw the appeal. Such advice should be given freely and forcefully. Assigned counsel has a special responsibility to develop a relationship of trust and confidence with the client so that the client will appreciate that the lawyer knows the case and has the client's best interests clearly in mind.

Counsel, however, should not conclude too quickly that an appeal is frivolous. A defendant is entitled to more than merely a negative reaction to the supposed errors that the convicted defendant thinks are present in the case. The lawyer should examine and analyze the record, as the lawyer would do if a client were paying a fee for this service. In some instances, even where the existing doctrine does not support a case for reversal on appeal, there may be a sound basis for arguing for a change in the law.<sup>3</sup>

Despite counsel's best effort to find meritorious grounds for appeal, there will arise situations in which counsel is faced with an appeal in which the entire case, or part of the case, is frivolous. In such circumstances, a variety of responses by assigned counsel have been found. Principal among them is the request for leave to withdraw from the case. Others have been more or less overt, professionally responsible actions by the attorney to dissociate himself or herself from the groundless contentions.

Considerable attention has been focused to date on the matter of counsel's withdrawal and the effect on the litigation of such withdrawal. In Anders v. California,<sup>4</sup> the Supreme Court affirmed the power, if not the duty, of counsel to withdraw in some cases: "Of course, if counsel finds his case to be wholly frivolous, after a conscientious examination of it, he should so advise the court and request permission to withdraw."<sup>5</sup> The Court found that permitting counsel's withdrawal in Anders was improper because counsel's stated basis for so acting was only an opinion that there was no merit in the appeal. The Court did not equate such a no-merit statement with an evaluation of the appeal as frivolous.

The Anders decision thus appears to rest on the distinction between complete frivolity and absence of merit. The latter is not enough to support either a request by counsel to withdraw or the granting of such a request by the court. The Supreme Court outlined the procedure to be followed when counsel concludes that an appeal is wholly frivolous:

That request [for permission to withdraw] must . . . be accompanied by a brief referring to anything in the record that might arguably support the appeal. A copy of counsel's brief should be furnished the indigent and time allowed him to raise any points that he chooses; the court — not counsel — then proceeds, after a full examination of all the proceedings, to decide whether the case is wholly frivolous. If it so finds it may grant counsel's request to withdraw and dismiss the appeal insofar as federal requirements are concerned, or proceed to a decision on the merits, if state law so requires. On the other hand, if it finds any of the legal points arguable on their merits (and therefore not frivolous) it must, prior to decision, afford the indigent the assistance of counsel to argue the appeal.<sup>6</sup>

In an appeal that is not entirely frivolous in counsel's estimate, the problem may arise of the appellant insisting on including in the appeal a particular point despite counsel's protest that it is frivolous. In such a situation, the lawyer might brief and argue the points he or she believes are supportable and omit the others.<sup>7</sup> Alternatively, the lawyer might include the frivolous question in the brief but deal with it sketchily and without developing it in detail or pressing it on the court.<sup>8</sup> Another possibility is for counsel to present the grounds but openly dissociate himself or herself from them.<sup>9</sup>

Standard 4-8.4. Conduct of appeal

(a) Appellate counsel should be diligent in perfecting an appeal and expediting its prompt submission to the appellate court.

(b) Appellate counsel should be scrupulously accurate in referring to the record and the authorities upon which counsel relies in the presentation to the court of briefs and oral argument.

(c) It is unprofessional conduct for a lawyer intentionally to refer to or argue on the basis of facts outside the record on appeal, unless such facts are matters of common public knowledge based on ordinary human experience or matters of which the court may take judicial notice.

Commentary*Diligence in Prosecuting Appeal

As at the pretrial and trial stages of a criminal case, it is the duty of the lawyer to avoid unnecessary delay in performing the various steps involved in the processing and submission of an appeal to the appellate court.<sup>1</sup> The various steps in the appellate process — for example, designation of the record, specification of errors, filing of briefs — are governed by rules prescribing time limits within which particular actions must be performed. Such rules are designed to expedite the orderly disposition of criminal appeals. The lawyer has a duty to comply with them and must not ask for additional time except for good cause fairly and honestly presented to the appellate court.<sup>2</sup> Above all, counsel must not seek delay merely to accommodate the selfish interest of the client to postpone as long as possible the execution of the judgment under review. Dilatory tactics for that purpose constitute abuse of the right to appellate review, are demeaning to the lawyer, and are contrary to the lawyer's duties as an officer of the court in the administration of criminal justice.

Accuracy in Brief and Oral Argument

In presenting the facts and issues to the appellate court in the brief and on oral argument, the lawyer must confine himself or herself to the record made in the trial court and carefully observe the distinction between recorded matter and argumentation. In reviewing the evidence and happenings at the trial, counsel's statement must be objective, accurate, and free of distorting or argumentative coloration. Adverse as well as favorable evidence should be set forth. All evidence and other factual matter of record relevant to an issue on appeal should be presented fairly and accurately in the lawyer's statement of the case. Argumentative contentions concerning the import of testimony, inferences derived from the evidence, and rulings of the trial judge should be presented for what they are — the lawyer's arguments in support of claims of reversible error at the trial. Counsel must not mislead the court by misrepresenting the record or by ignoring matters of record that are adverse to counsel's contentions.

1. Compare standard 4-1.2(a).

2. Compare standard 4-1.2(b).

Similarly, it is the duty of the lawyer to be accurate in citing precedents that support the lawyer's contentions. The Code of Professional Responsibility requires that "a lawyer . . . disclose [l]egal authority in the controlling jurisdiction known to him to be directly adverse to the position of his client and which is not disclosed by opposing counsel."<sup>3</sup> But having done so, the lawyer is free, under the adversary system, to challenge the soundness of such authority.<sup>4</sup>

If the lawyer discovers that material matter has been omitted from the record on appeal, the proper course is to cure such omission by an appropriate motion. The lawyer should not undertake to deal with the matter on the hypothesis that it is already properly before the appellate court.

Matter Not of Record

Under no circumstances should the lawyer refer to or rely on matter that is completely extraneous to the record made in the trial court and beyond the scope of the doctrine of judicial notice. This is improper for the same reason that deviation from the record would have been improper in closing arguments at trial. An appellate court's function is limited to review of what took place in the trial court. In an appellate court a lawyer must take the case as it was tried and on that record alone.

In cases where new counsel appears on appeal, review of the transcript sometimes leads to further inquiry, but matter discovered by such inquiry may not be used on the appeal. Means are provided for presenting newly discovered evidence in rules of court or statutes. Usually they require that leave be secured from the appellate court to file a motion in the trial court in relation to the newly discovered evidence.

3. ABA, CODE OF PROFESSIONAL RESPONSIBILITY DR7-106(B)(1).

4. See id. DR7-102(A)(2).

Standard 4-8.5. Postconviction remedies

After a conviction is affirmed on appeal, appellate counsel should determine whether there is any ground for relief under other postconviction remedies. If there is a reasonable prospect of a favorable result counsel should explain to the defendant the advantages and disadvantages of taking such action. Appellate counsel is not obligated to represent the defendant in a postconviction proceeding unless counsel has agreed to do so. In other respects the responsibility of a lawyer in a postconviction proceeding should be guided generally by the standards governing the conduct of lawyers in criminal cases.

CommentaryAdvising the Defendant

The situation of appellate counsel after an appeal has resulted in the affirmance of a conviction is fundamentally the same as that of trial counsel after a judgment of conviction. Counsel's first task is to evaluate the prospects of further relief to the client. One avenue of such relief may be further appellate review, if any is available, assuming the first appeal was in an intermediate appellate court. In many cases, however, the only course may be resort to a postconviction remedy. Of course, if there are contentions to be made arising out of facts not developed at the trial, a proceeding in which those facts can be alleged and proved will be the only appropriate method of relief.

Assistance in Obtaining Counsel

The nature of the lawyer's obligation to take steps to secure postconviction relief for a client the lawyer represented at an earlier stage of the proceedings and the lawyer's function in assisting the client in obtaining counsel if requested to do so are governed by the considerations set forth in the commentary to standard 4-8.2.

Conduct of Lawyers in Postconviction Proceedings

Since a postconviction proceeding is fundamentally an original judicial proceeding, involving problems of investigation, preparation, and trial, the standards governing lawyers in these tasks are essentially the same as those outlined in these standards for the defense of a criminal case.

The recommendations in this standard should not be read as suggesting that the lawyer has a duty to invoke postconviction remedies. If there is no basis for pursuing such a remedy, it is the duty of the lawyer to advise the client candidly. This is especially true where the relief available is nothing more than a new trial, and the more so when a new trial is likely to result in a conviction before another judge and jury.

Standard 4-8.6. Challenges to the effectiveness of counsel

(a) If a lawyer, after investigation, is satisfied that another lawyer who served in an earlier phase of the case did not provide effective assistance, he or she should not hesitate to seek relief for the defendant on that ground.

(b) If a lawyer, after investigation, is satisfied that another lawyer who served in an earlier phase of the case provided effective assistance, he or she should so advise the client and may decline to proceed further.

(c) A lawyer whose conduct of a criminal case is drawn into question is entitled to testify concerning the matters charged and is not precluded from disclosing the truth concerning the accusation, even though this involves revealing matters which were given in confidence.

Commentary*Raising the Ineffectiveness of Another Lawyer's Representation

The traditional position of the bar that a lawyer must stand ready to challenge the conduct of a colleague where that is necessary to the protection of a client's rights is an essential of our system of justice. Nothing would be more destructive of the goals of effective assistance of counsel and justice than to immunize the misconduct of a lawyer by the unwillingness of other lawyers to expose the inadequacy. Lawyers must be especially careful to avoid permitting their personal regard for a fellow lawyer to blind them to that lawyer's failure to provide the effective assistance to which every defendant is entitled as a matter of constitutional right. Of course, a lawyer owes it to the lawyer attacked, as he or she would to the person who is the object of any legal attack, not to proceed in a matter that is not grounded in fact and law and is merely vindictive and intended to harass the accused lawyer or the courts.<sup>1</sup>

Action When Prior Representation Was Effective

The logical and fair corollary to the standard of paragraph (a) is that if succeeding counsel, after full investigation, concludes that the claim of ineffective legal assistance is groundless, he or she must candidly say so to the client and decline to proceed further. Any other course would be unprofessional harassment of counsel and an imposition on the court. Moreover, unjustified proceedings against former counsel would demean lawyers and reduce them to serving as alter egos for their clients — a role for defense counsel that is rejected in these standards.

Waiver of Attorney-Client Privilege

The Code of Professional Responsibility states that "[a] lawyer may reveal . . . [c]onfidences or secrets necessary . . . to defend himself or his employees or associates against an accusation of wrongful conduct."<sup>2</sup> It has often been held, moreover, that a lawyer is justified in testifying in a proceeding in which the lawyer's professional conduct has been called into question and is not precluded from testifying to matters that would otherwise be protected by the attorney-client privilege.<sup>3</sup> This intrusion on the confidentiality of lawyer-client communications is necessary to prevent an injustice to the attorney; moreover, by raising the issue, the client draws the true facts into controversy and waives the privilege. It has been argued, however, that "the line should be strictly drawn in determining the materiality and relevancy of what the lawyer may properly disclose, since the fear of his disclosure of confidential information as to his client might easily be used to stifle" the proceedings in which his conduct is drawn in question.<sup>4</sup>

INTRODUCTION

Background: The Process of Adoption of the Third Edition

The standards on provision of defense services emerge from a drafting effort of more than two years, begun with the work of an updating task force in the spring of 1988 and completed with the adoption of the standards at the ABA Annual Meeting in 1990. The Task Force on Prosecution and Defense Function/Providing Defense Services was appointed by the Criminal Justice Standards Committee, a standing committee of the Criminal Justice Section. The Task Force first met in May 1988 to chart direction. After review of a preliminary draft in November of that year, a second draft was prepared for review by the Criminal Justice Standards Committee in January 1989. After review by the Standards Committee, third and fourth working drafts were prepared and reviewed by the Task Force and the Standards Committee, respectively, during 1989.

The initial report of the Standards Committee was referred to the Criminal Justice Section Council for preliminary review at its fall meeting in 1989, after which the Standards Committee reviewed and approved a final working draft at a meeting in January 1990. At that point, the Standards Committee had been given the benefit of review by numerous outside organizations, several of which had active liaisons to the committee, as well as several substantive revisions recommended by the Criminal Justice Section Council. The approved draft of the Standards Committee was submitted to the Section Council for consideration once again at its meeting in April 1990. At that meeting, the revisions were overwhelmingly approved by the Council.

The adopted standards on defense services are the result of careful drafting and review by representatives of all segments of the criminal justice system—judges, prosecutors, defense counsel, court personnel and academics active in criminal justice teaching and research. Circulation of the standards to a wide range of outside expertise guaranteed a rich array of comment and criticism which has greatly strengthened the final product.

Major Changes in the Third Edition

The standards on provision of defense services have been revised by the ABA due to the significance of changes in this area of the law over the past decade. Indeed, changes have occurred both with regard to the right to counsel for the legally indigent defendant and in structures and funding for defense services at the state and local levels.

In recent years there have been several national studies of defense services. These are the first studies conducted since 1973,<sup>1</sup> and they have revealed both the significant impact of the imposition of the death penalty on the provision of defense services and the growth of contract services as an alternative model for service delivery. Both of those issues have received extensive treatment in the third edition revisions.

The ABA made significant contributions over the last decade through important studies of defense services. Using data from a national survey, the ABA's Standing Committee on Legal Aid and Indigent Defendants published a study prepared by Professor Norman Lefstein entitled Criminal Defense Services for the Poor: Methods and Programs for Providing Legal Representation and the Need for Adequate Financing (1982). During 1988, the ABA Special Committee on Criminal Justice in a Free Society published Criminal Justice in Crisis, a substantial portion of which was devoted to defense services. These analytical reports provide a critical basis for informed amendment and update of standards on defense services.

Further growth in public defender caseloads has been occasioned both by the dramatic increases in charges in drug-related offenses and the increasing federal government intervention in the relationship between the accused and private counsel. In the latter area, federal prosecutors have issued grand jury subpoenas and used fee forfeiture provisions and cash reporting requirements to impact on the relationship between private defense attorneys and their clients.<sup>2</sup> These actions have resulted in either voluntary or compelled withdrawal of private counsel from representation, with concomitant increases in public expenditures for defense services in these cases.

The last decade has also seen an increasing trend toward state funding and organization of defense services. The standards dealing with structure and funding of defense services have proven to be flexible enough to respond to these trends, yet required revision to reflect experience with organization and funding at state and local levels.

The increase in caseloads and expenditures over the last decade has resulted in greater sophistication in the administration of defense services, and a wider range of policy issues which need to be addressed.

2. See, e.g., Genego, The New Adversary, 54 BROOKLYN L. REV. 781 (1988).

Experience with this increasingly complex area of practice is reflected in amendments to standards dealing with caseloads, attorneys' fees, rotation of assignments, continuity of representation and impact litigation.

The most significant addition to the third edition standards is a new Part III on contract defense services. This new part acknowledges the significant growth of the contract model as a means for delivery of defense services, while stopping short of endorsement of the use of contracts as the primary delivery system in the jurisdiction. The ABA recognized the difficulties inherent in using contracts for defense services when, at the Annual Meeting in 1985, the ABA House of Delegates recommended that contracts not be awarded on the basis of cost alone, and that jurisdictions choosing to use contracts do so in accordance with both the National Legal Aid and Defender Association's Guidelines for Negotiating and Awarding Governmental Contracts for Defense Services, and Chapter 5 of the second edition ABA Standards for Criminal Justice. The new part contains three new standards on the use of contracts for the delivery of defense services. In addition, the possible inclusion of a contract component in the system for defense services necessitated additional reference to contracts for services in many of the more general provisions on defense services.

Another area of significant amendment in the third edition is that of defense services in capital cases. At the time of the adoption of the second edition, the death penalty had only recently been given new and carefully circumscribed approval by the United States Supreme Court.<sup>3</sup> In 1989, at its Midyear Meeting, the ABA House of Delegates adopted Guidelines for the Appointment and Performance of Counsel in Death Penalty Cases. Those guidelines have been incorporated by reference into the standards through standard 5-1.2(d). In addition, standards 5-3.3(b)(vi), 5-5.1, 5-5.3(b), 5-6.1, and 5-6.2 all contain new language dealing with the issues raised by representation by appointed counsel in capital cases.

There are other significant additions in the third edition. A new standard 5-5.4 is added to encourage permission for defender programs to engage in impact litigation. Significant amendments are made to standard 5-1.2, Systems for legal representation; 5-1.6, Funding; 5-2.2, Eligibility to serve (for assigned counsel); 5-2.3, Rotation of assignments (for assigned counsel); 5-2.4, Compensation and expenses (for assigned counsel); 5-5.3, Workload (for public defenders); 5-6.1, Initial provision of counsel; 5-7.2, Reimbursement, notice and imposition of contribution (for the defendant); 5-7.3, Determination of eligibility (of the defendant); 5-8.1, Providing counsel to persons in custody; and 5-8.2, In-court waiver (of counsel).

The third edition changes recognize the significant growth in defense services over the past decade, as well as the profound changes in interpretation of the constitutional right to counsel and the scope of the criminal sanction, as viewed by the United States Supreme Court. These new changes should serve as a useful tool to both the policy-maker and the litigator who seeks legal and ethical guidance on the provision of defense services in state and federal courts.

PART I.

GENERAL PRINCIPLES

Standard 5-1.1. Objective

The objective in providing counsel should be to assure that quality legal representation is afforded to all persons eligible for counsel pursuant to this chapter. The bar should educate the public to the importance of this objective.

History of Standard

This standard is unchanged from the second edition. "Quality representation" is the appropriate standard by which to measure counsel's performance; the phrase continues to suggest full compliance with the amended third edition ABA Defense Function Standards.

Commentary

The United States Supreme Court continues to adhere to the fundamental principle that flows consistently through its Sixth Amendment jurisprudence on the right to counsel: all criminal defendants, regardless of wealth or poverty, are entitled to representation by counsel at a fair trial.<sup>1</sup> The Court has clarified the constitutional standard for performance by counsel as the provision of "reasonably effective assistance" to the accused.<sup>2</sup>

1. Gideon v. Wainwright, 372 U.S. 353 (1963).

On the other hand, during the past decade the Supreme Court made significant changes in interpretation of other provisions of the U.S. Constitution dealing with the criminal process, particularly the Fourth and Fifth Amendments. Increasingly complex resolutions of these issues have made the quality of representation by counsel all the more important to accused and convicted persons.

The central issue in defense services has not been whether representation is an entitlement but what the nature and extent of that representation will be. As the decade passed, the picture regarding defense services became increasingly clear, primarily because new and more comprehensive national data were available; data which were unknown previously. Major new national studies and surveys were conducted by the federal government.<sup>3</sup> Following the suggestion of this standard, the American Bar Association took seriously its obligation of public education.<sup>4</sup> The National Legal Aid and Defender Association, too, played a significant role in the improvement of defense services by the adoption of comprehensive standards dealing with appellate offices, contracts for defense services, capital cases and assigned counsel systems.<sup>5</sup>

2. Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668 (1984). The Court held that the defendant must prove that performance was deficient under this standard and that the defense was prejudiced badly enough that the outcome would have been different without counsel's errors. Moreover, the decisions of counsel are entitled to a strong presumption of validity.

3. U.S. DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE, BUREAU OF JUSTICE STATISTICS, NATIONAL CRIMINAL DEFENSE SYSTEMS STUDY (September 1986); BUREAU OF JUSTICE STATISTICS BULLETIN, CRIMINAL DEFENSE FOR THE POOR, 1986 (September 1988); NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF JUSTICE, NATIONAL ASSESSMENT PROGRAM: FINAL SURVEY RESULTS FOR PUBLIC DEFENDERS (Institute for Law and Justice, Oct. 1990).

5. NATIONAL LEGAL AID AND DEFENDER ASSOCIATION, STANDARDS AND EVALUATION DESIGN FOR APPELLATE DEFENDER OFFICES (1980); NATIONAL LEGAL AID AND DEFENDER ASSOCIATION, GUIDELINES FOR NEGOTIATING AND AWARDED GOVERNMENTAL CONTRACTS FOR CRIMINAL DEFENSE SERVICES (1984); NATIONAL LEGAL AID AND DEFENDER ASSOCIATION, STANDARDS FOR THE APPOINTMENT AND PERFORMANCE OF COUNSEL IN DEATH PENALTY

Analysis of the newly available information is sobering. The principal author of the government reports concluded that defense services programs are "in a state of crisis" because the defender system is being overlooked by legislatures and courts attempting to respond to public outcry against growing crime rates.<sup>6</sup> The ABA's Dash Committee report, written to respond to the growing crisis in the criminal justice system, was similarly pessimistic. "In the case of the indigent defendant," it concluded, "the problem is not that the defense representation is too aggressive but that it is too often inadequate because of underfunded and overburdened public defender offices."<sup>7</sup>

Thus, whatever the standard by which to measure the performance of counsel, even the minimum constitutional mandate of "reasonably effective assistance" cannot be met when the defender system is not structurally sound or is deprived of the resources necessary for quality performance by each and every attorney who provides defense services in individual cases.

Standard 5-1.2. Systems for legal representation

(a) The legal representation plan for each jurisdiction should provide for the services of a full-time defender organization when population and caseload are sufficient to support such an organization. Multi-jurisdictional organizations may be appropriate in rural areas.

(b) Every system should include the active and substantial participation of the private bar. That participation should be through a coordinated assigned-counsel system and may also include contracts for services. No program should be precluded from representing clients in any particular type or category of case.

(c) Conditions may make it preferable to create a statewide system of defense.

History of Standard

In the second edition, this standard stated that in each jurisdiction there should be both organized defense services and assignments to private attorneys. The significant changes in this standard recognize the continued growth, diversity and acceptance of defender systems during the past decade.

The title of this section was changed by substituting the word "systems" for the less comprehensive term "plan," in keeping with the expanded number of topics addressed in the section. The standard was divided into four subsections.

Subsection (a) adds a new phrase at the end of the first sentence and a new second sentence. The new language acknowledges that many small- to moderate-sized jurisdictions do not have sufficient qualified lawyers or resources to create a full-time defender office. The language is taken from second edition commentary which suggested that "[i]n rural areas with small caseloads, it may be appropriate for the defender organization to have small staffs and to be given responsibility for larger geographical divisions." The commentary also suggested that the term "jurisdiction" in this chapter may be either "the state or a smaller geographical entity," a choice left to the states. The "multi-jurisdictional organizations" here, however, refer to jurisdictions within a state.

A new phrase was added at the beginning of the first sentence of a new subsection (b). A new second sentence recognizes the use of contractual services as one of the appropriate means to assure substantial private bar participation in the delivery of defense services, while maintaining the Standards' commitment to a "mixed" model of public defender offices and assigned counsel panels, with the public defender office as the "primary" delivery system. The assigned counsel panel is still preferred as the primary means to assure participation by the private bar, while contracts for services are seen as a permissible component of the panel if under its administration.

Language regarding the use of contracts for services as an alternative system is added to a number of standards here, where appropriate. A new Part III carefully defines the circumstances in which contracts may be used and sets new standards for the maintenance of quality in the use of this type of defender system.

Subsection (c) adds a sentence which is an adaptation of similar language found in Standard 3-2.2(b), dealing with the organization of prosecutorial services. It acknowledges the continuing national trend toward the organization of defense services at the state level. Such programs have generally fared better than locally funded programs in resource allocation and quality of services in recent years.

Subsection (d) is the first of several references to the special burdens created for the provision of quality defense services by cases in which the death penalty is a possibility or is imposed. The number of individuals on death row due to capital prosecutions, convictions and appeals in this country has risen exponentially since the U.S. Supreme Court gave its approval to the penalty in 1976. Those individuals are virtually all represented by public defenders, assigned or contract counsel, or volunteer pro bono attorneys. The second sentence to subsection (d) refers to extensive ABA guidelines for counsel in capital cases adopted by the ABA House of Delegates in 1989.

Commentary

The Three Potential Components of a Defender System

The principal components of existing systems for provision of defense services are three: the public defender program (which, in the federal system, includes a program of community defenders), the administered or ad hoc assigned counsel panel and the contract for services. The components have grown in complexity over the last decade; it is sometimes difficult to distinguish one from the other. In each of three subsequent parts, these components of a defender system are more carefully defined and described, and the appropriate structure and financing of each component is detailed.

This edition recognizes the existence and use of a new type of delivery system: contracts for defense services. This is due to immense growth in their use during the past two decades. A 1973 national survey of defense services did not mention contracts for services. In the most recent national data, however, contracts for services accounted for about 11 percent of all defender services in the country, and several states, including Arizona, Idaho, Kentucky, North Dakota, Oregon and Washington, provided the majority of representation in serious criminal matters through the use of contracts for services.<sup>1</sup>

However, as is noted in Part III, contracts for services should be implemented with an overriding concern for quality, not cost. Some of the initial contract programs grew out of a legitimate concern by governments for containing the costs incurred when public defender offices were forced to declare conflicts of interest and reject potential clients, sometimes in large percentages. Other programs, unfortunately, adopted the use of flat-fee contracts with competitive bidding by potential providers of services, based solely on a concern for the cheapest possible system. These programs, as the experience of the past decade shows, have conspicuously failed to provide quality representation to the accused,<sup>2</sup> and in many cases, have resulted in even higher costs to the jurisdiction than if another model had been chosen. In a resolution adopted in 1985, the American Bar Association condemned the use of contracts which are awarded only on the basis of cost.

The American Bar Association does not endorse the use of contracts for services as a viable, separate, "stand-alone" component for the delivery of defense services. Instead, the structure proposed here creates a hierarchy of models. The primary component in every jurisdiction

1. BUREAU OF JUSTICE STATISTICS BULLETIN, CRIMINAL DEFENSE FOR THE POOR, 1986 at 3 (Sept. 1988).

2. The most dramatic example of this is the decision of the Arizona Supreme Court in State v. Smith, 140 Ariz. 355, 681 P.2d. 1374 (1984), in which it was held that the contract bidding system used by Mohave County "so overworks the attorneys that it violates . . . the right of a defendant to due process and right to counsel as guaranteed by the Arizona and United States Constitutions." While it applied the holding prospectively, the court held that if the same procedures for selection and compensation of counsel under the suspect contracts were used again, a rebuttable inference of ineffectiveness of counsel would be created. Other examples are discussed in Part III, infra.

should be a public defender office, where conditions permit. The secondary component is an administered assigned counsel panel, which assures an appropriate level of participation by the private bar. Bar participation also may occur through a contract for services, which may be part of the larger, coordinated system. This structure should guarantee adequate independence, oversight and quality control for the use of contracts.

The Advantages of a Public Defender Program

When adequately funded and staffed, defender organizations employing full-time personnel are capable of providing excellent defense services. By devoting all of their efforts to legal representation, defender programs ordinarily are able to develop unusual expertise in handling various kinds of criminal cases. Moreover, defender offices frequently are in the best position to supply counsel soon after an accused is arrested. By virtue of their experience, full-time defenders also are able to work for changes in laws and procedures aimed at benefiting defendants and the criminal justice system.

There also are definite purposes served by retaining the presence of substantial private bar participation in the system for criminal defense. Just as private attorneys often can learn from the full-time lawyers of defender organizations, there are many private attorneys, qualified by training and experience, who can contribute substantially to the knowledge of defenders. In addition, a "mixed" system of representation consisting of both private attorneys and full-time defenders offers a "safety valve," so that the caseload pressures on each group are less likely to be burdensome.

In some cities, where a mixed system has been absent and public defenders have been required to handle all of the cases, the results have been unsatisfactory. Caseloads have increased faster than the size of staffs and necessary revenues, making quality legal representation exceedingly difficult. Furthermore, the involvement of private attorneys in defense services assures the continued interest of the bar in the welfare of the criminal justice system. Without the knowledgeable and active support of the bar as a whole, continued improvements in the nation's justice system are rendered less likely.

Finally, private attorney representation in criminal cases is essential because of new and stricter policies within defense services programs regarding conflicts of interest, primarily in representation of codefen-dants.<sup>3</sup> In some cases, these policies can result in the declaration of conflicts of interest in more than 25 percent of all cases assigned to a public defender program. Such declarations contributed greatly to the initial growth of contract programs, as noted above.

This edition makes more emphatic the notion that centralization of services need not eliminate flexibility to respond to local conditions. In some jurisdictions, the use of multi-county systems in which a full-time defender travels to several counties may be appropriate. Such systems are in use in Colorado, Kansas, Nevada and New Mexico.

Standard 5-1.2 is consistent with the recommendation of the National Advisory Commission, which urges that in each jurisdiction there should be both "a full-time public defender" program and "substantial participation of the private bar."<sup>4</sup> The Standards for Defender Services prepared by the National Legal Aid and Defender Association recommend that "[a] full-time defender organization should be available for all communities, rural or metropolitan, as the preferred method of supplying legal services . . ."<sup>5</sup>

State Versus Local Organization of Services

In the second edition, the commentary noted that this section took no position on whether services should be organized at the state or local levels. New subsection (c) in this edition moderates that position with-

3. These policies flow, in significant measure, from the cautions regarding multiple representation expressed in decisions of the U.S. Supreme Court, including Holloway v. Arkansas, 435 U.S. 475 (1978), Cuyler v. Sullivan, 446 U.S. 335 (1980), Burger v. Kemp, 483 U.S. 776, and Wheat v. United States, 486 U.S. 153 (1988). Those decisions, while not making multiple representation a per se error, have led to even more restrictive policies in a number of state courts. See, e.g., People v. Macerola, 47 N.Y.2d 257, 417 N.Y.S.2d 908, 391 N.E.2d 990 (1979) ("... the trial judge has an independent obligation to insure that two or more defendants represented by the same attorney are aware of the potential risks involved in joint representation."); *Cole v. VA. R. CRIM. PROC. 44(c)). Many defender offices, responding to the increasingly strict handling of conflicts of interest by the courts, have adopted per se policies of conflict declaration. See Broderick and Cohen, When Public Defenders Have Conflicts of Interest, 2 CRIM. JUST. 18 (Spring 1987) and ABA STANDARDS FOR CRIMINAL JUSTICE 4-3.5 (3d ed. 1993).

out endorsing the statewide model as the best means for service provision.

As was noted in the second edition, the national trend in defender services continues toward statewide organization. In the 1986 survey, twenty-four jurisdictions were organized on a centralized basis.<sup>6</sup> As of 1989, an additional eight jurisdictions had taken action to focus the organization of defense services at the state level.<sup>7</sup>

There is, however, a noteworthy distinction between new state programs adopted in the last decade and those adopted in prior years. The principal difference lies in the flexibility of the model. Instead of a staff of full-time defenders employed by a central state office, a number of states have adopted a model providing for administration of the defender program through legislation or court rule creating an independent state commission for defense services and uniform standards for the adoption of local models. Staffing of the program is through a small central staff at the state level while decisions as to choice of delivery system are left to the counties: public defender, assigned counsel, contract or combination systems may be chosen as appropriate. In this model, all of the salient standards of this chapter regarding professional independence, support services, training and other issues can be handled through the central office, which is insulated from local pressures to reduce budgets or refuse payments because the state system is protected by an independent board of directors similar to that suggested in standard 5-1.3. Such systems, for example, have been successfully implemented in the last decade in Kansas and West Virginia.<sup>8</sup>

This hardly suggests that the statewide defender office is obsolete. Several statewide offices have shown their ability to grow and change

In rural areas with small criminal caseloads, it may be appropriate for the defender organization to have small staffs and to be given responsibility for larger geographical divisions. In addition to providing representation of clients, the defenders in rural areas also should aid private attorneys in discharging their assigned-counsel or contractual duties.<sup>10</sup>

Capital Cases

Thirty-seven states and the federal government now permit the imposition of the death penalty for certain homicides. At present, more than 2,500 individuals are under sentence of death, many of whom have not yet completed their first appeal of right. More than 160 people have been executed, but the rate of conviction for capital crimes greatly exceeds the number of executions each year. Virtually all of the persons charged with or convicted of capital crimes are represented either by court-appointed counsel or by volunteer attorneys, and after the first appeal of right, far too many are unrepresented by counsel at all.<sup>11</sup>

New language on the death penalty is added in this section and throughout the third edition Standards for Defense Services. Any system in which the death penalty is an option for prosecutors is faced with unique obligations, not merely in quantity of work but in quality as well. In addition to the demands in time and energy required to provide quality representation in these one-of-a-kind trials and appeals, defenders often feel a strong moral sense of responsibility for their clients' lives, thus adding a burden of emotional investment as well. The ABA Death Penalty Guidelines specifically state that "minimum standards that have been promulgated concerning representation of defendants in criminal cases generally . . . should not be adopted as sufficient for death penalty cases."<sup>12</sup>

11. The absence of counsel, and the concomitant need for volunteer attorneys, arises from the decision of the U.S. Supreme Court in Murray v. Giarratano, 109 S.Ct. 2765 (1989), which holds that a state prisoner under sentence of death has no constitutionally protected right to counsel beyond the first appeal of right in the state courts. Congress responded to the crisis created in the federal courts by this ruling through the creation of new institutions and higher fees for counsel representing persons seeking relief from state sentences of death through state or federal habeas corpus. Sixteen state back-up centers were designed to provide assistance and direct services for state prisoners seeking state or federal habeas corpus relief, and the federal judicial conference has approved fee rates of up to $125 per hour in such cases. The back-up centers were made part of the structure of the Criminal Justice Act, at 18 U.S.C. § 3006A (g)(2)(B) (1992).

A recent national survey of attorneys working in capital cases indicated that they spend an average of 400 to 500 hours in the preparation and trial of a capital case.<sup>13</sup> A 1989 study of the California State Public Defender, which provides significant representation in California capital appeals, reveals that attorneys there spend an average of four times as much time on capital representation as on cases with any other penalty, including those with life imprisonment without parole.<sup>14</sup> In Florida, with one of the highest death row populations in the nation, the Florida Public Defender Association has set standards which suggest that an attorney should handle only five capital trials a year.<sup>15</sup> Studies in Maryland, Kansas and Virginia suggest that the trial of a capital case takes approximately 3.5 times longer than those in non-capital murders.<sup>16</sup> These data lead to the inexorable conclusion that the impact of capital representation on a defender system is not only significant; it can be devastating.

American Bar Association resolutions have frequently and consistently taken positions supporting the provision of quality representation by counsel in capital cases. As early as 1979, the Association went on record supporting the adoption of a rule by the United States Supreme Court to provide for appointment of counsel to prepare petitions for discretionary review of state court convictions of legally indigent persons sentenced to death. In 1985, the Association again acted to guarantee quality representation by urging the appointment of two counsel for the trial of death penalty cases with a legally indigent accused. In 1990, the Association urged the federal courts to adopt a comprehensive plan to assure representation and adequate compensation for attorneys in federal habeas corpus review of state death penalty proceedings.<sup>17</sup>

The most significant and relevant action on the death penalty came in 1989, when, at its Midyear Meeting, the Association adopted its own comprehensive Guidelines for the Appointment and Performance of Counsel in Death Penalty Cases, and urged that such guidelines be adopted by any entity providing counsel in capital cases. These guidelines are incorporated by reference into the third edition standards. The 34 comprehensive standards which make up the guidelines become part of the black letter provisions here by virtue of the language in subsection (d). They provide guidance not only to counsel in capital cases but to legislatures and policy-makers seeking direction in the provision of counsel in death penalty cases.<sup>18</sup>

Need for a Plan and Reports on Operations

It is also recommended that the overall program for providing defense services be embodied in a written plan. For example, the resources of a defender program and the extent to which it plans to provide representation should be clearly defined. Furthermore, consistent with standards 5-2.1 and 5-3.3, the plan should explain the system to be used in distributing assignments to private attorneys through the panel and contracts for services. Publication of the terms of the plan ensures that the bar is aware of the process by which counsel is being provided and promotes public confidence in the defender and assigned-counsel programs, which is essential if they are to be financed adequately and operate effectively.

In addition, those responsible for the administration of defense services programs, including contracts for services, should render periodic reports on operations, and these reports should be made available to the funding source, to the courts, to the bar, and to the public. Regular reports help to maintain public confidence in the integrity of the services provided and are a standard feature of most public agencies. The

Standard 5-1.3. Professional independence

(a) The legal representation plan for a jurisdiction should be designed to guarantee the integrity of the relationship between lawyer and client. The plan and the lawyers serving under it should be free from political influence and should be subject to judicial supervision only in the same manner and to the same extent as are lawyers in private practice. The selection of lawyers for specific cases should not be made by the judiciary or elected officials, but should be arranged for by the administrators of the defender, assigned-counsel and contract-for-service programs.

(b) An effective means of securing professional independence for defender organizations is to place responsibility for governance in a board of trustees. Assigned-counsel and contract-for-service components of defender systems should be governed by such a board. Provisions for size and manner of selection of boards of trustees should assure their independence. Boards of trustees should not include prosecutors or judges. The primary function of boards of trustees is to support and protect the independence of the defense services program. Boards of trustees should have the power to establish general policy for the operation of defender, assigned-counsel and contract-for-service programs consistent with these standards and in keeping with the standards of professional conduct. Boards of trustees should be precluded from interfering in the conduct of particular cases. A majority of the trustees on boards should be members of the bar admitted to practice in the jurisdiction.

History of Standard

This section has been divided into two subsections. Subsection (a) generally describes aspects of professional independence for the appointed attorney. Subsection (b) describes the composition and functions of a board of trustees as the means to secure professional independence for the program.

The word "normally," which appeared in the second edition, is stricken from the last sentence of subsection (a) where reference is made to the selection of lawyers in specific cases. The deletion emphasizes the notion that judges and other court personnel should not select lawyers for specific cases.

In subsection (b), three new sentences have been added in the third edition. The additions embody concepts found in the commentary to the second edition and are intended to strengthen the concept of independence by further specifying the size, manner of selection, composition and functions of boards of trustees.

In this section, as throughout the remainder of the chapter, reference is made to the use of contract-for-service programs wherever mention is made of the other types of delivery models. The intention is to keep major program components parallel.

Commentary

Integrity of the Professional Relationship

There are two principal alternative structures that jurisdictions can adopt to achieve a mixed system of representation consisting of defenders and private assigned counsel. First, the defender office can administer the assigned-counsel panel and, if utilized in that jurisdiction, contracts for services. Under this approach, the defender office undertakes full responsibility for all facets of the program relating to the participation of the private bar, including, for example, selection of panel lawyers, training, and processing of fee vouchers. A full-time staff of lawyers employed by the defender office also provides representation.<sup>1</sup> The second alternative is to have two separate entities, a defender organization and an assigned-counsel program (which may include a contract component), operating independently but with substantial coordination of activities.<sup>2</sup>

1. E.g., MD. ANN. CODE art. 27A, § 6(b) (1990) ("the district public defender, subject to the supervision of the Public Defender, shall appoint attorneys from the appropriate panels . . ."); N.J. REV. STAT. § 2A:158A-7(d) (1985 & Supp. 1990) ("The Public Defender shall . . . [e]ngage counsel from said trial pools on a case basis . . . and compensate them for their services"); MASS. ANN. LAWS ch. 211D, § 5 (Law. Co-op. 1986) ("... [The] committee shall establish, supervise & maintain a system for the appointment of counsel . . ."), § 6 (b) (1986 & Supp. 1991) ("... [The] committee shall enter into contract agreements with any state, county or local bar association . . . [and] may also contract with such other organized groups . . ."); N.M. STAT. ANN. § 31-15-7(A)(11) (Michie 1978) ("The chief [defender shall] . . . formulate a fee schedule for attorneys who are not employees of the department who serve as counsel for indigent persons under the Public Defender Act"), § 31-15-8(C) ("The appellate division shall assist private counsel not employed under the Public Defender Act in any appellate, review or postconviction remedy proceeding by providing representation for persons entitled to representation under the Indigent Defense Act"), § 31-15-10(D) ("The district public defender shall notify the chief if, for any reason, he is unable to represent a person entitled to his representation, and the chief shall make provision for representation."); VT. STAT. ANN. tit. 13, § 5253(b) (Supp. 1990) ("... [T]he defender general may contract for the services of investigators or additional attorneys-at-law to provide services . . ."); WIS. STAT. § 977.05(5)(e) (West 1991) ("The state public defender shall . . . [n]egotiate contracts with local public defender organizations as directed by the board.")

2. The use of administratively separate offices, which can occur under the second alternative, is seen by some jurisdictions as an effective means to avoid problems created by the need of a defender office to refuse cases due to conflicts of interest. One of the largest such operations operates in Los Angeles County. See THE SPANGENBERG GROUP, A STUDY OF THE PRACTICAL ALTERNATIVES THAT WOULD REDUCE THE NUMBER OF PUBLIC DEFENDERS' CONFLICT OF INTEREST CASES IN LOS ANGELES COUNTY (Final Report, July

Whichever structure is adopted, it is essential that both full-time defenders and assigned counsel be fully independent, free to act on behalf of their clients as dictated by their best professional judgment. A system that does not guarantee the integrity of the professional relation is fundamentally deficient in that it fails to provide counsel who have the same freedom of action as the lawyer whom the person with sufficient means can afford to retain.<sup>3</sup> Where counsel is not fully independent to act in the client's behalf, the deficiency is often perceived by the defendant, which encourages cynicism toward the justness of the legal system.

The United States Supreme Court has concluded that a defendant represented by court-appointed counsel does not enjoy any Sixth Amendment right to a "meaningful attorney-client relationship."<sup>4</sup> The Court found that the key to compliance with constitutional requirements is not that counsel be a person in whom the accused has the most confidence but that counsel be capable of effective assistance. That case involved the substitution of a new public defender when the first became sick on the eve of trial. The trial judge denied a continuance over the strong objection of the defendant himself, who wished to keep his original attorney. While court calendars may require such exigencies, the integrity of the existing attorney-client relationship is clearly compromised by such judicial interference. Judges should exercise their discretion in a manner which is sensitive to the existence and maintenance 1986).

The creation of a "second public defender" office has also been used to avoid conflicts of interest. Alaska and New Hampshire have done this on a statewide basis. ALASKA STAT. § 44.21.410(a)(5) (1991) (The office of public advocacy shall . . . provide legal representation . . . in cases involving indigent persons who are entitled to representation . . . and who cannot be represented by the public defender agency because of a conflict of interests."); N.H. REV. STAT. ANN. § 604-B:8 (1990) ("The state of New Hampshire . . . may, in addition to the contract for the public defender program . . . contract for an alternate public defender program to represent indigent defendants in circumstances where, because of conflict of interest or otherwise, the public defender program is unable to provide representation to a defendant.").

3. In Polk County v. Dodson, 454 U.S. 312, 318-321 (1981), the Court stated that "[e]xcept for the source of payment, the relationship [of public defender and client] became identical to that existing between any other lawyer and client." Later, the Court concluded, "Held to the same standards of competence and integrity as a private lawyer, a public defender works under canons of professional responsibility that mandate his exercise of independent judgment on behalf of the client." (Citations omitted.)

of the attorney-client relationship if equity between retained and appointed counsel is to have meaning.

Another situation which may compromise the integrity of a relationship between attorney and client is the use of so-called "horizontal" or "stage" representation. In that scheme, different attorneys from the public defender office or contracting agency represent the defendant at each stage of the proceeding. The practice of "horizontal" representation is explicitly rejected in standard 5-6.2, and is implicitly rejected here as well.

The importance of independence for lawyers who represent the poor has been stressed in other standards relating to defense services. The National Legal Aid and Defender Association states that "[h]owever attorneys are selected to represent qualified clients, they shall be as independent as any other private counsel who undertakes the defense of an accused person."<sup>5</sup> A similar view is expressed in the standards of the National Advisory Commission: "The method employed to select public defenders should insure that the public defender is as independent as any private counsel who undertakes the defense of a fee-paying criminally accused person."<sup>6</sup>

As a means of achieving independence for counsel, standard 5-1.3 recommends that "[t]he selection of lawyers for specific cases should not be made by the judiciary or elected officials, but should be arranged for by administrators of the defender and assigned-counsel programs." Retained lawyers are neither chosen nor approved by the courts, and there are no compelling reasons for defenders and private assigned counsel to be treated differently. Moreover, if a lawyer desires continuous appointments from the court or elected officials, there may be a strong temptation to compromise clients' interest in ways that will maximize the number of future case assignments. The assignment of cases by the defender or assigned-counsel program also should help to alleviate the fear of clients that the defense lawyer is working for the judge or court official in charge of appointments.

Studies have shown the effectiveness of early entry by the defender office in cases, and a number of jurisdictions permit representation by the defender program prior to formal court appointment where the defendant requests counsel and asserts a lack of financial means to retain a lawyer. Nonetheless, there may be unusual situations where the assignment of lawyers by the defender or assigned-counsel program may not be feasible. For example, where a defendant is arrested and presented in court at an irregular hour, the judge may be the only person available to select a lawyer for the defendant's presentment. Such instances should be the rare exception to the general rule of selection of counsel by the program itself.

Governing Board

Another means of assuring the professional independence of defenders and private assigned counsel is to provide for the establishment of boards of trustees to oversee the delivery of defense services. The presence of a board serves to insulate the legal representation plan from unwarranted judicial interference. During the past decade, boards of trustees or other similar bodies have been adopted in a number of states, even where there are no statewide public defender services.<sup>7</sup> This development is consistent with ABA and other national standards. For example, the National Legal Aid and Defender Association states that "[t]he most appropriate method of assuring independence modified with a proper mixture of supervision is to create a board of directors. . . ."<sup>8</sup>

In some jurisdictions, public defenders who are either elected or locally appointed have achieved a considerable measure of independence. Hence, the standard simply acknowledges that for defenders a board of trustees is "[a]n effective means of securing professional independence." The standard, however, states categorically that assigned-counsel programs "should be governed by such a board." This is because, despite their diminution over time, most programs in this country for the assignment of private lawyers remain ad hoc in nature, very much under the control and supervision of the judiciary.<sup>9</sup> The use of boards of trustees for assigned-counsel programs is still the single most promising means of promoting their independence.

7. Different styles of boards of trustees or commissions have been adopted. See, e.g., COLO. REV. STAT. § 21-1-101(2) (1986) ("The Colorado supreme court shall provide for the appointment, terms, and procedure for a five-member public defender commission . . ."); D.C. CODE ANN. § 1-2703(a) (1981) ("The powers of the Service shall be vested in a Board of Trustees composed of 11 members."); GA. CODE ANN. § 17-12-71(a) (Harrison 1990) (" . . . there shall be established a nominating committee . . ."), (c) (" . . . [T]his committee shall make itself available, upon the request of the person appointed as public defender, to advise and assist in any matters pertaining to the operation of the office of public defender."); MASS. ANN. LAWS ch. 211D, § 1 (Law. Co-op. 1986 & Supp. 1991) ("There shall be a committee for public counsel services . . . to plan, oversee, and coordinate the delivery of . . . legal services . . . ANN. § 15.78 (West 1991) ("There is created a public defender board consisting of 9 members appointed for staggered 3-year terms.").

8. NATIONAL LEGAL AID AND DEFENDER ASSOCIATION, STANDARDS FOR DEFENSE SERVICES III.1 (1976).

An important function of a board of trustees, regardless of whether adapted to a defender or to an assigned-counsel system, is to establish general policy for the program composed of lawyers performing professional work. Because of the potential for political interference from a board of trustees, it is critical that the board's oversight not deal with day-to-day operations, including matters such as specific hiring and promotional decisions. It is preferable for the majority of the trustees on such boards to be members of the bar. Trustees who are lawyers will tend to assure a response to the needs and problems of the program grounded in an understanding of the lawyer's professional function and responsibility. Indeed, because of the specialization involved in the field of criminal defense, it is undoubtedly desirable for many of the attorney board members to have a background in the practice of criminal law. However, boards of trustees should not be limited solely to lawyers. In order for the defender and/or assigned-counsel programs to have the confidence of the community as a whole, it is important that the board reflect the racial, ethnic, and sexual composition of the client community.

Members of governing boards should not include prosecutors and judges. This restriction is necessary in order to remove any implication that defenders are subject to the control of those who appear as their adversaries or before whom they must appear in the representation of defendants, except for the general disciplinary supervision which judges maintain over all members of the bar.<sup>10</sup>

9. The trend is away from this method of operation. In 1973, fully 80 percent of all rural areas used the ad hoc system of judicial appointment, while in 1982 the percent of all counties using such systems dropped to 59.5 percent. Data from 1986 indicate that the ad hoc system of appointment of counsel by judges was used in a bare majority of jurisdictions (52 percent). BUREAU OF JUSTICE STATISTICS BULLETIN, CRIMINAL DEFENSE FOR THE POOR, 1986 at 3, Table 3 (1988).

10. The exclusion of judges and prosecutors from defender boards is sometimes codified. See, e.g., D.C. CODE ANN. § 1-2703(b)(4) (1981) ("Judges of the United States courts in the District of Columbia and of District of Columbia courts may not be appointed to serve as members of the Board of Trustees."); WIS. Interference in the Conduct of Particular Cases

An essential criterion of an adequate system of providing representation is the ability of defenders and assigned counsel to perform their functions much as they would if they were privately retained. This, however, is not an appropriate role of a board of trustees. The primary function of a board should be to make general policy, not to attempt to dictate the conduct of particular cases. Consistent with this principle, several public defender statutes explicitly prohibit interference in the handling of specific cases by defenders.<sup>11</sup>

Standard 5-1.4. Supporting services

The legal representation plan should provide for investigatory, expert, and other services necessary to quality legal representation. These should include not only those services and facilities needed for an effective defense at trial but also those that are required for effective defense participation in every phase of the process. In addition, supporting services necessary for providing quality legal representation should be available to the clients of retained counsel who are financially unable to afford necessary supporting services.

Standard 5-1.4 in the second edition dealt with both supporting services and training. The importance of the topics resulted in their separation into two separate standards. ### Commentary

A sine qua non of quality legal representation is the support personnel and equipment necessary for professional service. In private law firms, overhead expenses, of which support services are a significant part, average about 45 percent of all office expenses.<sup>1</sup> Secretarial tasks can only be performed properly with adequate word-processing equipment (usually computers); telephones with the ability to send and receive fax messages; adequate copying and mailing facilities; adequate data-processing and filing systems; and whatever specialized equipment may be required to perform necessary investigations.<sup>2</sup>

Quality legal representation cannot be rendered either by defenders or by assigned counsel unless the lawyers have available other supporting services in addition to secretaries and investigators. Among these are access to necessary expert witnesses, as well as personnel skilled in social work and related disciplines to provide assistance at pretrial release hearings and at sentencing. The quality of representation at trial, for example, may be excellent and yet unhelpful to the defendant if the defense requires the assistance of a psychiatrist or handwriting expert and no such services are available.

If the defense attorney must personally conduct factual investigations, the financial cost to the justice system is likely to be greater because the defender's time is generally more valuable than the investigator's. Moreover, when an attorney personally interviews witnesses, the attorney may be placed in the untenable position of either taking the stand to challenge the witnesses' credibility if their testimony conflicts with statements previously given or withdrawing from the case.<sup>3</sup> Other standards (see related standards section herein) also stress the critical importance of supporting services.

In the case of defender programs, the budget appropriation should be sufficient to enable the employment or retention of as many nonlegal personnel as are necessary for purposes of providing an adequate defense. In the federal courts, recent amendments to the Criminal Justice Act make the authorization of such services mandatory, without financial limits, when counsel for the person who is unable to afford them is able to make a showing of necessity in an ex parte proceeding.<sup>4</sup> Significantly, this statute authorizes payments for services other than counsel even for the clients of retained lawyers who are unable to afford investigators and expert witnesses,<sup>5</sup> and it also authorizes the expenditure of some funds on an emergency basis without prior court authorization.<sup>6</sup>

The United States Supreme Court has held that fundamental fairness requires that a defendant on trial in a capital case must be provided with the funds necessary to hire an expert psychiatrist, where sanity is the only material issue at trial.<sup>7</sup> The defendant, who was represented by assigned counsel, had been refused the funds for the examination under then-prevailing Oklahoma law. The Court concluded that the state has the obligation to provide any legally indigent accused the “basic tools of an adequate defense or appeal.”<sup>8</sup> While the Court’s ruling can be read narrowly as applying only in death penalty cases where sanity is an issue at both trial and sentencing, the Court’s test for access to “basic tools of an adequate defense” has potentially broad application in all contexts regarding the provision of support services.

The courts of a number of states have recognized a defendant’s constitutional right to a broad range of supporting services, including such diverse issues as forensic dental records, fingerprints, firearms, jury selection and demography.<sup>9</sup> Inability to afford counsel necessarily means that a defendant is unable to afford essential supporting services, such as investigative assistance and expert witnesses. The converse does not follow, however. Just because a defendant is able to afford retained counsel does not mean that sufficient finances are available for essential services. This standard, like the Criminal Justice Act provisions noted above, authorizes supporting services to be made available to the clients of retained counsel who are unable to afford the required assistance. This means that the defense services program should include sufficient funding in its budget for such contingencies, and defense services funded through the courts should do likewise.

Commentary

Adequate and frequent training programs are a key component in the provision of quality representation by defense attorneys. Criminal law is a complex and difficult legal area, and the skills necessary for provision of a full range of services must be carefully developed. Moreover, the consequences of mistakes in defense representation may be substantial, including wrongful conviction and death or the loss of liberty. Despite recent suggestions by the U.S. Supreme Court that defenders may be insulated from liability in most circumstances,<sup>1</sup> the cost of retrials based on trial errors by defense counsel or on counsel's ineffectiveness may alone be sufficient justification for effective training as a cost-saving device. The strong trend in the states away from the imposition of a mandatory pro bono obligation in criminal cases is grounded in the notion that the demands of contemporary criminal practice make it impossible to impose an obligation of service on attorneys who work in this complex and demanding field.<sup>2</sup>

To meet the need for training, programs should be established for both beginning and advanced practitioners, and should emphasize substantive legal subjects as well as effective trial, appellate and collateral attack techniques. In defender offices, it is particularly important that there be entry-level training programs, so that new attorneys receive at the outset of their practice an intensive learning experience that will equip them to provide effective representation. The necessity of training assigned counsel is just as important, but their attendance at training programs may have to be spaced over longer periods because of other time commitments. One possible function of a defender program in the mixed system of representation suggested in standard 5-1.2 would be to offer training seminars to attorneys participating in the assigned-counsel program. Another efficient use of the office's programs might be in the provision of courses on criminal law and procedure topics which would fulfill local continuing legal education requirements.

Attendance at regional and national training programs also should be encouraged. Many defender programs have made it a part of their regular training schedule to send all new attorneys to the annual summer course of the National Criminal Defense College within two years of their entry into the office. Other useful programs are offered through the National Institute of Trial Advocacy and the National Legal Aid and Defender Association, both regionally and nationally. Some states have particularly strong programs in training in particular topics such as capital case advocacy.

Standard 5-1.6. Funding

Government has the responsibility to fund the full cost of quality legal representation for all eligible persons, as defined in standard 5-7.1. It is the responsibility of the organized bar to be vigilant in supporting the provision of such funding. The level of government that funds defender organizations, assigned-counsel programs or contracts for services depends upon which level will best insure the provision of independent, quality legal representation. Under no circumstances should the funding power interfere with or retaliate against professional judgments made in the proper performance of defense services.

History of Standard

This standard, new with the second edition, has been amended significantly. Changes in the first sentence make more clear and emphatic the obligation of government, not the bar or the individual attorney, to fully fund defense services.

A new second sentence makes clear a role for the organized bar in assisting funding efforts. The language parallels that of the opening standard of the chapter, 5-1.1, which sets forth an educative function for the bar.

The amended third sentence clarifies the factors which should determine the level of government at which services are funded.

Commentary

Our system of justice is a reflection of our societal development, and the furnishing of adequate defense services a measure of our justice system. Only society as a whole has the necessary resources to finance defender and assigned-counsel programs. Accordingly, this standard declares that the sole responsibility of paying for defense services rests on government. Presently, representation systems are financed primarily by state governments, local governments, or a combination of both.<sup>1</sup>

1. Federal defender programs are an example of appropriate government funding. They are funded by the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts from the recommendation of the Defense Services Committee of the U.S. Judicial Conference. 18 U.S.C. § 3006A (g)(2)(a) (1992).

But regardless of the source of funding, the level of financing in many states is inadequate—sometimes woefully inadequate. The likely result is the denial of effective legal representation for those unable to afford counsel.

This standard deals with the funding of the defender system as a whole, not the related issues of the compensation to be paid to assigned counsel, addressed in standard 5-2.4, or the salaries paid to public defenders or contracting attorneys, addressed in standards 5-4.1 and 5-3.3(b)(ix). Taken as a whole, funding for defender services in the United States increased during the past decade. Funding from all sources increased by 60 percent from 1982 to 1986, when the total reached nearly $1 billion.<sup>2</sup> The great majority of this increase, however, was due solely to the huge increase in caseloads during the decade—per capita case costs increased in the same period by only 14 percent, to an average of $223 per case, nationwide.<sup>3</sup> Some expansion of funding at the state level was due not only to the rise in caseloads but also to the increased breadth of responsibility of programs into a broad range of quasi-criminal proceedings in which counsel has been newly mandated.<sup>4</sup> Finally, the reinstitution of the death penalty and its increasing imposition in cases handled by defender programs also contributed to the cost of defense services. At bottom, relative to the rest of the criminal justice system, defender services continue to suffer. Prosecution, for example, is funded at a ratio of three to one over defense services at both the federal and state or local levels.<sup>5</sup>

Individual states, on the other hand, fared better in many cases because the funding of defense services was centralized at the state level.<sup>6</sup> As of 1986, only ten states funded their defender services at the county level; twenty states were funded wholly at the state level while the remainder used some combination of state and local funding.<sup>7</sup> Other standards recommend that representation programs be financed at the state level because the state is best able to bear the bill and because funding is not made a function of the sometimes-volatile local hostility to the provision of public funds for the representation of persons accused of serious crimes against local citizens.<sup>8</sup> While this may often be true, standard 5-1.5 does not take a position on whether funding should be state or local, because of the belief that this decision should be based "upon which level will best insure the provision of independent, quality legal representation."

Some states now fund defense services substantially from fees imposed in all criminal cases or from taxes earmarked for dedication to defender services.<sup>9</sup> Such systems put the defender system at risk because the amount raised each year may fluctuate widely, the actual revenues cannot be easily projected, the fees frequently fall disparately on a particular segment of the population, and costs of administration of these systems are inordinately high. Systems based on user fees or taxes should be avoided; funds for defense services are best allocated from general revenues.

Whatever the level and source of financing, the power of the purse obviously should not be used to interfere with or prevent the proper discharge of defense services. Thus, the funding authority, like boards of trustees for defender and assigned-counsel programs (see standard 5-1.3), should not seek to intervene in the conduct of particular cases. Nor should funding bodies retaliate against unpopular, albeit professionally proper, actions of defender programs by reducing the level of available financing.

PART II.

ASSIGNED COUNSEL

Standard 5-2.1. Systematic assignment

The plan for legal representation should include substantial participation by assigned counsel. That participation should include a systematic and publicized method of distributing assignments. Except where there is a need for an immediate assignment for temporary representation, assignments should not be made to lawyers merely because they happen to be present in court at the time the assignment is made. A lawyer should never be assigned for reasons personal to the person making assignments. Administration of the assigned-counsel program should be by a competent staff able to advise and assist the private attorneys who provide defense services.

History of Standard

The first sentence was amended to reflect the language in section 5-1.2(b). The standard maintains its commitment to use of a staff model for the administration of all assigned counsel programs. In rural areas or in areas with few criminal cases, it may be useful to use a contract for services which is part of a larger plan, or to have a single assigned-counsel program include several judicial districts, as is suggested in standard 5-1.2(a). Alternatively, this standard's requirement that there be a staff can be discharged by having the defender office administer the assigned-counsel plan.<sup>1</sup> In a statewide defender program, it may be possible to have the necessary staff for assigned-counsel panels hired and supervised by the central office. In addition to supplying advice and assistance to private attorneys, a staff is necessary to discharge essential administrative tasks in connection with operation of the assigned-counsel program.

Commentary

During the decade from 1975 to 1985, the national use of the assigned counsel model as the exclusive means for delivery of defense services declined by 20 percent.<sup>2</sup> Because these programs largely serve rural areas, it is now estimated that they serve only about one-quarter of the U.S. population.<sup>3</sup>

Unfortunately, the last available data show that fully 75 percent of assigned counsel jurisdictions continue to operate on an ad hoc basis.<sup>4</sup> In the ad hoc system, selection of the attorney is either completely within the discretion of the judge or is from a frequently ignored "list" of attorneys kept by the judge or other court personnel. The assignment of criminal cases on this informal basis also has been condemned by the National Legal Aid and Defender Association<sup>5</sup> and the National Advisory Commission on Criminal Justice Standards and Goals.<sup>6</sup> Among the reasons frequently mentioned for the unsuitability of the random approach are the following:

undue reliance on inexperienced counsel and overall lack of quality control; the potentiality of patronage or its counterpart, discrimination, in the selection process and the corollary possibility of political control or undue influence intruding upon the independence of counsel; unavailability of lawyers resulting in waivers of counsel; inadequate or, at best, uneven provision of compensation for services and general lack of fiscal controls; the lack of training and continuing education in criminal law and procedure; and the inability of the approach to develop a skilled and vigorous defense bar able and willing to seek reforms in the criminal justice system.<sup>7</sup>

At its worst, the ad hoc system for assigning counsel is typified by the practice of appointing lawyers only because they happen to be present in the courtroom at the time a defendant is brought before the judge. This method of assignment obviously is unlikely to achieve an equitable distribution of assignments among the qualified members of the bar, and in some jurisdictions the practice has given rise to a cadre of mediocre lawyers who wait in the courtroom in hopes of receiving an appointment.

However the assigned-counsel program is structured, it is urged that the plan for distributing assignments be in writing and publicized. Publicity is apt to dispel doubts concerning the method by which the defense of the accused is being achieved and fosters scrutiny of the plan by the bar and public. This recommendation is consistent with the federal Criminal Justice Act of 1964, which requires that each United States District Court prepare a plan for assigning counsel pursuant to the act.<sup>8</sup>

In order to have an effective assigned-counsel system, a competent staff should be available to advise and assist members of the private bar who provide representation. Some staff members should be experienced in criminal defense matters, and the assistance should include, if desired, advice on the handling of specific cases, information concerning recent criminal law and procedure developments, written materials on criminal defense, and appropriate training programs. In addition, there are numerous administrative tasks that must be discharged, including the assignment of cases to private attorneys (standard 5-1.3), the collection of names of qualified members of the bar (standard 5-2.2), and the approval of compensation vouchers submitted by appointed lawyers (standard 5-2.4).

Standard 5-2.2. Eligibility to serve

Assignments should be distributed as widely as possible among the qualified members of the bar. Lawyers licensed to practice law in the jurisdiction, experienced and active in trial practice, and familiar with the practice and procedure of the criminal courts should be encouraged to submit their names for inclusion on the roster of attorneys from which assignments are made. Each jurisdiction should adopt specific qualification standards for attorney eligibility, and the private bar should be encouraged to become qualified pursuant to such standards. Counsel should not seek to avoid appointment by a tribunal to represent a person except for good cause.

History of Standard

The standard was amended in three ways for the third edition. First, the second sentence now states that lawyers should be “encouraged to submit” their names for inclusion on the roster, rather than including all names, as the second edition urged. This clarifies the inherent meaning of the sentence; participation on the roster should be voluntary rather than compulsory. Second, a new sentence was added which suggests the adoption of qualification standards for participating attorneys, a practice which is used in the best panel programs. Third, a new last sentence is added, mirroring the language of ABA Model Rule 6.2.

Commentary

In 1988, the American Bar Association's Special Committee on Criminal Justice in a Free Society surveyed the entire criminal justice system. Among the important conclusions which it reached was the following:

All lawyers, whether criminal practitioners or not, share in the responsibility of ensuring that the most visible legal institution in the Nation, the criminal justice system, is of the highest attainable quality. Increasingly, however, indigent defense in many cities is almost the exclusive responsibility of public defenders and a very small private bar. The remainder of the trial bar is not fulfilling its obligation to participate through the representation of indigent defendants, and as a result, the shunning of criminal defense practice deprives the criminal justice system of a powerful voice for criminal justice reform, because the influential lawyers are unfamiliar with the working of the criminal justice system.<sup>1</sup>

Standard 5-2.2 is aimed at making certain that private bar involvement is accomplished. Its emphasis lies in the participation of "qualified" members of the bar. The standard thus rejects the notion that every member of the bar admitted to practice in a jurisdiction should be required to provide representation.<sup>2</sup> Instead, it suggests that the members of the bar qualified for appointments are those who are "experienced and active in trial practice, and familiar with the practice and procedure of the criminal courts . . ." (emphasis added). The practice of criminal law is complex, and only qualified attorneys can properly be expected to serve as assigned counsel. While it is imperative that assigned counsel possess advocacy skills so that prompt and wise reactions to the exigencies of a trial may be expected, this alone is not deemed sufficient. There must also be familiarity with the practice and procedure of the criminal courts and knowledge in the art of criminal defense.<sup>3</sup>

It is critical, however, that the assigned-counsel system be administered in a manner that attracts participation from the largest possible cross-section of members of the bar and affords opportunities for inexperienced lawyers to become qualified for assigned cases. Accordingly, those responsible for administering assigned-counsel programs should continuously canvass the bar to make certain that all who display a willingness to serve are permitted to do so. One means of acquiring

3. In United States v. Cronin, 466 U.S. 648, 104 S. Ct. 2039 (1984), the Supreme Court held that the Sixth Amendment guarantee of effective assistance of counsel is not violated simply because a real estate lawyer, totally unfamiliar with criminal law and trials, is assigned to provide representation in a complicated fraud prosecution. The Sixth Amendment is breached, according to the Court, only if there is a breakdown of the adversarial process and specific errors of trial counsel are shown. The Court further explained in a footnote: "We consider in this case only the commands of the Constitution. We do not pass on the wisdom or propriety of appointing inexperienced counsel in a case such as this. It is entirely possible that many courts should exercise their supervisory powers to take greater precautions to ensure that counsel in serious criminal cases are qualified . . . We address not what is prudent or appropriate, but only what is constitutionally compelled. . . ." 466 U.S. at 665, 104 S. Ct. at 2050, n.38.

A few states have responded to the high threshold for review of claims of ineffectiveness by the adoption of comprehensive performance standards. See, e.g., Committee for Public Counsel Services, Performance Guidelines Governing Representation of Indigents in Criminal Cases, 15 MASS. LAWYERS WEEKLY 1048 (March 17, 1987) (Massachusetts). See generally Gist, Assigned Counsel: Is the Representation Effective?, 4 CRIM. JUST. 16 (1989); Genego, The Future of Effective Assistance of Counsel: Performance Standards and Competent Representation, 22 AM. CRIM. L. REV. 181-212 (1984).

information on members of the bar is to ask that all interested lawyers complete a questionnaire in which is listed prior involvement in criminal defense or prosecution and previous civil trial experience.

There is no more demanding task for a criminal lawyer than that of representing a person accused or convicted of a capital offense. The selection of such attorneys within an assigned counsel system therefore takes on critical importance. The U.S. Congress recognized this concept when it limited representation for state prisoners under sentence of death in federal habeas corpus proceedings to lawyers with significant experience in criminal law and procedure.<sup>4</sup> Eligibility standards also are part of the Guidelines for the Appointment and Performance of Counsel in Death Penalty Cases adopted by the ABA in 1989.<sup>5</sup>

Where interested attorneys lack sufficient experience and skill in criminal defense, there are a variety of procedures that can help them qualify for assigned cases. For example, in one assigned-counsel program inexperienced applicants are first required to observe a wide variety of criminal court proceedings. The lawyer is then directed to work with a regular member of the assigned counsel panel, during which time the apprentice attorney is asked to conduct various kinds of court proceedings (e.g., preliminary hearings, misdemeanor trials) under the supervision of the experienced lawyer. Attendance at training programs sponsored by the assigned-counsel program also is required. At the conclusion of the apprenticeship period, the attorney becomes a regular panel member and is assigned to the least serious misdemeanor cases.<sup>6</sup>

An attorney who is not competent to handle a criminal case has an absolute duty to decline court appointment.<sup>7</sup> Declination of an appointment is also appropriate when representation would create an unreasonable financial burden, or when the client is "so repugnant to the lawyers as to be likely to impair the attorney-client relationship."<sup>8</sup> These grounds constitute good cause for declination of an appointment, and have been recognized with increasing frequency by state courts.

Just as counsel should decline appointment in certain criminal matters, courts should not require counsel to accept assignment of cases when the attorney offers valid reasons.<sup>9</sup> A majority of the state courts which have reached the issue now conclude that trial judges may not invoke either the attorney's oath or the traditional obligation of pro bono service as a means of compelling attorney service without risking constitutional violations.<sup>10</sup>

Standard 5-2.3. Rotation of assignments and revision of roster

(a) As nearly as possible, assignments should be made in an orderly way to avoid patronage and its appearance, and to assure fair distribution of assignments among all whose names appear on the roster of eligible lawyers. Ordinarily, assignments should be made in the sequence that the names appear on the roster of eligible lawyers. Where the nature of the charges or other circumstances require, a lawyer may be selected because of his or her special qualifications to serve in the case, without regard to the established sequence.

The notion that attorneys are "officers of the court," however, is tenacious, and finds its way into Supreme Court jurisprudence. See, e.g., *Federal Trade Commission v. (b) The roster of lawyers should periodically be revised to remove those who have not provided quality legal representation or who have refused to accept appointments on enough occasions to evidence lack of interest. Specific criteria for removal should be adopted in conjunction with qualification standards.

History of Standard

A new subsection (b) was added to the standard. Provisions regarding revision of the roster and removal of attorneys are a necessary adjunct to those regarding a process for the selection of attorneys to serve on the roster, covered in standard 5-2.2.

Commentary

The practice of systematically rotating the assignment of cases achieves equality of distribution among qualified attorneys and also makes it unlikely that any single attorney will become overloaded with appointments. It is doubtful, however, that a single list of attorneys should be used for the purpose of making all assignments in rotation. Cases differ in complexity and seriousness, and there are likely to be wide differences in the backgrounds and experiences of panel attorneys. Accordingly, it may be necessary to have several lists of attorneys, including lawyers qualified for capital cases, other felonies, and misdemeanors. As criminal defense experience is acquired, lawyers can be promoted from the misdemeanor panel to the felony panel and then ultimately to the list of attorneys qualified for capital cases.<sup>1</sup>

Regardless of whether one or more lists of panel attorneys are used, it occasionally will be necessary to make assignments that are not within the normal rotation of attorney names. Sometimes this may occur because a particular case requires an attorney possessing special qualifications. Rotational appointments also may be impossible where the designated attorney has a conflict of interest or where there is a need to consolidate a case with other pending cases of the same client.

Neither statutes nor court decisions recognize the right of an eligible defendant to select the private lawyer of his or her choice.<sup>2</sup> Nor does the defendant generally have the right to choose assigned counsel rather than a defender (or vice versa) or to select a new lawyer when relations with an attorney deteriorate.<sup>3</sup> In contrast, the defendant with sufficient funds can retain the lawyer of his or her choice and discharge an attorney when confidence in the lawyer diminishes.

The overall goal of the assigned-counsel program should be to assure the presence of sufficient numbers of private practitioners capable of providing competent legal services. In addition to encouraging private lawyers to provide representation, some effort also should be devoted by the administrators of the program to monitoring the performance of assigned counsel. Admittedly, this is not an easy task and there obviously are difficulties in having third parties scrutinize the judgments of private counsel. On the other hand, the difficulty of the task should not be an excuse for doing nothing. At the very least, the staff of the program should investigate and keep track of any complaints made against assigned counsel by judges and clients. Where there is compelling evidence that an attorney consistently has ignored basic responsibilities outlined in the ABA Defense Function Standards, or that the attorney has refused appointment repeatedly, the attorney's name should be removed from the roster after notice and hearing, with the possibility of reinstatement after removal if adequate demonstration of remedial measures is shown.<sup>4</sup>

Standard 5-2.4. Compensation and expenses

Assigned counsel should receive prompt compensation at a reasonable hourly rate and should be reimbursed for their reasonable out-of-pocket expenses. Assigned counsel should be compensated for all hours necessary to provide quality legal representation. Compensation for assigned counsel should be approved by administrators of assigned-counsel programs.

History of Standard

The third edition makes the language on “reasonable compensation” more explicit. Rather than the second edition’s call for compensation for “time and service performed,” the newly revised standard calls for “prompt” payment “at a reasonable hourly rate,” as well as reasonable out-of-pocket expenses. A new second sentence makes clear that assigned counsel are to be paid for “all hours necessary to provide quality legal representation.”

Commentary

These standards adopt the view that “[g]overnment has the responsibility to fund the full cost of quality legal representation . . .”<sup>1</sup> The government should assure that every assigned attorney, in every assigned case, receives “prompt compensation at a reasonable hourly rate,” as well as reimbursement for reasonable out-of-pocket expenses. This standard thus rejects the view that lawyers are required to provide pro bono legal services in criminal cases.<sup>2</sup>

Just what constitutes a “reasonable hourly rate” has been the subject of much litigation and significant legislative modification over the past decade. One end of the spectrum was expressed more than 20 years ago by the President's Crime Commission, which said that counsel should be paid "a fee comparable to that which an average lawyer would receive from a paying client for performing similar services."<sup>3</sup> The other end, unfortunately, continues to be embodied in statutory maximum fee limitations which are vastly disproportionate to the efforts expended by counsel in even the most routine criminal matter.<sup>4</sup> The problem is particularly acute in capital cases, where states sometimes treat statutory compensation provisions the same for capital and non-capital representation, despite the extraordinary responsibilities inherent in death penalty litigation.<sup>5</sup>

Since a primary objective of the payment system should be to encourage vigorous defense representation, flat payment rates should be discouraged.<sup>6</sup> The possible effect of such rates is to discourage lawyers from doing more than what is minimally necessary to qualify for the flat payment. Recent decisions striking down statutory fee maximums

Wifvat*, 306 N.W.2d 707, 711 (Iowa 1981) (defining reasonable compensation as "the ordinary and customary charges for like services in the community.") A recent decision from Arkansas articulated detailed factors to be considered by the trial court in awarding fees: "the experience and ability of the attorney, the time and labor required to perform the legal service properly, the novelty and difficulty of the issues involved, the fee customarily charged in the locality for similar legal services, the time limitations imposed upon the client's defense or by the circumstances, and the likelihood, if apparent to the court, that the acceptance of the particular employment will preclude other employment of the lawyer." Arnold v. Kemp, 813 S.W.2d 770, 776 (Ark. 1991).

4. One such example is Virginia, where the maximum statutory limit is $100 in district courts, $132 for misdemeanors and $575 for felonies in circuit courts. VA. CODE ANN. § 19.2-163 (Michie 1991). Another is the non-waivable maximum of $500 in felony cases which continues to apply in South Carolina. See S.C. CODE ANN. § 17-3-50 (Law. Co-op. 1990).

5. Wilson and Spangenberg, State Post-Conviction Representation of Defendants Sentenced to Death, 72 JUDICATURE 331, 335-336 and Table 3 (1989).

6. Though no state statute apparently provides for flat payment rates for assigned counsel, many do establish minimum and/or maximum compensation schedules, e.g., KY. REV. STAT. § 31.070 (1980 & Cum. Supp. 1982); MISS. CODE ANN. § 99-15-17 (Cum. Supp. 1983); TEX. CRIM. PROC. CODE art. 26.05 (Vernon Cum. Supp. 1984). In practice, the amounts awarded pursuant to these types of statutes sometimes result in flat fees because the courts fail to exercise the discretion that the law authorizes. See also Annot., 3 A.L.R.4th 576 (1981) (validity of state statute or court rule fixing maximum fees for court-appointed counsel).

constitute a strong trend away from the payment of flat fees.<sup>7</sup> It is also important that the compensation plan provide for extra payments to counsel when representation is provided in unusually protracted or complicated cases.<sup>8</sup>

The federal Criminal Justice Act of 1964 was amended in 1988 to provide more generous compensation for assigned counsel in federal cases. According to this statute, a maximum of $3,500 may be paid for a felony and a maximum of $1,000 for a misdemeanor, subject to waiver for extended and complex cases; the hourly rates are $60 per hour for in-court time and $40 per hour for time spent out of court, with exceptions permitting payment of up to $75 per hour in some districts.<sup>9</sup> Federal compensation, however, is by no means high, particularly in light of inflationary trends in the economy and when compared with fees paid in retained criminal cases.

There are a variety of reasons for requiring that reasonable compensation be paid to assigned counsel. First, it is simply unfair to ask those lawyers who happen to have skill in trial practice and familiarity with criminal law and procedure to donate time to defense representation. It is worth remembering that the judge, prosecutor, and other officials in the criminal courtroom are not expected to do work for compensation that is patently inadequate. Lawyers do, of course, have a public service responsibility,<sup>10</sup> but the dimension of the national need and constitutional importance of counsel is so great that it cannot be discharged by

In *State v. 8. In 1989, for example, the ABA Task Force on Death Penalty Habeas Corpus called for statutory amendments to 28 U.S.C. § 2254, dealing with federal habeas corpus by state prisoners, to provide for reasonable compensation "notwithstanding the rates and maximum limits generally applicable to criminal cases," as well as ex parte determinations of the need for all reasonable expenses of counsel. unpaid or inadequately compensated attorneys. Indeed, where payments for counsel are deficient, it is exceedingly difficult to attract able lawyers into criminal practice and to enhance the quality of the defense bar. But most important, the quality of the representation often suffers when adequate compensation for counsel is not available.

The standard recognizes that payment of fees must be prompt as well as adequate. Some jurisdictions incur debts to assigned counsel but either fail to or willfully withhold payment as a means of fiscal control. This practice is unfair to counsel with whom the jurisdiction has a contractual relationship. Moreover, the standard now clearly distinguishes between the fees paid to counsel and the expenses incurred by counsel for such necessary items as investigative, expert or other services. Each is necessary for the provision of quality representation, and each should be paid.

This standard recommends that counsel should be compensated for "all hours necessary to provide quality legal representation," and that approval of compensation for assigned counsel be by administrators of assigned-counsel programs. Where the discretion to approve payment claims is vested in the judiciary, the necessary independence of counsel is compromised. Defense lawyers ought not be placed in the position where the amount of their compensation may be influenced by the degree to which the court is pleased with their representation. Moreover, in jurisdictions where there are multiple judges passing on voucher claims, the reimbursements paid to counsel may be exceedingly inequitable, depending on which judge happens to approve the voucher. It is also a questionable use of judicial time for judges to approve the compensation claims of assigned counsel. When judges review vouchers, reasons should be articulated for cuts and defense counsel should have an opportunity to defend expenses and fees, with an opportunity for administrative review.

The administrators of assigned-counsel programs should be free to develop flexible standards for compensation that take into consideration the number of hours reasonably expended in light of the complexity, duration and difficulty of the case. To assist in the development of fee schedules, it may be appropriate to develop criteria that can be used in assessing voucher claims.

CONTRACT DEFENSE SERVICES

Defining Contracts for Defense Services

Contracts for defense services are not a new phenomenon. Two of the largest defender offices in the country, Philadelphia and New York City, have, since their inception, been private nonprofit corporations that contract with city government for the provision of defense services.<sup>1</sup> By the same token, every attorney who accepts appointment as part of an assigned counsel panel has, in some sense, a contractual relationship with the government. However, contracts for defense services, as used here, refer to the provision of defense services over a period of time to a determined population of individuals or in a determined jurisdiction at a contractual rate offered and controlled by a government or representative thereof. In that sense, then, the older nonprofit corporations, while serving, for all intents and purposes as public defender offices, technically would be contract offices, while the private assigned counsel would not.

Kern*, 481 F.2d 621 (2d Cir. 1973) (holding that New York City's nonprofit legal services corporation, the Legal Aid Society, does not act under color of state law for purposes of civil rights liability).

When contract programs began to proliferate widely in the early 1980s, observers found it easier to describe contracts for defense services than to precisely define them. In one of the earliest studies, the authors focused on the major elements of contracts: the negotiation and award process, the parties, the services provided, and the payment mechanisms.<sup>2</sup> A 1982 national survey was the first to take note of the growth of contracts as a primary means of defense service delivery. The survey noted that such contracts provided services through "individual private attorneys, local bar associations, nonprofit organizations, or law firms joined for the purposes of securing a contract."<sup>3</sup> The same survey provided a profile of contract defense service programs: counties were usually responsible for making the contract award; contracts were most often awarded to individual practitioners or private law firms; the average number of cases involved was between 100 and 250 cases per attorney; and contracts typically involved "block grants" of a fixed number of cases at a fixed price. Almost one-fourth of the reporting counties had an existing public defender program, with the contract designed solely for provision of services in cases involving conflicts of interest or declarations of unavailability by the public defender program. One-half of the counties reportedly used competitive bidding for representation through contracts, while the remaining half normally negotiated a contract with a single lawyer or law firm.<sup>4</sup> These characteristics continue to be typical of contemporary contract programs.<sup>5</sup>

Growth in Contract Systems

Contract systems for the delivery of defense services were a new phenomenon in the 1980s. A national study of defense services in 1973 did not include contract services as a means for the delivery of defense services.<sup>6</sup> By 1986, however, the use of contract defense systems had grown to include 11 percent of all counties in the United States.<sup>7</sup> That growth was the fastest of any system for the provision of defense services during the relevant period. The growth continues. Arizona, Idaho, Kentucky, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oregon, and Washington now provide a majority of their defense services through the use of contracts for services. In 1984, Alaska, a statewide public defender jurisdiction, created the separate Office of Public Advocacy to contractually handle conflict and other cases. Contract offices were also created in Los Angeles, St. Louis, and the Harlem Neighborhood Public Defender Program of New York City to handle conflicts of interest and declarations of unavailability by the existing public defender offices.

Criticism of the use of contracts, particularly through bidding and the use of block grant awards, grew with the proliferation of contract systems. The oldest experiment with the use of contracting through bids, in San Diego, California, was so heavily criticized nationally that the county eventually abandoned the system for a public defender model.<sup>8</sup>

In the case of contracts for defense services, there were two reasons for rapid growth in their use. First, the law of conflicts of interest grew more strict as a result of decisions by the United States Supreme Court that suggested that representation of multiple defendants created serious problems of conflicts of interest.<sup>9</sup> Public defender programs grew concerned about the appearance of impropriety and developed policies for the declaration of conflicts of interest in all multiple-defendant cases,

9. Holloway v. Arkansas, 435 U.S. 475 (1978) and Wheat v. United States, 486 U.S. 153, 154 (1988). In Wheat, several defendants sought to remain with the same lawyer after attempts to waive conflicts of interest. The Court held that the trial judge may override the choice of lawyers and order separate counsel when "a potential for conflict exists which may or may not burgeon into an actual conflict as the trial progresses." Id. at 163.

as well as in other cases that presented potential conflicts of interest.<sup>10</sup> The rise in declarations of conflicts, in turn, led the counties, or in one case, the entire state of Alaska, to create second public defender offices or contracts for services with lawyers as a means to institutionally control costs.<sup>11</sup>

A second reason for the growth in contracts was an attempt to control burgeoning costs due to increased caseloads in public defender offices. Some of the earliest use of contracts for services was accompanied by the use of bidding systems that encouraged bidders to compete to submit the lowest possible bid in order to obtain the stable, predictable and sometimes sizeable income provided by winning a contract. Unfortunately, most of these early contracts were not accompanied by any criteria for awarding the contract, for monitoring performance, for dealing with any unanticipated rise or fall in caseload, or for contract renewal or termination. Instability in systems was promoted by the simple fact that the contract provider could change from year to year, and even if the contractor remained the same, market pressures frequently compelled submission of lower and lower bids in order to keep the contract. The desire for economy in services all too often overrode constitutional obligations.

Results were uniformly dismal. Contracts were criticized in national studies<sup>12</sup> and several contractual programs failed to survive judicial scrutiny on constitutional grounds.<sup>13</sup> In 1985, the ABA House of Delegates adopted a resolution opposing the award of contracts for defense services on the basis of cost alone, and urging governments to consider additional factors such as "attorney workload maximums, staffing ratios, criminal law expertise, and training, supervision and compensation guidelines." The need for national standards to guarantee the delivery of quality defense services through control of the contracting process was apparent.

The Emergence of Local and National Standards

The National Legal Aid and Defender Association developed a set of national standards for the delivery of contracts for services entitled Guidelines for Negotiating and Awarding Governmental Contracts for Criminal Defense Services. That document, the product of nearly four years of effort and drawing heavily on the ABA Standards for Criminal Justice, was approved by the NLADA Board of Directors in 1984, after which it was circulated to the ABA for review and comment. At its annual meeting in 1985, the ABA House of Delegates approved a resolution urging jurisdictions using contracts for services to do so in accordance with both the ABA Standards and the NLADA Guidelines.

State and local defender programs and other awarding agencies have also begun to adopt contract standards. States that have taken such action include Massachusetts, North Dakota, Oregon, and Washington.<sup>14</sup> Though controls on the use of contracts grow, many continue to fear that the issue of cost will override concern with quality legal services.<sup>15</sup>

Contracts for defense services, under these standards, should be no more than a "component" of the legal representation plan. It is assumed that contracts should not be the primary provider, as they often are in practice. The role of primary provider, under the standards, is reserved for the public defender office, which is considered to be the most effective means of protection of the delivery of quality legal representation.<sup>16</sup> The contract model may be an effective way to assure the important involvement of the private bar in the delivery of defense services, but that involvement may also be accomplished by the use of a coordinated assigned counsel panel.

The key with all components of an effective defense services program is not merely cost but also the provision of quality legal representation. While it should be obvious that no contract for defense services should be awarded on the basis of cost alone, the apparent economies in the use of contracts make the admonition necessary on the face of the standard. If the contractor follows even the rudimentary components of the contracting process, as set forth in these standards, appropriate attention will be given to the balance of cost and quality.

Reference to the use of contracts has also been incorporated throughout this chapter, where contracts may make up an important component of service delivery.<sup>17</sup>

Standard 5-3.2. Contracting parties and procedures

(a) The contracting authority and each contractor should be identified in the contract. Procedures for the award of contracts should be published by the contracting authority substantially in advance of the scheduled date of award.

(b) The contracting authority should ensure the professional independence of the contractor by means of a board of trustees, as provided in standard 5-1.3.

(c) The contracting parties should avoid provisions that create conflicts of interest between the contractor and clients.

Commentary

Subsection (a) is based on the NLADA Guidelines for Negotiating and Awarding Governmental Contracts for Defense Services (hereinafter Guidelines).<sup>1</sup> Under the Guidelines, the "contracting authority" is "the public office, officer, or agency which has the authority to prepare bids, negotiate, or otherwise conclude a contract and to obligate funds for those unable to afford defense services."<sup>2</sup> The "contractor" is "an attorney, law firm, professional association, lawyer's association, law school, bar association or non-profit organization" which can or does contract for defense services.<sup>3</sup> The language regarding precontract publication of procedures is new with this standard. Such publication gives to potential contractors both notice and an opportunity to adequately prepare for submission of a contract proposal.

Subsection (b) reiterates the theme of independence for the contracting attorneys, a central concern in the provision of legal services to a sometimes unpopular and politically disempowered constituency. The use of a board of trustees or directors also provides support and insulation for the contracting attorneys or entities.<sup>4</sup>

Subsection (c) addresses a particular concern with the provision of services through contracts. Contracts may create disincentives for the declaration of a conflict of interest, where the contractor must reimburse the county for the cost of outside counsel. Such contracts have been held to violate statutes or court rules barring conflicts of interest.<sup>5</sup>

Commentary

The elements of a contract for defense services are surprisingly complex if quality services are to be provided. Compliance with the items listed here is the most significant guarantee of quality in the delivery of contractual services.

Subsection (a) suggests that each contract should be developed through a careful and considered process. The elements of a good contract for services, the minimum of which are listed in subsection (b), obviate the use of standard form contracts.

The elements of a contract included in subsection (b) generally parallel the structure of the chapter with regard to the structure and funding of effective defense services. They draw heavily on specific components elucidated in the Guidelines. As elsewhere in the chapter, but not explicitly in the Guidelines, the standard gives special attention to the problems created by capital cases.

In addition to the explicit elements listed here, the contracting parties should have an agreement with regard to the provision of malpractice insurance for the attorneys and their staffs.

PART IV.

DEFENDER SYSTEMS

Standard 5-4.1. Chief defender and staff

Selection of the chief defender and staff should be made on the basis of merit. Recruitment of attorneys should include special efforts to employ women and members of minority groups. The chief defender and staff should be compensated at the rate commensurate with their experience and skill sufficient to attract career personnel and comparable to that provided for their counterparts in prosecutorial offices. The chief defender should be appointed for a fixed term of years and be subject to renewal. Neither the chief defender nor staff should be removed except upon a showing of good cause. Selection of the chief defender and staff by judges should be prohibited.

History of Standard

The standard has been amended to reflect current law regarding affirmative action and the hiring of minorities and women. The first two sentences were amended to make clear that hiring based on merit and the targeting of specific populations for hiring are not inconsistent concepts.

The second sentence was amended to remove reference to the recruitment of minority attorneys based on the minority groups which are "substantially represented in the defender program's client population."

Commentary

Selection and Independence of Chief Defender and Staff

Selection of the chief defender and staff should not be based on political considerations or on any other factors unrelated to the ability of persons to discharge their employment obligations. Hiring and promotion should be based on merit and the defender program should encourage opportunities for career service. These themes also are contained in other national standards for defenders. The National Legal Aid and Defender Association, for example, recommends that the defender director "be selected on the basis of a non-partisan, merit procedure which ensures the selection of a person with the best available administrative and legal talent, regardless of political party affiliation, contributions, or other irrelevant criteria."<sup>1</sup>

Independence of the chief defender and staff is fundamental to both the fact and appearance of zealous representation of the accused. As noted in standard 5-1.3, one means of assuring independence for a defender organization is to create a board of trustees with overall responsibility for the general policies of the program and selection of the chief defender. It may also be possible, though perhaps more difficult, to achieve independence if the chief defender is elected or chosen by a political body, such as a county commission or city council. What is not deemed satisfactory is for the chief defender to be chosen by judges, because that method fails to guarantee that the program will remain free of "judicial supervision."<sup>2</sup> Even with the best of motives by both judges and defenders, the appearance of justice is tarnished when the judiciary selects the chief defender or exercises control over the hiring of staff.

Neither merit selection nor objectives of independence suggest that it is inappropriate to make special efforts to recruit minority candidates and women for staff positions in public defender offices. State law or policy often makes it mandatory to make such efforts. Diversity in the attorney staff of public defender offices contributes to the institutional goal of quality representation.<sup>3</sup>

Employment Status

Security of employment for the chief defender and staff is essential in attracting career personnel and in encouraging professional independence. Standard 5-4.1 endorses the principle that staffs of defender programs should not be removed unless a good cause showing is made. Any lesser protection for employees may interfere with the recruitment of qualified personnel and would make it possible for chief defenders to politicize offices by bringing in personal friends or politically-connected attorneys who may not be particularly well qualified.<sup>4</sup> But while the opportunity to make a career in criminal defense work should be available, in most defender programs there is a great deal of turnover among the younger lawyers, due to the pressure involved in criminal litigation. Where removal of an attorney is sought by the chief defender, notice and hearing procedures should be provided, the decision should be subject to review, and due process protection should be accorded. Although standard 5-3.1 also sanctions removal of the chief defender based on good cause, presumably such proceedings would be uncommon, due to the appointment of the chief defender for a fixed term. The use of a fixed term helps to assure that the performance of the chief defender will be constantly reexamined by the board of trustees or other appointing authority.

There is disagreement among national standards on whether chief defenders and their staffs should be given tenure. The National Advisory Commission flatly recommends against "civil service status" for staff attorneys, believing that tenure may preclude a new chief defender from assembling the best possible staff.<sup>5</sup> The National Legal Aid and Defender Association urges that the chief defender be appointed for a fixed term of from four to six years, subject to renewal.<sup>6</sup> It also recommends that removal of staff attorneys be made "only for cause, except during a fixed probationary period which an office may employ for newly hired attorneys."<sup>7</sup>

In the past decade, two more states, Tennessee and Nebraska, have joined Florida in providing for the popular election of public defenders in the state.<sup>8</sup> This standard calls for the appointment of defenders as the best method to assure independence of the defender office and to avoid the risk of issues other than merit becoming involved in the selection of the chief defender. Other provisions of these standards suggest that appointment is the best, though not the only appropriate means for selection of the public defender.<sup>9</sup>

Compensation

The ability to attract and retain qualified lawyers in criminal defense programs is exceedingly difficult when the compensation is inadequate. In order to encourage sufficient salaries for the chief defender and staff, standard 5-3.1 suggests that salaries be "comparable to that provided for their counterparts in prosecutorial offices."<sup>10</sup> This presupposes, of course, that the salaries paid to the chief prosecutor and staff are adequate. Where they are not, it may be advisable to compare the chief defender's salary to that which is paid to the presiding trial judge in the jurisdiction as well as the earnings of attorneys in private practice engaged in defense representation. Both the National Advisory Commission and the National Legal Aid and Defender Association recommend that the salary of the chief defender be comparable to that paid the local presiding judge.<sup>11</sup>

Commentary

The work of defenders is exceedingly demanding, normally requiring that they devote as much effort to their cases as time permits. Where part-time law practice is permitted, defenders are tempted to increase their total income by devoting their energies to private practice at the expense of their nonpaying clients. Even more important, the expertise required of defense counsel is less likely to be developed if an attorney maintains a private practice involving civil cases. A prohibition of private practice by full-time personnel also assists in countering any tendency for those responsible for financing to maintain low salary structures on the assumption that defenders can supplement their salaries through private practice. Where part-time defenders continue to be used, clear and uniform standards should exist for the scope and performance of duties, limits on private practice and the avoidance of conflicts of interest. At the very least, part-time defenders should not handle retained criminal cases in the same courtrooms as their criminal cases. It may also be appropriate to prohibit the part-time defender from handling private criminal matters in the same county where that person serves as a defender, or even to restrict the part-time defender to the handling of retained civil cases outside of the defender program.

In rural jurisdictions, where the volume of criminal cases is generally small, it may be desirable to regionalize defense services in order to create offices with caseloads large enough to justify full-time personnel. This approach has proved feasible in jurisdictions with statewide public defender programs.<sup>1</sup> Another option is the use of contracts for services as part of a comprehensive program. Furthermore, as part of the mixed system of representation recommended in standard 5-1.2, some of the time of defenders in rural areas can be profitably spent assisting private counsel in their handling of assigned cases.

The trend in recent years, particularly in jurisdictions with statewide defender systems, has been toward requiring full-time attorneys who are precluded from the private practice of law. Standard 5-4.2, moreover, parallels the recommendations contained in all of the other standards for defender services.<sup>2</sup>

Nothing in this section is meant to suggest that any public defender should be prohibited from the performance of pro bono legal work, so long as it is outside of the office and office hours and does not involve court appearances.

Standard 5-4.3 Facilities; library

Every defender office should be located in a place convenient to the courts and be furnished in a manner appropriate to the dignity of the legal profession. A library of sufficient size, considering the needs of the office and the accessibility of other libraries, and other necessary facilities and equipment should be provided.

Commentary

Office Location

The principal office of the defender program must necessarily be located near the courts in order to avoid inconvenience to the staff and unnecessary travel. Where defender offices are located in court buildings, the identification of the program should make clear that it is not associated with the judiciary or law enforcement components of the criminal justice system. Indeed, it has been argued that the presence of defender offices in courthouses may contribute to defendants doubting whether the program is independent of the judiciary. Location of the office outside of the courthouse should not, of course, prevent the defender program from access to a private location in the courthouse for client and witness conferences.

Regardless of its downtown location, the defender program may also find it useful to establish branch offices in the neighborhoods in which many of its clients reside. The standards of the National Advisory Commission and the National Legal Aid and Defender Association contain recommendations to this effect.<sup>1</sup>

Office Appearance

It is essential to the efficient operation of the defender program that facilities be provided in which clients can be interviewed in privacy. Without offices and facilities befitting the nature of a lawyer's professional calling, the accused may very well lack confidence in the defender and, ultimately, in the system of justice itself. Appropriate facilities are also necessary to attract and retain career personnel.

Equipment and Library

The equipment of the defender program should take advantage of the significant advances in office technology which have become available to the private practitioner and other government offices. Thus, there should be dictation and transcription equipment, photocopying equipment capable of handling complex documents, computers and word processing equipment, computer-assisted legal research, facsimile facilities and audio- and videotaping equipment, to mention a few examples. The presence of other law libraries in the vicinity of the defender office may make the purchase of less widely used volumes unnecessary, but should not serve as an excuse for failing to establish any library at all.

PART V.

TYPES OF PROCEEDINGS AND QUALITY OF REPRESENTATION

Standard 5-5.1. Criminal Cases

Counsel should be provided in all proceedings for offenses punishable by death or incarceration, regardless of their denomination as felonies, misdemeanors, or otherwise. An offense is also deemed to be punishable by incarceration if the fact of conviction may be established in a subsequent proceeding, thereby subjecting the defendant to incarceration.

History of Standard

An amendment to the first sentence now specifically includes any proceeding in which capital punishment is a possibility. The word "incarceration" was substituted for the less precise term "imprisonment" in the standard. "Incarceration" includes both prison and jail sentences.

In Gideon v. Wainwright,<sup>1</sup> the Supreme Court recognized that the Sixth and Fourteenth Amendments require that counsel be made available when the defendant is charged with a serious crime. The Court also has extended the right to public representation to various types of pretrial proceedings, such as preliminary hearings,<sup>2</sup> lineup identifications,<sup>3</sup> and custodial interrogations.<sup>4</sup> In misdemeanor and petty offense cases, the Court ruled in Argersinger v. Hamlin<sup>5</sup> that counsel must be provided if imprisonment is imposed, unless the defendant knowingly and intelligently waives the right to an attorney.

There has been considerable debate since the Court's ruling in Argersinger concerning how the decision can best be implemented. This is because Argersinger, by its terms, extended the right to counsel in misdemeanor and petty offense cases only for defendants who are actually imprisoned. But it cannot be known whether imprisonment results until sentence is pronounced. On the other hand, it is obviously essential to decide whether to provide counsel well before trial or a plea of guilty, let alone pronouncement of sentence.<sup>6</sup>

To comply with Argersinger, this standard recommends that counsel be provided "in all criminal proceedings for offenses punishable by incarceration." The effect of this standard is to provide counsel for all defendants who are actually jailed, and also to make counsel available for all defendants who, while not incarcerated, are prosecuted for offenses subject to jailing.<sup>7</sup> Inevitably, therefore, counsel will be provided in some cases where Argersinger does not specifically require a lawyer.

This broad standard for implementing Argersinger is justified. First, the presence of counsel in cases punishable by incarceration that do not result in the imposition of an actual sentence to jail will help to assure fair proceedings. The Supreme Court stressed in Argersinger the need for counsel in order to assure fair trials, and this objective obviously is served regardless of whether incarceration results. Moreover, no other suggested formulation for implementing the Argersinger decision is satisfactory. A "classification of offense" standard, whereby courts determine never to impose imprisonment for certain misdemeanors and petty offenses and thus withhold providing counsel in these cases, is tantamount to judicial repeal of the legislature's penalty provision of incarceration. A "predetermination procedure," discussed in the Argersinger decision,<sup>8</sup> by which the court confers with the prosecutor in advance of the proceeding to determine the likelihood of imprisonment being imposed, is also rejected. In addition to being time-consuming, there is substantial risk that the court will receive information about the defendant or the offense charged which will make it exceedingly difficult for the judge to sit as fair and impartial arbiter, regardless of whether it is determined that counsel should be provided.

Many states have enacted statutes consistent with standard 5-5.1 requiring, at a minimum, that counsel be afforded whenever there is possibility of imprisonment. The standards promulgated by several other national groups are more far-reaching. Thus, the National Legal Aid and Defender Association provides that counsel should be made available "[i]n any governmental fact-finding proceeding . . . which might result in the loss of liberty or in a legal disability of a criminal or punitive nature,"<sup>9</sup> and the National Advisory Commission standards extend to all criminal cases, regardless of whether deprivation of liberty is a possibility.<sup>10</sup>

Standard 5-5.1 does not expressly apply to cases punishable only by a fine, although it can be argued that counsel is necessary in such proceedings in order to assure fair trials, just as in cases involving the possibility of imprisonment.<sup>11</sup> The standard, however, does state that

Hamlin*, 407 U.S. at 42 (Burger, C.J., concurring). But see id. at 54 (Powell, J., concurring), where it is noted that such pretrial determinations may present equal protection problems: "There may well be an unfair and unequal treatment of individual defendants, depending on whether the individual judge had determined in advance to leave open the option of imprisonment. Thus, an accused indigent would be entitled in some courts to counsel while in other courts in the same jurisdiction an indigent accused of the same offense would have no counsel."

11. However, in Scott v. Illinois, 99 S. Ct. 1158 (1979), the Supreme Court held that the Constitution does not require the furnishing of counsel to a defendant who receives only a fine. In Scott the defendant could have been imprisoned, but the trial court decided on a fine rather than incarceration. Pursuant to standard 5-5.1, of course, the court would have been required to offer counsel to the accused since the offense was "punishable by incarceration."

counsel should be provided "if in fact of conviction may be established in a subsequent proceeding, thereby subjecting the defendant to imprisonment." The standard thus covers what may be termed "imprisonment once removed" situations.<sup>12</sup> For example, counsel is required under this standard when a conviction can be used in a subsequent proceeding so as to apply a recidivist statute and thereby lead to imprisonment.<sup>13</sup> Consistent with this standard, the Supreme Court has held in Baldasar v. Illinois<sup>14</sup> that an uncounseled misdemeanor conviction, which did not result in incarceration, may not be used under an enhanced penalty statute to convert a subsequent misdemeanor offense into a felony.<sup>15</sup>

Standard 5-5.2. Collateral proceedings

Counsel should be provided in all proceedings arising from or connected with the initiation of a criminal action against the accused, including but not limited to extradition, mental competency, postconviction relief, and probation and parole revocation, regardless of the designation of the tribunal in which they occur or classification of the proceedings as civil in nature.

Commentary

This standard recognizes a broad right to counsel in collateral criminal proceedings in which a defendant may be deprived of liberty or otherwise subjected to serious deprivations. Implementation of this standard undoubtedly involves the extension of counsel to some proceedings in which the right to legal representation is neither constitutionally nor statutorily required. In the collateral proceedings contemplated by this standard, however, counsel is regarded as necessary to serve as the client's advocate and to assure fair hearings and procedures.

This standard contemplates, inter alia, the assignment of counsel in situations where all of the elements of a formal adversary proceeding against the accused may not be present. Thus, a person summoned before a grand jury who is the target of an investigation should be afforded legal representation.<sup>1</sup> Similarly, counsel should be provided to defendants at lineups conducted immediately after arrest and before the initiation of charges,<sup>2</sup> and also to persons seeking to challenge the execution of search warrants that do not result in arrests.

In recent years, the line between criminal and civil proceedings which give rise to a constitutional right to counsel has become increasingly blurred. Thus, protected liberty interests have extended due process concepts to justify the provision of counsel for indigent litigants in such "quasi-criminal" matters as contempt for failure to make child support payments, termination of parental rights, civil commitment, and civil

1. In United States v. Washington, 431 U.S. 181 (1977), the Supreme Court held that a target witness summoned before a grand jury did not have to be advised that he was the object of the grand jury probe. The Court in Washington did not decide whether Miranda warnings were constitutionally required since the grand jury witness was, in fact, advised of the right to remain silent and to obtain assistance of counsel, and that his testimony could be used against him in a subsequent proceeding. See also, United States v. Mandujano, 425 U.S. 564 (1976), where, in a plurality opinion that commanded only four votes, the Supreme Court stated that Miranda warnings need not be given to a putative or virtual defendant called before a grand jury.

contempt.<sup>3</sup> The arguments for a right to counsel in these contexts seem to suggest a right to counsel in traditionally civil contexts as well, so long as critical liberty interests are involved.<sup>4</sup> This standard stops at proceedings "arising from or connected with" the commencement of criminal proceedings, but should not be taken to disparage the right to counsel in broader contexts as an essential aspect of a fair trial and access to justice, so long as an effective administrative infrastructure—perhaps like that suggested in this chapter—is provided.<sup>5</sup>

Although the Supreme Court has held that a state is not required to provide counsel in discretionary reviews of convictions,<sup>6</sup> a majority of states do provide authorization for counsel to some extent in postconviction proceedings.<sup>7</sup> The right to legal representation in such proceedings is provided for in both the Uniform Post-Conviction Procedure Act<sup>8</sup> and in the standards of the National Advisory Commission.<sup>9</sup> Detailed provisions of the ABA Standards related to the assignment of counsel in postconviction cases are contained in standards 22-4.3 and 22-5.2.<sup>10</sup> In the area of extradition, the vast majority of states have adopted the Uniform Criminal Extradition Act, which guarantees to defendants “the right to demand and procure legal counsel.”<sup>11</sup>

This standard goes beyond what the Supreme Court has required in probation and parole revocation proceedings. In Gagnon v. Scarpelli,<sup>12</sup> the Court held that a state is not constitutionally obligated to provide counsel at all such hearings. Legal representation, according to Gagnon, should be furnished on a case-by-case basis, depending on whether the probationer or parolee is likely to have difficulty in presenting his or her version of the disputed facts without the aid of counsel. With this approach there is substantial risk that counsel will be withheld from some defendants who desire legal representation. Accordingly, this standard contemplates that counsel be made available for all probation and parole revocation hearings. Such proceedings should occur without counsel only if a knowing and intelligent waiver of counsel has been entered. The requirement of counsel at probation revocation proceedings is dealt with in greater detail in ABA standard 18-7.5 (2d ed. 1980).

representation or lead to the breach of professional obligations. Special consideration should be given to the workload created by representation in capital cases.

(b) Whenever defender organizations, individual defenders, assigned counsel or contractors for services determine, in the exercise of their best professional judgment, that the acceptance of additional cases or continued representation in previously accepted cases will lead to the furnishing of representation lacking in quality or to the breach of professional obligations, the defender organization, individual defender, assigned counsel or contractor for services must take such steps as may be appropriate to reduce their pending or projected caseloads, including the refusal of further appointments. Courts should not require individuals or programs to accept caseloads that will lead to the furnishing of representation lacking in quality or to the breach of professional obligations.

History of Standard

"Workload," as used in this standard, is to be distinguished from the more narrow term "caseload." Caseload is the number of cases assigned to an attorney at any given time. Workload is the sum of all work performed by the individual attorney at any given time, which includes the number of cases to which the attorney is assigned, but also includes other tasks for which that attorney is responsible. For example, a managing attorney who has extensive supervisory responsibilities but a very low caseload may have a heavier workload than a staff attorney whose caseload is average. Similarly, a case may create workload issues when it takes longer to prepare or dispose of because the penalty is higher or because it is especially complex. Subsection (a) deals with workload; subsection (b) deals with caseload.

Subsection (a) adds reference to contracts for services in the first sentence, as well as a new final sentence which accents the particular problems affecting workload as a result of the concentration of immense resources in the burgeoning numbers of capital prosecutions and appeals in cases in which the defendant is legally indigent.

Subsection (b) also makes reference to contracts for services. It adds a reference to individual attorneys when discussing those who must use discretion to determine the limits of caseload and the steps to be taken in response to that caseload. A new final sentence is also added urging courts to be sensitive to the imposition of excessive caseloads. The addition recognizes that the problem of excessive caseloads originates in both the reluctant acceptance of cases by overburdened appointed counsel as well as in docket pressures experienced by appointing judges.

Commentary

The goal in providing defense services should be to secure quality legal representation for persons unable to afford counsel (standard 5-1.1). This objective should be pursued regardless of whether the defense services provided relate to criminal cases (standard 5-5.1) or to collateral matters (standard 5-5.2).

One of the most significant impediments to the furnishing of quality defense services for the poor is the presence of excessive workloads. One recent national survey, for example, found workloads to be one of the most significant concerns of public defender offices. Defenders attributed the precipitous growth in their caseloads to increased drug prosecutions, police or prosecutorial overcharging, mandatory minimums or increased sentences, and failure of funding agencies to provide adequate attorneys and other resources.<sup>1</sup>

All too often in defender organizations or in contracts for services attorneys are asked to provide representation in too many cases. Assigned counsel whose principal professional activity is representation of the accused in criminal matters may also accept an excessive number of cases, either because of the perceived economic benefits or because of pressures from the judiciary due to exploding dockets. Unfortunately, not even the most able and industrious lawyers can provide quality representation when their workloads are unmanageable. Excessive workloads, moreover, lead to attorney frustration, disillusionment by clients, and weakening of the adversary system.

The attorney who has too many clients also experiences special concerns about his or her ethical duties. The Model Rules admonish an attorney not to represent a client if "the representation will result in violation of the rules of professional conduct. . . ."<sup>2</sup> The commentary to that section states that representation should not be accepted "unless it can be performed competently, promptly . . . and to completion."<sup>3</sup> At least one state, Wisconsin, has issued an ethics opinion on limits to defender workload.<sup>4</sup> Similarly, the ABA Defense Function standards state that defense counsel "should not carry a workload that, by reason of its excessive size, interferes with the rendering of quality representation. . . ."<sup>5</sup>

In addition, the attorney "should withdraw from a sufficient number of matters to permit handling of the remaining matters." In support of its conclusion, the Committee cites to ABA Formal Opinion 347 (Dec. 1, 1981).

5. ABA STANDARDS FOR CRIMINAL JUSTICE 4-1.3(e) (3d ed. 1993). Excessive workloads may contribute to the likelihood of malpractice suits being brought against public defenders. The Supreme Court has held that an attorney appointed in the federal courts to represent a criminal defendant is not entitled to immunity in a state malpractice suit brought by the former client. Ferri v. Ackerman, 444 U.S. 193 (1979). But see Polk County v. Dodson, 454 U.S. 312 (1981) (public defender immune under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for actions performed as counsel under color of state law); see also Tower v. Glover, 467 U.S.

Methods for measurement of caseloads and workloads have advanced considerably over time. The most rudimentary method is that of counting the number of open files allocated to each attorney in a defender or contract program. This method obviously suffers, however, from the lack of any information on how long a case may take for disposition or how complex the case may be. It provides no means by which to project future staffing needs. Another method is to count the number of cases which are or should be disposed of over a fixed period of time, usually a year. Finally, time-based systems calculate how long it takes an attorney to perform a specific task, on average, then divide that figure into the total available time over a specific period to come up with how many "units" of activity an attorney can perform over the time period in question.<sup>6</sup> The National Legal Aid and Defender Association has developed systems for automated or manual management information of defender programs<sup>7</sup> and the calculation of "weighted" caseloads<sup>8</sup> which explain and amplify the accurate measurement of workload and caseload.

The determination of whether caseloads are excessive necessarily is entrusted to the defender organization and to the individual attorney, whether a staff public defender, a contractor for services or an assigned counsel. Only the lawyers themselves know how much must be done to represent their clients and how much time the preparation is likely to take. To assist in assessing workloads, some defender offices have established caseload guidelines that are useful in determining whether the office workload or that of a particular attorney is excessive.<sup>9</sup> It is also helpful for managers of defender offices to encourage their attorneys to make known any concerns they have regarding excessive workloads.<sup>10</sup> In addition, in some instances it may be useful to arrange for independent assessments of workload levels to be conducted by independent consultants.<sup>11</sup>

The standards of the National Advisory Commission, first developed in 1973, have proven resilient over time, and provide a rough measure of caseloads. They recommend that an attorney handle no more than the following number of cases in each category each year:

- 150 felonies<sup>12</sup> per attorney per year; or
- 400 misdemeanors per attorney per year; or
- 200 juvenile cases per attorney per year; or
- 200 mental commitment cases per attorney per year; or
- 25 appeals per attorney per year.<sup>13</sup>

12. The standard does not refer to capital representation. Thus, felonies referred to here do not include death penalty cases.

13. NATIONAL ADVISORY COMMISSION ON CRIMINAL JUSTICE STANDARDS AND GOALS, COURTS 13.12 (1973). These standards were recently endorsed by an ABA Committee studying the criminal justice system, with slight modification. While supporting the standards in all other categories, the Committee recommended that attorneys handle no more than 300, not 400, misdemeanors per year. ABA SPECIAL COMMITTEE ON CRIMINAL JUSTICE IN A FREE SOCIETY, CRIMINAL JUSTICE IN CRISIS 43 (1989). The Washington (State) Defender Association also adopted a variation of the national standards, with 300 misdemeanors and 250 juvenile or civil commitment cases per attorney per year. WASHINGTON DEFENDER ASSOCIATION, STANDARDS FOR PUBLIC DEFENSE SERVICES, STANDARD THREE (Oct. 1989). The modified number of misdemeanor cases seems particularly apt when it is considered that the original standard was adopted before the full impact of the U.S. Supreme Court's decision in Argersinger v. Hamlin, 407 U.S. 25 (1972).

Such an approach presents the obvious difficulty that not all felonies are of equal complexity and not all lawyers are of equal ability or have access to identical supporting services. Practices and policies, as well as court capacity, vary from jurisdiction to jurisdiction. In contrast, the National Legal Aid and Defender Association avoids any reference to precise numbers of cases that can be handled.<sup>14</sup> However, it emphasizes that excessive workloads must be curtailed and that defender organizations must vigorously pursue alternatives when the numbers of persons requiring representation exceed the capacity of their staffs.

Workload in capital cases creates extraordinary difficulties in every jurisdiction in which the death penalty can be imposed.

Time requirements in such cases vastly exceed those of noncapital felony cases.<sup>15</sup> In some states where death row populations are high, the situation has reached crisis proportions. After conducting a national survey, for example, attorneys in Florida arrived at an annual caseload standard of five cases per attorney when the defendant was not under a warrant of death, and three cases per attorney when a warrant for execution had been issued.<sup>16</sup> In California, where the Office of the State Public Defender handled capital appeals in the California Supreme Court, one study concluded that the attorneys handling such cases should be responsible for only two to three briefs per year in such cases.<sup>17</sup>

Once the determination is made that quality representation is impossible due to inordinate workload, a variety of options are available. If assigned counsel are involved, the administrator of the program should reassign cases to other private counsel or request the defender organization to provide representation. No additional cases should be given to the assigned counsel until the program administrator is assured that the workload has been brought under control. In the case of a defender program with excessive workload, additional cases must be refused and, if necessary, pending cases transferred to assigned counsel. In order to ease workload pressures, the statute of one statewide defender program authorizes the agency to engage private counsel "on a case basis whenever needed to meet caseload demands."<sup>18</sup> The agency is also given authority to "divide the case workload . . . between the professional staff and the trial pool of attorneys."<sup>19</sup> The capability of reducing excessive workloads for both defenders and assigned counsel is greatly aided where the programs are fully independent of judicial and political controls.<sup>20</sup>

Commentary

The defender organization in each jurisdiction is best equipped and trained to do that for which it was created: provision of quality services in the defense of criminal cases. However, the legal representation plan in every jurisdiction should permit the defender office to initiate separate legal proceedings on behalf of clients of the program. Such cases, in which the clients become plaintiffs in either individual or class actions, may be appropriate when substantial numbers of clients are similarly situated or where the state or its agents violate fundamental rights which cannot otherwise be protected. Clients of defender offices are, definitionally, without the resources to afford counsel. As such, these clients usually are not in a position to pursue legal actions as plaintiffs in order to protect legal rights that may be important to their cases. The standard does not suggest that the defender office must take all cases in which such action is requested; it only urges defender offices (and their funding sources) to recognize that such actions should be permitted, if, in the judgment of the office and after discussion and consent from affected clients, they are necessary.

Examples of cases are numerous. They have included actions to protect attorney-client communications, where jail officials were reading client correspondence; actions to keep juvenile clients in clean, uncrowded and conveniently located facilities; or actions to challenge improper jury selection procedures that affect large numbers of the agency's clients.<sup>1</sup> The source of authority for such actions may be implicit in the creation of the office,<sup>2</sup> or may be part of the office's organizational structure.<sup>3</sup>

In some jurisdictions where the workload problem has been particularly acute, defender organizations have instituted lawsuits to challenge requirements that they be required to take additional cases.<sup>4</sup> Such

"systemic" attacks have lead to significant improvements in defender systems. Fears of political recriminations or lack of resources may make the defender program reluctant to pursue such actions.<sup>5</sup> In such instances, the office may cooperate with other interested parties in bringing the action.<sup>6</sup> In others, the action is brought by attorneys disaffected with little or no compensation for their services who then bring suit to recover fees and expenses.<sup>7</sup> The growth of these actions in recent years shows that litigative solutions are often the only effective means of forcing salutary changes in defender systems.

PART VI.

STAGE OF PROCEEDINGS

Standard 5-6.1. Initial provision of counsel

Upon request, counsel should be provided to persons who have not been charged or taken into custody but who are in need of legal representation arising from criminal proceedings. Counsel should be provided to the accused as soon as feasible and, in any event, after custody begins, at appearance before a committing magistrate, or when formal charges are filed, whichever occurs earliest. In capital cases, two qualified trial attorneys should be assigned to represent the defendant. The authorities should promptly notify the defender, the contractor for services, or the official responsible for assigning counsel whenever the person in custody requests counsel or is without counsel.

History of Standard

The first sentence in this edition was the last sentence of the same standard in the second edition.

A new third sentence was added regarding the provision of two qualified attorneys in capital cases at trial. It is taken from the language of an ABA resolution adopted at the 1985 Midyear Meeting.

The last sentence was revised. The word "promptly" was added to denote the urgency with which action should be taken, and the phrase "contractor for services" was also added to conform with changes made throughout the chapter.<sup>1</sup>

Commentary

Decisions of the Supreme Court have held that the right to representation by counsel attaches at "critical stages" that occur prior to trial, such as custodial interrogations conducted by law enforcement authorities,<sup>2</sup> lineups conducted after the initiation of adversary proceedings,<sup>3</sup> and preliminary hearings.<sup>4</sup> The Court also has recognized that the right to counsel may also apply at preliminary judicial proceedings where pleas are required to be entered that are later used against defendants or where defenses must be claimed that are irretrievably lost if not asserted.<sup>5</sup> This standard, however, extends beyond the Supreme Court's decisions, for it applies to situations that have not been held to be "critical stages" within the meaning of the Sixth Amendment. Thus, the standard recommends that counsel be provided "as soon as feasible after custody begins," assuming that this event occurs, as it usually does, prior to the defendant's appearance before a judicial officer or the filing of formal charges.<sup>6</sup> Indeed, any qualified person who needs the assistance of counsel before being taken into custody, or even before the filing of formal criminal charges, should be able to receive that assistance if requested.<sup>7</sup>

Effective representation of the accused requires that counsel be provided at the earliest possible time. Often there are witnesses who must be interviewed promptly by the defense lest their memories of critical events fade or the witnesses become difficult to locate. Where the accused is incarcerated, defense counsel must begin immediately to marshal facts in support of the defendant's pretrial release from custody. Counsel's early presence in the case can also sometimes serve to convince the prosecutor to dismiss unfounded charges, to charge the accused with less serious offenses, or to divert the case entirely from the criminal courts.<sup>8</sup> Perhaps most important, unless the indigent accused is provided counsel at the earliest possible time, discrimination occurs between the poor defendant and the defendant of financial means: the latter is able to afford counsel and frequently acquires legal representation well before formal commencement of adversary proceedings. This standard seeks to provide for the indigent accused similar representation opportunities.

To aid in achieving the goal of early representation by counsel, the standard recommends that the appropriate authorities assume responsibility for notifying the defender or assigned-counsel programs when a person in custody is without counsel or requests to see an attorney.

6. However, the Supreme Court has held in United States v. Gouveia, 467 U.S. 180, (1984), that the Sixth Amendment does not require the appointment of counsel prior to the initiation of adversary judicial proceedings against indigent inmates who are confined in administrative detention for approximately nineteen months while being investigated for criminal activities committed in prison. Standard 5-6.1 does not specifically address the type of fact situation involved in Gouveia, although its underlying rationale is inconsistent with the Supreme Court's result in the Gouveia case. See also ABA STANDARDS FOR CRIMINAL JUSTICE 23-3.3 (2d ed. 1980), which deals with alleged criminal misconduct of prisoners.

7. The ABA's Grand Jury Policy and Model Act suggests that it is appropriate to appoint counsel in some circumstances during grand jury proceedings. See ABA GRAND JURY POLICY AND MODEL ACT (1977-1982).

8. A national study by the Justice Department found, for example, that early representation by appointed counsel improved the accuracy of bail setting and early release of defendants without danger to the public, promoted prompt and efficient case processing and resolution, improved the attorney-client relationship, and made defender programs more cost-effective. U.S. DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE, NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF JUSTICE, EARLY REPRESENTATION BY DEFENSE COUNSEL FIELD TEST: FINAL EVALUATION REPORT (The URSA Institute, August 1984).

By implication, this standard necessarily imposes a responsibility on defender and assigned-counsel programs to provide representation to defendants at early stages of proceeding. Indeed, to implement fully the goal of this standard, defender and assigned-counsel programs should publicize their availability in courts and detention facilities, be prepared to provide emergency twenty-four-hour representation, and conduct routine daily checks of detention facilities to ascertain whether unrepresented defendants are present. Similarly, the ABA Model Rules impose on prosecutors the obligation not to give any advice to defendants who are unrepresented except the advice to obtain counsel, without cost if necessary.<sup>9</sup>

The requirements of capital litigation have made the appointment of two attorneys at trial a necessity. The process by which the two counsel enter a capital case is, of course, no different than any other covered by this standard. In 1985, at its Midyear Meeting, the ABA adopted a resolution stating that in the trial of capital cases two attorneys should be appointed as trial counsel. One person is to act as primary defense counsel and the other as co-counsel. Both are to have "substantial trial experience which includes the trial of serious felony cases," as is suggested by standard 5-2.2.<sup>10</sup> The appointment of co-counsel lessens the burden on primary counsel and provides that attorney with both research assistance and emotional support. The second attorney provides a fresh perspective. Most important, the two attorneys are necessary for the additional duties created by the need for an integrated defense at bifurcated proceedings dealing first with guilt or innocence and later with a sentence of either death or some lesser penalty. In capital trials, courts should be most concerned with fairness, not economy.

Standard 5-6.1 is consistent with the recommendations of other national organizations. The National Advisory Commission urges that representation begin "at the time the individual either is arrested or is requested to participate in an investigation that has focused upon him as a likely suspect."<sup>11</sup> Likewise, the National Legal Aid and Defender Association states that representation should be available when a person

Standard 5-6.2. Duration of representation

Counsel should be provided at every stage of the proceedings, including sentencing, appeal, certiorari and postconviction review. In capital cases, counsel also should be provided in clemency proceedings. Counsel initially provided should continue to represent the defendant throughout the trial court proceedings and should preserve the defendant's right to appeal, if necessary.

History of Standard

The insertion of the word "certiorari" in the first sentence is consistent with an ABA resolution calling for appointment of counsel by the Supreme Court for preparation of certiorari petitions, adopted in 1979.

A new second sentence was added to make explicit reference to provision of counsel in all aspects of capital representation, including clemency. This language is consistent with both the ABA Guidelines in capital cases, incorporated into this chapter at standard 5-1.2 above, and the recent recommendations of the ABA on provision of appointed counsel in federal habeas corpus proceedings, which differ only in recommending that the attorney appointed after trial be a person other than trial counsel.<sup>1</sup>

Commentary

Stage of Proceedings

Once representation begins as provided in standard 5-6.1, it is important that it continue throughout all subsequent stages of the criminal proceeding. The right to counsel at sentencing is firmly established. The role and responsibilities of counsel at sentencing is discussed in ABA Standard 18-6.3 (2d ed. 1980). The right to counsel for defendants on their first appeal to an appellate court is constitutionally required pursuant to the Supreme Court's 1963 decision in Douglas v. California.<sup>2</sup> Although not constitutionally required, counsel normally should be present for the preparation of certiorari petitions and the handling of postconviction petitions.<sup>3</sup>

Continuity in the Trial Court

This standard suggests that the attorney initially appointed to provide representation continue to do so throughout the trial proceedings.<sup>4</sup> This affords the best opportunity for the development of a close and confidential attorney-client relationship. The standard thus rejects the practice in some public defender programs in which "stage" or "horizontal" representation is used, that is, different public defenders represent the accused at different stages of the proceedings, such as preliminary hearings, pretrial motion hearings, trials, and sentencing. The utilization of stage representation in defender offices has developed due to the belief that it is cost-efficient and because it enables defenders to specialize and often reduces travel time and scheduling conflicts.<sup>5</sup> The disadvantages of such representation, particularly in human terms, are substantial. Defendants are forced to rely on a series of lawyers and, instead of believing they have received fair treatment, may simply feel that they have been "processed by the system." This form of representation may be inefficient as well, because each new attorney must begin by familiarizing himself or herself with the case and the client must be reinterviewed. Moreover, when a single attorney is not responsible for the case, the risk of substandard representation is probably increased. Appellate courts confronted with claims of ineffective assistance of counsel by public defenders have commented critically on stage representation practices.<sup>6</sup> The National Legal Aid and Defender Association—the only other national group to address this issue specifically—also has recommended that clients receive only one attorney throughout the trial proceedings.<sup>7</sup>

Continuity on Appeals

This standard is silent on the issue of whether trial counsel should be required to provide appellate representation. In support of appointing new counsel on appeal, it is argued that a fresh lawyer may perceive issues from the transcript which trial counsel may miss, due to closeness and familiarity with the case. It also is suggested that new counsel on appeal is necessary in order to assure that arguments regarding ineffective assistance of counsel are presented to the appellate court. In addition, the brief-writing skills required of appellate counsel may not always be possessed by trial attorneys. On the other hand, it is said that familiarity with the case greatly facilitates preparation of the brief and oral argument. Significantly, the plans adopted by most federal courts pursuant to the Criminal Justice Act of 1964 generally provide for continuity of representation through appeal.

Supp. 595 (S.D.N.Y. 1971) (in determining whether defendant had been afforded effective assistance of counsel, court considered the fact that defendant was represented by at least four public defenders at various stages before trial and was not aware who was acting as his attorney at any given time).

Where local rule requires that trial counsel normally provide representation on appeal, in some instances the practice may impose an unreasonable burden. An attorney's other professional commitments, for example, may not afford sufficient time to prepare a time-consuming appeal. Alternatively, counsel may believe that there is a nonfrivolous issue concerning whether counsel rendered effective assistance in the trial court. Or the geographic separation of the trial and appellate courts may impose a serious travel hardship. Whenever any of these circumstances are present, counsel should be encouraged to inform the appointing authorities and arrangements should be made to assign counsel better able to carry the case forward.

In defender programs, it may be appropriate to establish an appeals division, which can lead to substantial specialization in brief writing and oral argument. Other programs develop a system of rotation between the trial and appellate divisions, which provides a wide range of flexibility and opportunities for new experience. A defender who has numerous trial commitments may find it difficult to devote sufficient time to brief preparation. When the trial lawyer from the defender program does not prepare the brief, he or she should at least be available to consult with the appellate attorney concerning possible issues on appeal. If the defender attorney on appeal believes that an issue of ineffective assistance of counsel should be presented, the defender program should be excused and private counsel appointed to the case. Unless this is done, the appellate lawyer from the defender office will be faced with a conflict of interest in complaining about the conduct of a colleague who represented the client in the trial court. The problem is avoided in jurisdictions that have established wholly independent statewide appellate defender programs.<sup>8</sup>

Whether selected to provide representation by the judiciary or whether chosen, as recommended herein, "by the administrators of the defender, assigned-counsel and contract-for-services programs,"<sup>1</sup> attorneys should not have to fear that zealous representation of clients may result in their removal. Clients, moreover, should have the right to continue satisfactory relationships with defense lawyers in whom they have confidence and trust.<sup>2</sup> Significantly, where retained counsel are involved, courts have held that a lawyer cannot, consistent with the Sixth Amendment,

Financially Unable/Substantial Hardship

The fundamental test for determining eligibility for counsel should be whether persons are "financially unable to obtain adequate representation without substantial hardship." All of the other nationally recognized standards on defense services cited in the related standards section also adopt a "financial inability/substantial hardship" test. The federal Criminal Justice Act of 1964<sup>1</sup> and the statutes in a great majority of the states invoke the test of "inability to afford counsel" or the equivalent, and many mention substantial hardship.<sup>2</sup> In many states, the standards for providing counsel are detailed and make specific references to such factors as income, expenses, liquid assets, and number and ages of dependents.<sup>3</sup> It is common now for states to use variations on the Legal Services Corporation's poverty formula.<sup>4</sup>

No state uses only "indigency" as the basis for providing counsel. This test is rejected because it confuses the question of the right to be provided counsel with issues about eligibility for public welfare assistance and suggests a rigid standard for every defendant without regard to the cost of obtaining legal services for a particular case. One use of eligibility for welfare or public assistance, however, is the development of "presumptive eligibility" in criminal cases. The major national study of eligibility criteria recommended adoption of the system used in a number of states whereby any applicant for appointment of counsel who is a current recipient of state or federally administered public assistance is automatically considered eligible for appointed counsel without further inquiry.<sup>5</sup>

Eligibility Guidelines

A majority of states now have formal eligibility criteria.<sup>6</sup> Perhaps because statutes concerning eligibility are written in general terms, however, there are considerable disparities in eligibility determinations among the states and sometimes within the same state. In order to assure fair eligibility determination and equal treatment for defendants similarly situated, it is essential that there be detailed written guidelines that implement this standard's "financial inability/substantial hardship" test or other tests of a similar nature.

Standard 5-7.1 contains an important recommendation which should be included in all regulations relating to eligibility: the ability of defendants to post bond should not be used as a basis to deny providing counsel. The ability to post bond is rejected as a basis for denying counsel because it requires the accused to choose between receiving legal representation and the chance to be at liberty pending trial. Since a person's freedom prior to trial often is essential to the preparation of an adequate defense, placing the defendant in this dilemma is arguably a denial of the effective assistance of counsel.<sup>7</sup>

A host of other specific factors should also be considered in preparing eligibility guidelines. For example, the National Legal Aid and Defender Association suggests that a defendant's "liquid assets" be taken into account; these are defined as "cash in hand, stocks and bonds, bank accounts and any other property which can be readily converted to cash."<sup>8</sup> While a defendant's home and car are suggested as factors to be considered by the National Advisory Commission<sup>9</sup> and the National Legal Aid and Defender Association,<sup>10</sup> exclusion of these factors is recommended by the latter's National Study Commission Recommendations since neither is capable of immediate conversion to cash and both are necessities. Indeed, in a case where counsel was denied because of ownership of an automobile, the Supreme Court of Hawaii reversed on the grounds that the defendant's vehicle was a reasonable necessity of life.<sup>11</sup> Additional factors to consider in establishing eligibility guidelines include the debts and liabilities of the accused, the cost of retaining competent counsel in the area, and the defendant's own assessment of whether representation can be obtained without creating substantial personal family hardship. Eligibility criteria also should be regularly updated to account for inflation and increases in the cost of living.

Standard 5-7.2. Reimbursement, notice and imposition of contribution

(a) Reimbursement of counsel or the organization or the governmental unit providing counsel should not be required, except on the ground of fraud in obtaining the determination of eligibility.

(b) Persons required to contribute to the costs of counsel should be informed, prior to an offer of counsel, of the obligation to make contribution.

(c) Contribution should not be imposed unless satisfactory procedural safeguards are provided.

History of Standard

The title of the standard was changed, and the text has been significantly modified. The first sentence of standard 5-6.2 in the second edition, dealing with partial ability to pay, has been transferred intact to standard 5-7.1 in the third edition. New standard 5-7.2 has been divided into three subsections.

Subsection (a) continues the second edition policy against the use of "reimbursement," defined in commentary as applying "where the defendant is ordered at the termination of proceedings to make payments for the representation that has been provided."

"Contribution," discussed in commentary as a payment "at the time counsel is provided or during the course of proceedings," is implicitly approved in black-letter and discussed with approval in commentary.

11. State v. Mickle, 56 Haw. 23, 525 P.2d 1108 (1974).

This policy on the use of contribution also reflects the commentary discussion in the second edition.

Subsections (b) and (c) were added to protect procedural rights of the accused in the event that contribution is imposed. Subsection (b) contains a notice provision, while subsection (c) suggests the adoption of appropriate due process protection.

New standard 5-8.1 strikes a phrase found in the second edition (standard 5-7.1) about advice by the court to defendants as to the provision of counsel "without cost." Subsection (b) of the third edition standard 5-7.2 seeks to reconcile the apparent conflict in these standards between the obligation of advice of the right to appointed counsel at state expense and the potential obligation of the defendant to contribute to the costs of counsel. The third edition uses the word "person" in reference to those against whom contribution is assessed, bringing the language herewith into conformity with that of standard 5-8.1, which uses the term "person" when referring to an offer of counsel prior to formal charging.

Commentary

This standard refers to "reimbursement" (sometimes called "recoupment") and to "contribution." The concepts are different, although the goal is the same in each: to obtain repayment for the costs of counsel to the state from some defendants who can afford to make such payments either because their lack of assets is temporary or because they fall just below the margin of legal indigency. It is the point in the proceedings at which the imposition of the obligation occurs that distinguishes the two terms. "Reimbursement" applies to situations where the defendant is ordered at the termination of the court proceedings to make payments for the representation that has been provided. Most states have enacted laws that authorize reimbursement to be ordered,<sup>1</sup> and the Supreme Court has sustained the constitutionality of one such statute.<sup>2</sup> In addition, the federal Criminal Justice Act of 1964 and several state statutes authorize a "contribution" from defendants,<sup>3</sup> whereby the defendant makes payment, usually of a nominal fixed sum, for the representation provided either at the time counsel is first appointed or during the course of the trial proceedings.

Notwithstanding the constitutionality of reimbursement statutes, this standard recommends that defendants be ordered to provide reim-

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE, BUREAU OF JUSTICE STATISTICS, NATIONAL CRIMINAL DEFENSE SYSTEMS STUDY 34 (Sept. 1986). A later survey found that thirty-six states had specific statutes which authorize recoupment. U.S. DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE, NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF JUSTICE, CONTAINING THE COST OF INDIGENT DEFENSE PROGRAMS: ELIGIBILITY SCREENING AND COST RECOVERY PROCEDURES 33, 77, Appendix A (Sept. 1986).

2. In Fuller v. Oregon, 417 U.S. 40 (1974), the Supreme Court sustained the constitutionality of the Oregon statute, which applied only to convicted defendants and which required the trial court to consider whether imposing recoupment could result in substantial hardship to the defendant. But see James v. Strange, 407 U.S. 128 (1972) (Kansas recoupment provision that did not provide indigent defendants with the same exemptions as other judgment debtors held unconstitutional as a violation of equal protection); Rinaldi v. Yeager, 384 U.S. 306 (1966) (New Jersey recoupment statute requiring only convicted defendants who are imprisoned to repay the cost of a transcript on appeal violated equal protection); Giaccio v. Pennsylvania, 382 U.S. 399 (1966) (recoupment statute that allowed a jury to require the defendant to pay court costs if found guilty of "misconduct" held void for vagueness). See also Olson v. James, 603 F.2d 150 (10th Cir. 1979) (statute allowing state to garnish wages and recoup cost of counsel even from indigent defendants who are acquitted held unconstitutional in violation of Fourteenth Amendment); Opinion of the Justices, 121 N.H. 531, 431 A.2d 144 (1981) (defendants receiving legal assistance must be afforded the same protection against garnishment of wages as civil judgment debtors).

In Fitch v. Belshaw, 581 F. Supp. 273 (D. Or. 1984), a later Oregon recoupment statute, which permitted courts to require indigent defendants, regardless of financial status and without notice or hearing, to reimburse the state for court-appointed attorneys, was held to violate the Sixth and Fourteenth Amendments. Unlike the statute upheld in Fuller v. Oregon, supra, this statute was applicable to both convicted and acquitted defendants, contained no standards for whether a defendant was able to pay, and did not permit a defaulting defendant to show that the refusal to pay was unintentional.

3. 18 U.S.C. § 3006A(f) (1982). Annot. 51 A.L.R. Fed. 561 (1981) (propriety of order under 18 U.S.C. § 3006A(f) (1976) directing contribution payment by or on behalf of defendant). The national study of cost recovery programs found that eleven states had statutes which permit contribution. CONTAINING THE COST OF INDIGENT DEFENSE PROGRAMS, supra, note 1, at 49-55 and Appendix A, at 77.

bursment for their defense costs only in instances where they have made fraudulent representations for purposes of being found eligible for counsel. Defendants who fraudulently misrepresent their financial condition to the person who determines eligibility should not be permitted to benefit from their deceit, and the defendant's lawyer has an ethical duty to reveal the misrepresentation to the court.<sup>4</sup> On the other hand, there are compelling policy reasons for not routinely requiring defendants to reimburse the state or local treasury for the cost of their representation. The offer of free legal assistance is rendered hollow if defendants are required to make payments for counsel for several years following conviction. Reimbursement requirements also may serve to discourage defendants from exercising their right to counsel, and long-term duties to make payments for representation may interfere with the rehabilitation of defendants.<sup>5</sup>

Policy considerations are different if defendants with limited financial resources are required to make contributions for their defense at the time counsel is provided or during the course of the proceedings. Such contribution orders do not impose on defendants long-term financial debts and normally are not entered unless there is a realistic prospect that the defendants can make reasonably prompt payments. Accordingly, contribution orders, in contrast to orders for reimbursement, are less likely to chill the exercise by defendants of their right to counsel. Because of the difference between contribution and reimbursement, standard 5-7.2 specifically precludes only reimbursement. Should contributions be required of defendants, however, in order to avoid interference with the attorney-client relationship, either the court or its

5. These problems are especially evident where repayment of costs is made a consideration of probation. Imposing such a condition has been challenged on the ground that it unduly chills the defendant's constitutional right to counsel: "many indigent defendants will come to realize that the judge's offer to supply counsel is not the gratuitous offer of assistance that it might appear to be; that, in the event the case results in a grant of probation, one of the conditions might well be the reimbursement of the county for the expense involved. This knowledge is quite likely to deter or discourage many defendants from accepting the offer of counsel despite the gravity of the need for such representation. . . ." Fuller v. Oregon, 417 U.S. at 51, quoting In re Allen, 71 Cal. 2d 388, 391, 455 P.2d 143, 144, 78 Cal. Rptr. 207, 208 (1969). See also Annot., 39 A.L.R.4th 597 (1991).

designee, rather than the defender or assigned-counsel program, should be responsible for the collection of funds.<sup>6</sup>

The standard calls for advice to the person to whom an offer of counsel is made that there will be an obligation to make a contribution. This makes clear the judge's obligation not to merely offer counsel without advice as to the consequences of accepting the offer; counsel cannot be offered "without cost" to the defendant when contribution will be part of the obligation of acceptance. Defendants, moreover, appear more willing to accept the obligation when informed of it in advance, and a contribution is easier to collect than when an obligation is imposed after sentencing.

When recoupment is practiced, even though not recommended here, appropriate procedural safeguards should be created. The most significant of these safeguards, as gleaned from the cases and statutes, are:

- the right to notice of the potential obligation;
- the right to an evidentiary hearing on the imposition of costs of counsel, with an attorney present and with the opportunity to present witnesses and to have a written record of the judicial findings;
- the right to a determination of present ability to pay actual costs of counsel and related fees, such as investigative or clerical costs;
- the right to all civil judgment debtor protection;
- the right to petition for remission of fees, in the event of future inability to pay;
- notice that failure to pay will not result in imprisonment, unless willful;
- notice of a limit, statutory or otherwise, on time for the recovery of fees;
- adequate information as to the actual costs of counsel, with the right not to be assessed a fee in excess of those actual costs;
- where any of these rights are relinquished, the execution of a voluntary, knowing and intelligent written waiver, as is required in any instance concerning the constitutional right to counsel.<sup>7</sup>

6. The national study on cost recovery programs also recommends contribution over recoupment for many of the same reasons articulated here. CONTAINING THE COST OF INDIGENT DEFENSE PROGRAMS, supra, note 1, at 70, Recommendation Five.

7. See Wilson, Bad Policy, Bad Law: Compelling Indigent Defendants to Pay, 3 CRIM. JUST. 16, 19 (Fall 1988); CONTAINING THE COSTS OF INDIGENT DEFENSE PROGRAMS, supra note 1, at 71-72, Recommendation Ten.

The distinction between contribution and reimbursement is recognized by the standards of the National Advisory Commission and the National Legal Aid and Defender Association. The standards of both reject any requirement of reimbursement but state that a defendant may be required, at the time representation is provided, to make a limited financial contribution if it can be done without causing substantial hardship. The National Legal Aid and Defender Association emphasizes that "[t]he contribution should be made in a single lump sum payment immediately upon, or shortly after, the eligibility determination."<sup>8</sup>

Despite the foregoing favorable recommendations, one very practical consideration militates against the use of either reimbursement or contribution: the amounts that can be collected under such programs are negligible.<sup>9</sup> There is, after all, little to be gained from seeking collection from a legally indigent and incarcerated individual.

Standard 5-7.3. Determination of eligibility

Determination of eligibility should be made by defenders, contractors for services, assigned counsel, a neutral screening agency, or by the court. When the eligibility determination is not made by the court, confidentiality should be maintained, and the determinations should be subject to review by a court at the request of a person found to be ineligible. A questionnaire should be used to determine the nature and extent of the financial resources available for obtaining representation. If at any subsequent stage of the proceedings new information concerning eligibility becomes available, eligibility should be redetermined.

History of Standard

The changes in this standard represent a shift from the policy of the second edition's standard 5-6.3. The standard adds neutral screening agencies and courts to defender agencies as appropriate assessors of eligibility for services. The second edition limited eligibility determi-

Commentary

The vast majority of serious criminal cases begin with arrest and a period of detention following which the defendant is brought to court. Standard 5-6.1 recommends that "[c]ounsel . . . be provided to the accused as soon as feasible . . . after custody begins. . . ." Standard 5-7.3 provides maximum flexibility in the determination of eligibility by allowing the inquiry to be made by a full range of personnel or agencies. There are, however, relative advantages and disadvantages in who conducts screening.

It is often appropriate for screening to be conducted by the appointed lawyer directly. The lawyer for the accused, who has a continuing and personal interest in the client's welfare, is likely to conduct eligibility interviews in a dignified manner. Information given during the interview, if candid, may involve revelations as to the proceeds of criminal conduct. The attorney is most able to make judgments about the relationship of information given during the eligibility interview and evidence of guilt or innocence of the offense charged. The suggestion that lawyers make the eligibility determination is consistent with the private attorney model, where retained counsel normally begin by ascertaining whether the client can afford the cost of the requested legal services. In addition, when the eligibility inquiry and determination are made by the defender, assigned counsel or contractor, the attorney-client privilege protects the information disclosed to the lawyer.

If an attorney is not available, it may be appropriate to have paraprofessional personnel of the defender or assigned-counsel program conduct interviews of defendants or, alternatively, to have employees of pretrial release agencies inquire concerning eligibility. However, in a majority of jurisdictions, the inquiry is conducted by the trial court itself, usually at first appearance.<sup>1</sup> The judge is most often given the final authority to review eligibility decisions, and no particular system of screening has shown itself to have advantages over another.<sup>2</sup>

Whenever an accused is questioned about eligibility for counsel, it is suggested that the information be recorded on a questionnaire based on the guidelines recommended in standard 5-7.1. The use of a questionnaire facilitates rapid determinations of eligibility and, in the event that eligibility is denied, provides a record that can be reviewed by the trial court. An accused who seeks such review should be required to waive the attorney-client privilege respecting the financial information disclosed to the lawyer. If it is decided that the eligibility guidelines have been misapplied so as to screen out an eligible individual, the court should be permitted to order that the defender organization or assigned-counsel program provide representation.

No provision is made in this standard for a court to review a favorable determination of eligibility. As a practical matter, defenders and assigned counsel normally are interested in limiting their caseloads, rather than accepting the cases of persons financially ineligible for representation. Of course, if a private attorney or other person believed that a client was financially ineligible, a complaint could be lodged with the administrators of the defender or assigned-counsel programs, which would have the responsibility for making certain that eligibility guidelines are properly applied. If during the progress of a case new financial information comes to the attention of defenders or assigned counsel, the eligibility of the accused should be redetermined.

This standard is consistent with provisions in most state statutes that vest decisions on eligibility in the courts. Similarly, the federal Criminal Justice Act of 1964 authorizes judges to determine whether the accused is eligible for assigned counsel.<sup>3</sup> These provisions are part of an overall series of rules that place responsibility for the assignment of counsel on the courts and also empower judges to approve the amounts of compensation to be paid to assigned counsel.<sup>4</sup> In this chapter, in contrast, it is recommended that the court not play a role in the "selection of lawyers for specific cases" (standard 5-1.3(a)) and that "[c]ompensation for assigned counsel . . . be approved by administrators of assigned-counsel programs" (standard 5-2.4). ## PART VIII.

OFFER AND WAIVER

Standard 5-8.1. Providing counsel to persons in custody

(a) A person taken into custody or otherwise deprived of liberty should immediately be informed, preferably by defense counsel, of the right to legal representation. An offer of counsel should be made in words easily understood, and it should be stated expressly that one who is unable to pay for representation is entitled to counsel.

(b) Custodial authorities should provide access to a telephone, the telephone number of the defender, assigned counsel or contract for services program, and any other means necessary to establish communication with a lawyer.

(c) The defender, assigned counsel or contract for services program should ensure that information on access to counsel is provided to persons in custody. An attorney or representative from the appropriate program should be available to respond promptly to a person in custody who requests the services of counsel.

History of Standard

This is a substantial redraft of the second edition's standard 5-7.1. Revision is intended to clarify the standard's concern with nonjudicial mechanisms for provision of information to the custodial accused as to the availability of counsel. This is to be contrasted with the following section, which focuses on the provision and waiver of counsel in judicial proceedings. The title of the standard is changed to accord with the policy change, and the standard is now divided into three subsections.

Subsection (a) changes in the first sentence include the addition of the words "preferably by defense counsel" and the substitution of the more precise phrase "legal representation" for "assistance." The second sentence in the second edition was deleted as unnecessary. The third sentence now deletes the word "adequate," as has been done throughout the chapter where it appears in this context.

Subsection (b) transfers a sentence from the end of the second edition version to a new placement, while subsection (c) substitutes a new sentence which shifts the onus to the defense service provider to assure information and access to counsel.

Commentary

Standard 5-6.1 recommends that representation be provided the accused at the earliest possible time, either when "custody begins, at appearance before a committing magistrate, or when formal charges are filed, whichever occurs earliest." Standard 5-8.1 deals with important aspects of achieving early representation by counsel, that is, the party responsible for notifying the accused concerning the right to representation by counsel, where and when such notice should be given, and in what manner it should be provided.

Ordinarily, an offer of counsel should be made to the accused by a lawyer, and this should occur prior to defendant's appearance in court. The defense lawyer is in the best position to explain the advantages of having counsel and the pitfalls apt to be encountered in the absence of legal representation. Moreover, the accused is most likely to regard the defense lawyer as a person interested in protecting the accused's interests. If the offer of counsel is made by a police officer or prosecutor, it is less likely to be stated fairly and to be intelligently understood, due to the adversary relationship between the parties. The private offer of counsel through an attorney also minimizes the risk that information prejudicial to the accused will be revealed in the process.

In urban areas, where many persons are brought daily to a station-house, jail, or other central place for booking, it may be best to provide a defender or assigned counsel to make the initial offer of counsel. Alternatively, a defender program may wish to use paralegals for the function. In rural areas, the volume and frequency of arrests and factors of distance may make it impractical to adopt such a system, although it is undoubtedly possible to have the offer of counsel made by a lawyer over the telephone.

In the event the accused is not contacted and offered the assistance of counsel, he or she should at least be afforded the opportunity to request a lawyer. In order to make this possible, a telephone should be available, as should the telephone numbers of the defender program. The telephone, of course, is only one of various means by which to provide access to counsel for the custodial accused.

The offer of counsel to which this standard is addressed should not be confused with the "warning" required pursuant to Miranda v. Arizona<sup>1</sup> to render admissible in evidence statements made by the accused while in custody. Necessarily, the circumstances and terms of such a warning cannot fulfill all the requirements for an offer of counsel, and the fact that a warning valid within the meaning of Miranda has been made should not in itself be considered as fulfilling the requirement of a formal offer.

The manner in which counsel is offered to the accused has considerable impact on the decision whether to accept or reject the assistance of counsel. Decisions of the Supreme Court require that the accused be given the opportunity to make an intelligent and uncoerced choice whether to be represented by counsel.<sup>2</sup> The accused cannot make such a choice if the offer is made in language that cannot be understood or is couched in unfamiliar terms. Since, for example, the word "counsel" is an unfamiliar abstraction to many persons, the explanation should emphasize the way in which a lawyer can assist in meeting the problems faced by the accused. Similarly, the accused should be informed that provision of counsel may be accompanied by an obligation of contribution, depending on financial eligibility, so that an informed choice can be exercised.<sup>3</sup>

The other national standard that comes closest to dealing with the subject matter of standard 5-8.1 is that of the National Advisory Commission. The standard, however, does not follow ABA Standard 5-8.1 in urging that advice regarding the right to counsel be given as soon as "[a] person [is] taken into custody or otherwise deprived of liberty. . . ." The Commission states that counsel may be requested by an accused at a criminal proceeding, and that when such a request is made, "the public defender or appointed counsel should contact the accused."<sup>4</sup> This standard, too, puts the burden on the defender program to assure that information regarding counsel be given to all defendants in custody. This may be by signs prepared by the office, or by pamphlets or business cards describing the services of the office, but the best way to assure accurate information is to provide regular and prompt access to an attorney or other appropriate representative of the program.

Standard 5-8.2. In-court waiver

(a) The accused's failure to request counsel or an announced intention to plead guilty should not of itself be construed to constitute a waiver of counsel in court. An accused should not be deemed to have waived the assistance of counsel until the entire process of offering counsel has been completed before a judge and a thorough inquiry into the accused's comprehension of the offer and capacity to make the choice intelligently and understandingly has been made. No waiver of counsel should occur unless the accused understands the right and knowingly and intelligently relinquishes it. No waiver should be found to have been made where it appears that the accused is unable to make an intelligent and understanding choice because of mental condition, age, education, experience, the nature or complexity of the case, or other factors. A waiver of counsel should not be accepted unless it is in writing and of record.

(b) If an accused in a proceeding involving the possibility of incarceration has not seen a lawyer and indicates an intention to waive the assistance of counsel, a lawyer should be provided before any in-court waiver is accepted. No waiver should be accepted unless the accused has at least once conferred with a lawyer. If a waiver is accepted, the offer should be renewed at each subsequent stage of the proceedings at which the accused appears without counsel.

History of Standard

The revised standard now incorporates in a single location standards 5-7.2 and 5-7.3 from the second edition, because both standards deal with in-court provision and waiver of counsel. The two subsections of the new standard make this change by using language very similar to that of the prior standards.

Subsection (a) adds a new third sentence which defines waiver. The new last sentence is a reworded version of the first sentence of former standard 5-7.3.

Subsection (b) is a reworded version of the remainder of former standard 5-7.3. As now written, the standard better accomplishes what was desired—the provision of advice by counsel to all defendants who face the possibility of incarceration as to the consequences of waiver of counsel, prior to the in-court waiver of counsel.

The Supreme Court has held that an accused is constitutionally entitled to proceed without counsel.<sup>1</sup> Before the right to pro se representation may be claimed, however, the accused “should be made aware of the dangers and disadvantages of self-representation,"<sup>2</sup> and a waiver of counsel should not be accepted unless it is entered knowingly and intelligently.<sup>3</sup> Thus, the court should inquire whether the accused apprehends the nature of the charges, the offenses included within them, the allowable punishments, possible defenses to the charges, and circumstances in mitigation thereof, among other factors.<sup>4</sup> Since the question ultimately is the subjective understanding of the accused rather than the quality or content of the explanation provided, the court should question the accused in a manner designed to reveal that understanding, instead of framing questions that call for a simple yes or no response.<sup>5</sup> As the Supreme Court has noted: "A judge can make certain that an accused's professed waiver of counsel is understandingly and wisely made only from a penetrating and comprehensive examination of all the circumstances under which such a plea is tendered."<sup>6</sup>

It follows that the absence of a request for counsel cannot be treated as a waiver. Nor should a defendant who is without counsel be called upon to plead unless a valid waiver of legal representation has been entered.<sup>7</sup> Although a lack of legal knowledge generally will not serve as a basis for denying assertion of the right to self-representation, waivers of counsel have been held invalid where they were not intelligently or understandingly made because of factors indicating the inherent incapacity of the accused to comprehend the matter.<sup>8</sup> The requirement that waivers be reduced to writing and made a matter of record helps to assure that the issue of counsel will not be treated lightly, and also aids in minimizing postconviction disputes over the matter of waiver.

An accused who expresses a desire to proceed without counsel may sometimes fail to understand fully the assistance a lawyer can provide. Accordingly, this standard recommends that "[n]o waiver should be accepted unless the accused has at least once conferred with a lawyer." Some courts have recognized that counsel may be assigned by the court for this limited purpose.<sup>9</sup> Such a practice helps to counter the argument that any waiver of counsel by a layperson must be the result of insufficient information or knowledge.

The value and need for legal assistance may become clear to the defendant only at a stage of the proceedings subsequent to the initial offer of counsel and after a waiver has been entered. Since the occasions on which persons appear without counsel should be kept to a minimum (see standard 5-1.1), the earlier waiver of counsel should not be held to preclude the appointment of counsel at a later stage of the proceedings. Accordingly, the offer of counsel should be renewed at each stage of the case, and the defendant should be afforded the opportunity to withdraw the waiver of counsel previously entered.

Provisions in the Uniform Rules of Criminal Procedure are the most detailed of any national standards on the subject of waiver of counsel. These provide that counsel may not be deemed waived unless the relinquishment of legal representation is made "expressly and voluntarily and the court is satisfied that the defendant fully understands" a number of specific matters, including the nature of the charges, the range of penalties, and the assistance a defense attorney can render at trial, at the guilty plea stage, and at sentencing.<sup>10</sup> The Uniform Rules also provide

TEN PRINCIPLES

OF A PUBLIC DEFENSE DELIVERY SYSTEM

February 2002

Approved by American Bar Association House of Delegates, February 2002. The American Bar Association recommends that jurisdictions use these Principles to assess promptly the needs of public defense delivery systems and clearly communicate those needs to policy makers.

INTRODUCTION

The ABA Ten Principles of a Public Defense Delivery System were sponsored by the ABA Standing Committee on Legal and Indigent Defendants and approved by the ABA House of Delegates in February 2002. The Principles were created as a practical guide for governmental officials, policymakers, and other parties who are charged with creating and funding new, or improving existing, public defense delivery systems. The Principles constitute the fundamental criteria necessary to design a system that provides effective, efficient, high quality, ethical, conflict-free legal representation for criminal defendants who are unable to afford an attorney. The more extensive ABA policy statement dealing with indigent defense services is contained within the ABA Standards for Criminal Justice, Providing Defense Services (3d ed. 1992), which can be viewed on-line (black letter only) and purchased (black letter with commentary) by accessing the ABA Criminal Justice Section homepage at <http://www.abanet.org/crimjust/home.html>.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The Standing Committee on Legal Aid and Indigent Defendants is grateful to everyone assisting in the development of the ABA Ten Principles of a Public Defense Delivery System. Foremost, the Standing Committee acknowledges former member James R. Neuhard, Director of the Michigan State Appellate Defender Office, who was the first to recognize the need for clear and concise guidance on how to design an effective system for providing public defense services. In 2000, Mr. Neuhard and Scott Wallace, Director of Defender Legal Services for the National Legal Aid and Defender Association, jointly produced a paper entitled “The Ten Commandments of Public Defense Delivery Systems,” which was later included in the Introduction to Volume I of the U.S. Department of Justice’s Compendium of Standards for Indigent Defense Systems. The ABA Ten Principles of a Public Defense Delivery System are based on this work of Mr. Neuhard and Mr. Wallace.

Special thanks go to the members of the Standing Committee and its Indigent Defense Advisory Group who reviewed drafts and provided comment. Further, the Standing Committee is grateful to the ABA entities that provided invaluable support for these Principles by co-sponsoring them in the House of Delegates, including: Criminal Justice Section, Government and Public Sector Lawyers Division, Steering Committee on the Unmet Legal Needs of Children, Commission on Racial and Ethnic Diversity in the Profession, Standing Committee on Pro Bono and Public Services. We would also like to thank the ABA Commission on Homelessness and Poverty and the ABA Juvenile Justice Center for their support.

ABA TEN PRINCIPLES OF A PUBLIC DEFENSE DELIVERY SYSTEM

With Commentary

1 The public defense function, including the selection, funding, and payment of defense counsel,<sup>1</sup> is independent. The public defense function should be independent from political influence and subject to judicial supervision only in the same manner and to the same extent as retained counsel.<sup>2</sup> To safeguard independence and to promote efficiency and quality of services, a nonpartisan board should oversee defender, assigned counsel, or contract systems.<sup>3</sup> Removing oversight from the judiciary ensures judicial independence from undue political pressures and is an important means of furthering the independence of public defense.<sup>4</sup> The selection of the chief defender and staff should be made on the basis of merit, and recruitment of attorneys should involve special efforts aimed at achieving diversity in attorney staff.<sup>5</sup>

2 Where the caseload is sufficiently high,<sup>6</sup> the public defense delivery system consists of both a defender office<sup>7</sup> and the active participation of the private bar. The private bar participation may include part-time defenders, a controlled assigned counsel plan, or contracts for services.<sup>8</sup> The appointment process should never be ad hoc,<sup>9</sup> but should be according to a coordinated plan directed by a full-time administrator who is also an attorney familiar with the varied requirements of practice in the jurisdiction.<sup>10</sup> Since the responsibility to provide defense services rests with the state, there should be state funding and a statewide structure responsible for ensuring uniform quality statewide.<sup>11</sup>

3 Clients are screened for eligibility,<sup>12</sup> and defense counsel is assigned and notified of appointment, as soon as feasible after clients' arrest, detention, or request for counsel. Counsel should be furnished upon arrest, detention, or request,<sup>13</sup> and usually within 24 hours thereafter.<sup>14</sup>

4 Defense counsel is provided sufficient time and a confidential space within which to meet with the client. Counsel should interview the client as soon as practicable before the preliminary examination or the trial date.<sup>15</sup> Counsel should have confidential access to the client for the full exchange of legal, procedural, and factual information between counsel and client.<sup>16</sup> To ensure confidential communications, private meeting space should be available in jails, prisons, courthouses, and other places where defendants must confer with counsel.<sup>17</sup>

5 Defense counsel's workload is controlled to permit the rendering of quality representation. Counsel's workload, including appointed and other work, should never be so large as to interfere with the rendering of quality representation or lead to the breach of ethical obligations, and counsel is obligated to decline appointments above such levels.<sup>18</sup> National caseload standards should in no event be exceeded,<sup>19</sup> but the concept of workload (i.e., caseload adjusted by factors such as case complexity, support services, and an attorney's nonrepresentational duties) is a more accurate measurement.<sup>20</sup>

6 Defense counsel's ability, training, and experience match the complexity of the case. Counsel should never be assigned a case that counsel lacks the experience or training to handle competently, and counsel is obligated to refuse appointment if unable to provide ethical, high quality representation.<sup>21</sup>

7 The same attorney continuously represents the client until completion of the case. Often referred to as “vertical representation,” the same attorney should continuously represent the client from initial assignment through the trial and sentencing.<sup>22</sup> The attorney assigned for the direct appeal should represent the client throughout the direct appeal.

8 There is parity between defense counsel and the prosecution with respect to resources and defense counsel is included as an equal partner in the justice system. There should be parity of workload, salaries and other resources (such as benefits, technology, facilities, legal research, support staff, paralegals, investigators, and access to forensic services and experts) between prosecution and public defense.<sup>23</sup> Assigned counsel should be paid a reasonable fee in addition to actual overhead and expenses.<sup>24</sup> Contracts with private attorneys for public defense services should never be let primarily on the basis of cost; they should specify performance requirements and the anticipated workload, provide an overflow or funding mechanism for excess, unusual, or complex cases,<sup>25</sup> and separately fund expert, investigative, and other litigation support services.<sup>26</sup> No part of the justice system should be expanded or the workload increased without consideration of the impact that expansion will have on the balance and on the other components of the justice system. Public defense should participate as an equal partner in improving the justice system.<sup>27</sup> This principle assumes that the prosecutor is adequately funded and supported in all respects, so that securing parity will mean that defense counsel is able to provide quality legal representation.

9 Defense counsel is provided with and required to attend continuing legal education. Counsel and staff providing defense services should have systematic and comprehensive training appropriate to their areas of practice and at least equal to that received by prosecutors.<sup>28</sup>

10 Defense counsel is supervised and systematically reviewed for quality and efficiency according to nationally and locally adopted standards. The defender office (both professional and support staff), assigned counsel, or contract defenders should be supervised and periodically evaluated for competence and efficiency.<sup>29</sup>

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The Standing Committee on Legal Aid and Indigent Defendants is grateful to everyone who assisted in the development of the ABA Eight Guidelines of Public Defense Related to Excessive Workloads.

First and foremost, the Standing Committee thanks Professor Norman Lefstein who had the vision to recognize the need to develop the Guidelines and served as Reporter for the project. Professor Lefstein's expertise in the area of indigent defense is well known, as he previously served as Reporter for the Second Edition of ABA Criminal Justice Standards Relating to The Defense Function and Providing Defense Services. His prior publications for ABA SCLAID include Criminal Defense Services for the Poor, published in 1982, and his co-authorship of Gideon's Broken Promise: America's Continuing Quest for Equal Justice, published in 2004. Recently, he served as co-Reporter for Justice Denied: America's Continuing Neglect of Our Constitutional Right to Counsel, published in 2009 by the Constitution Project's National Right to Counsel Committee. Earlier in his career, Professor Lefstein served as director of the Public Defender Service for the District of Columbia, as an Assistant U.S. Attorney, and as a staff member in the Office of the Deputy Attorney General of the U.S. Department of Justice.

Special thanks also are owed to members of the Standing Committee and especially to its Indigent Defense Advisory Group whose members reviewed numerous drafts of the Guidelines and provided extensive comments. Also, the Committee is indebted to its talented ABA SCLAID staff, Georgia Vagenas, Assistant Counsel, who assisted all of us and made significant contributions to the Guidelines.

The Standing Committee is grateful as well to the many ABA entities that provided support for the Guidelines by co-sponsoring them in the House of Delegates, including the Criminal Justice Section; Special Committee on Death Penalty Representation; Council on Racial and Ethnic Justice; Standing Committee on Judicial Independence; General Practice, Solo, and Small Firm Division; Section of Litigation; Section of Individual Rights and Responsibilities; Government and Public Sector Lawyers Division; and American Judicature Society. Further, we thank the ABA Standing Committee on Ethics and Professional Responsibility for its review of the Guidelines and comments. The Committee also thanks the many members of the defender community throughout the country whose review of the Guidelines and thoughtful comments improved our final product. The National Legal Aid and Defender Association was instrumental in disseminating the draft Guidelines nationwide and the assistance of its leadership and staff is gratefully acknowledged.

Finally, the Standing Committee expresses its appreciation to John Terzano, President, and Joyce McGee, Executive Director, of The Justice Project, which has administered the grant that facilitated the preparation and publication of the Guidelines.

Resolution adopted by American Bar Association House of Delegates, August, 2009:

RESOLVED, That the American Bar Association adopts the black letter
(and introduction and commentary) Eight Guidelines of Public Defense
Related to Excessive Workloads, dated August 2009.

Introduction

The American Bar Association (ABA) has declared the achievement of quality representation as the objective for those who furnish defense services for persons charged in criminal and juvenile delinquency cases who cannot afford a lawyer. This goal is not achievable, however, when the lawyers providing the defense representation have too many cases, which frequently occurs throughout the United States. This was emphasized in the report of the ABA Standing Committee on Legal Aid and Indigent Defendants published in 2004, Gideon's Broken Promise: America's Continuing Quest for Equal Justice, available at www.indigentdefense.org. Additionally, in 2009, two national studies concerned with indigent defense documented the enormous caseloads of many of the lawyers who provide representation of the indigent and the crucial importance of addressing the problem.<sup>1</sup>

In 2006, the ABA Standing Committee on Ethics and Professional Responsibility issued its first ever ethics opinion concerning the obligations of lawyers, burdened with excessive caseloads, who provide indigent defense representation.<sup>2</sup> The opinion made clear that there are “no exceptions” for lawyers who represent indigent clients, i.e., all lawyers have a duty to furnish “competent” and “diligent” service, as required by rules of professional conduct.<sup>3</sup>

Although Formal Opinion 06-441 set forth some of the steps that those providing defense services should take when faced with excessive caseloads, neither the ethics opinion nor ABA Standards for Criminal Justice contain the kind of detailed action plan, set forth in these Guidelines, to which those providing public defense should adhere as they seek to comply with their professional responsibilities. Thus, Guideline 1 urges the management of public defense programs to assess whether excessive workloads are preventing their lawyers from fulfilling performance obligations; and Guidelines 2, 3, and 4 relate to the need for continuous supervision and monitoring of workloads, training of lawyers respecting their ethical duty when confronted with excessive workloads, and the need for management to determine if excessive workloads exist. Guidelines 5 through 8 address the range of options that public defense providers and their lawyers should consider when excessive workloads are present. As set forth in Guideline 6, depending upon the circumstances, it may be necessary for those providing public defense to seek redress in the courts, but other choices may be available, as suggested in Guideline 5, before this step is required.

These Guidelines are intended for the use of public defense programs and for lawyers who provide the representation, when they are confronted with too many persons to represent and are thus prevented from discharging their responsibilities under professional conduct rules. In addition, because these Guidelines contain important considerations for those responsible for indigent defense services, they should be valuable to a number of other audiences, including members of boards and commissions that oversee public defense representation, policymakers responsible for funding indigent defense, and judges who are called upon to address the caseload concerns of those who provide public defense services. Since these Guidelines relate directly to the fair, impartial, and effective administration of justice in our courts, they also should be of special interest to bar leaders, as well as to the legal profession and to the public.

ABA EIGHT GUIDELINES OF PUBLIC DEFENSE RELATED TO EXCESSIVE WORKLOADS

Black Letter

GUIDELINE 1

The Public Defense Provider avoids excessive lawyer workloads and the adverse impact that such workloads have on providing quality legal representation to all clients. In determining whether these objectives are being achieved, the Provider considers whether the performance obligations of lawyers who represent indigent clients are being fulfilled, such as:

- Whether sufficient time is devoted to interviewing and counseling clients;
- Whether prompt interviews are conducted of detained clients and of those who are released from custody;
- Whether pretrial release of incarcerated clients is sought;
- Whether representation is continuously provided by the same lawyer from initial court appearance through trial, sentencing, or dismissal;
- Whether necessary investigations are conducted;
- Whether formal and informal discovery from the prosecution is pursued;
- Whether sufficient legal research is undertaken;
- Whether sufficient preparations are made for pretrial hearings and trials; and
- Whether sufficient preparations are made for hearings at which clients are sentenced.

GUIDELINE 2

The Public Defense Provider has a supervision program that continuously monitors the workloads of its lawyers to assure that all essential tasks on behalf of clients, such as those specified in Guideline 1, are performed.

GUIDELINE 3

The Public Defense Provider trains its lawyers in the professional and ethical responsibilities of representing clients, including the duty of lawyers to inform appropriate persons within the Public Defense Provider program when they believe their workload is unreasonable.

GUIDELINE 4

Persons in Public Defense Provider programs who have management responsibilities determine, either on their own initiative or in response to workload concerns expressed by their lawyers, whether excessive lawyer workloads are present.

ABA EIGHT GUIDELINES OF PUBLIC DEFENSE RELATED TO EXCESSIVE WORKLOADS

Black Letter

GUIDELINE 5

Public Defense Providers consider taking prompt actions such as the following to avoid workloads that either are or are about to become excessive:

- Providing additional resources to assist the affected lawyers;
- Curtailing new case assignments to the affected lawyers;
- Reassigning cases to different lawyers within the defense program, with court approval, if necessary;
- Arranging for some cases to be assigned to private lawyers in return for reasonable compensation for their services;
- Urging prosecutors not to initiate criminal prosecutions when civil remedies are adequate to address conduct and public safety does not require prosecution;
- Seeking emergency resources to deal with excessive workloads or exemptions from funding reductions;
- Negotiating formal and informal arrangements with courts or other appointing authorities respecting case assignments; and
- Notifying courts or other appointing authorities that the Provider is unavailable to accept additional appointments.

GUIDELINE 6

Public Defense Providers or lawyers file motions asking a court to stop the assignment of new cases and to withdraw from current cases, as may be appropriate, when workloads are excessive and other adequate alternatives are unavailable.

GUIDELINE 7

When motions to stop the assignment of new cases and to withdraw from cases are filed, Public Defense Providers and lawyers resist judicial directions regarding the management of Public Defense Programs that improperly interfere with their professional and ethical duties in representing their clients.

GUIDELINE 8

Public Defense Providers or lawyers appeal a court's refusal to stop the assignment of new cases or a court's rejection of a motion to withdraw from cases of current clients.

Comment

These Guidelines use “Public Defense Provider” or “Provider” to refer to public defender agencies and to programs that furnish assigned lawyers and contract lawyers. The words “lawyer” and “lawyers” refer to members of the bar employed by a defender agency, and those in private practice who accept appointments to cases for a fee or provide defense representation pursuant to contracts. The ABA long ago recognized the importance of indigent defense systems including “the active and substantial participation of the private bar...” provided “through a coordinated assigned-counsel system” and also perhaps including “contracts for services.”<sup>4</sup> In addition to covering all providers of defense services, these Guidelines are intended to apply both to adult and juvenile public defense systems. The objective of furnishing “quality legal representation” is American Bar Association policy related to indigent defense services.<sup>5</sup> This goal is consistent with the ABA’s Model Rules of Professional Conduct, which require that “competent representation” be provided consisting of “the legal knowledge, skill, thoroughness and preparation reasonably necessary for the representation.”<sup>6</sup> However, if workloads are excessive, neither competent nor quality representation is possible. As stated in the ABA’s Model Rules, “[a] lawyer’s workload must be controlled so that each matter can be handled <sup>5</sup> “The objective in providing counsel should be to assure that quality legal representation is afforded to all persons eligible for counsel pursuant to this chapter.” ABA PROVIDING DEFENSE SERVICES, supra note 4, Std. 5-1.1. See also ABA TEN PRINCIPLES OF A PUBLIC DEFENSE DELIVERY SYSTEM, Principle 5 (2002)[hereinafter ABA TEN PRINCIPLES (“Defense counsel’s workload is controlled to permit the rendering of quality representation.”)].

competently.”<sup>7</sup> In addition, it has been successfully argued that an excessive number of cases create a concurrent conflict of interest, as a lawyer is forced to choose among the interests of various clients, depriving at least some, if not all clients, of competent and diligent defense services.<sup>8</sup> The responsibilities of defense lawyers are contained in performance standards<sup>9</sup> and in professional responsibility rules governing the conduct of lawyers in all cases.<sup>10</sup>

When defense lawyers fail to discharge the kinds of fundamental obligations contained in this Guideline, it is frequently because they have excessive workloads. For example, the failure of lawyers to interview clients thoroughly soon after representation begins and in advance of court proceedings, as necessary, is often due to excessive workloads.<sup>11</sup> When Public Defense Providers rely upon “horizontal” systems of representation, in which multiple lawyers represent the client at different stages of a case, and lawyers often stand in for one another at court proceedings, it is usually because there are too many cases for which the Provider is responsible.<sup>12</sup> If written motions are not filed, legal research not conducted, and legal memoranda not filed with the court, the lawyers most likely have an excessive workload. Similarly, excessive workloads may be the reason that crime scenes are not visited in cases where it might be useful to do so. Besides the performance obligations listed in Guideline 1, there are other indicia of excessive workloads, such as a lack of time for lawyers to participate in defense training programs, the need for which is addressed in Guideline 3 and the accompanying commentary.

<sup>8</sup> “When excessive caseload forces the public defender to choose between the rights of the various indigent criminal defendants he represents, a conflict of interest is inevitably created.” In Re Order on Prosecution of Criminal Appeals by the Tenth Judicial Circuit Public Defender, 561 So. 1130, 1135 (Fla. 1990). See also American Council of Chief Defenders, Nat’l Legal Aid and Defender Assoc., Ethics Opinion 03-01, at 4 (2003): “The duty to decline excess cases is based both on the prohibition against accepting cases which cannot be handled ‘competently, promptly to completion’ ... and the conflict-of-interest based requirement that a lawyer is prohibited from representing a client ‘if the representation of that client may be materially limited by the lawyer’s responsibility to another client.’” A portion of the language last quoted is from ABA MODEL RULES, supra note 3, R. 1.7 (a)(2).

<sup>9</sup> The most comprehensive and authoritative standards respecting the obligations of defense lawyers in criminal cases have been developed by the National Legal Aid and Defender Association. See PERFORMANCE GUIDELINES FOR CRIMINAL DEFENSE REPRESENTATION (4th Printing)(Nat’l Legal Aid and Defender Assoc. 2006). Important defense obligations also are contained in ABA STANDARDS FOR CRIMINAL JUSTICE, DEFENSE FUNCTION STANDARDS(3rd ed. 1993)[hereinafter ABA DEFENSE FUNCTION].

<sup>10</sup> See, e.g., ABA MODEL RULES, supra note 3, R 1.4, dealing with the obligation of lawyers to promptly and reasonably communicate with the client.

<sup>11</sup> “As soon as practicable, defense counsel should seek to determine all relevant facts known to the accused.” ABA DEFENSE FUNCTION, supra note 9, Std. 4-3.2 (a). See also ABA TEN PRINCIPLES, supra note 5, Principle 4: “Defense Counsel is provided sufficient time and confidential space within which to meet with the client.”

<sup>12</sup> “Counsel initially provided should continue to represent the defendant throughout the trial court proceedings....” ABA PROVIDING DEFENSE SERVICES, supra note 4, Std. 5-6.2. See also ABA TEN PRINCIPLES, supra note 5, Principle 7: “The same attorney continuously represents the client until completion of the case.” These ABA policy statements do not preclude one or more lawyers with special expertise providing assistance to the lawyer originally assigned to provide representation, and such practices do not necessarily reflect excessive defense workloads.

GUIDELINE 2

The Public Defense Provider has a supervision program that continuously monitors the workloads of its lawyers to assure that all essential tasks on behalf of clients, such as those specified in Guideline 1, are performed.

Comment

This Guideline is derived from the ABA Ten Principles of a Public Defense Delivery System and emphasizes the critical relationship between supervision and workloads. The ABA Ten Principles require that “workload[s]...[be] controlled” and that lawyers be “supervised and systematically reviewed for quality and efficiency according to nationally and locally adopted standards.”<sup>13</sup> “Workload,” as explained in the ABA Ten Principles, refers to “caseload adjusted by factors such as case complexity, support services, and an attorney’s nonrepresentational duties.”<sup>14</sup> The need for such oversight is just as important in programs that use assigned lawyers and contract lawyers as it is in public defender offices. When lawyers have a private practice in addition to their indigent defense representation, the extent of their private practice also must be considered in determining whether their workload is reasonable.<sup>15</sup> This applies to part-time public defenders, assigned lawyers, and contract lawyers.

The ABA endorses complete independence of the defense function, in which the judiciary is neither involved in the selection of counsel nor in their supervision.<sup>16</sup> This call for independence applies to public defender programs, as well as to indigent defense programs that furnish private assigned counsel<sup>17</sup> and legal representation through contracts.<sup>18</sup> Accordingly, the supervision called for under this Guideline is to be provided by seasoned lawyers who are experienced indigent defense practitioners and who act within a management structure that is independent of the judicial, executive and legislative branches of government.

Unless there is supervision of lawyer performance at regular intervals, reasonable workloads and quality representation are not likely to be achieved. Although variations in approach may be called for depending on the kinds of cases represented by the lawyer (e.g., misdemeanor, felony, juvenile, capital, appellate, post-conviction cases) and the lawyer’s level of experience, supervision normally requires (1) that meetings be held between an experienced lawyer supervisor and the lawyer being supervised; (2) that the work on cases represented by the supervisee be thoroughly reviewed through case reviews, mock presentations or other thorough reviews; (3) that the lawyer supervisor reviews selected files of the supervisee; (4) that selected court documents prepared by the supervisee be reviewed; (5) that periodic court observations of the supervisee’s representation of clients be conducted; and (6) that the number of cases represented by the supervisee, as well as their complexity and likely time commitments, be carefully assessed. In overseeing the work of those providing public defense services, it is important that supervisors have access to data through a management information system, which shows the lawyer's current caseload, the status of cases represented by the lawyer, and other important relevant data.<sup>19</sup>

The Public Defense Provider trains its lawyers in the professional and ethical responsibilities of representing clients, including the duty of lawyers to inform appropriate persons within the Public Defense Provider program when they believe their workload is unreasonable.

Comment

The requirement of training for lawyers who provide public defense representation is well established ABA policy.<sup>20</sup> This Guideline emphasizes a particular subject area in which Public Defense Providers have an obligation to provide training. Lawyers who provide defense services need to be aware of their ethical responsibilities to provide "competent" and "diligent" representation, as required by rules of professional conduct,<sup>21</sup> as well as performance standards that will enable them to fulfill those duties. In addition, lawyers should be instructed that they have a responsibility to inform appropriate supervisors and/or managers within the Provider program when they believe their workload is preventing or soon will prevent them from complying with professional conduct rules.<sup>22</sup> This is especially important because there is an understandable reluctance of public defense lawyers to report to those in charge that they either are not, or may not, be providing services consistent with their ethical duties and performance standards. Despite such reluctance, defense lawyers need to make regular personal assessments of their workload to determine whether it is reasonable, whether they are performing the tasks necessary in order to be competent and diligent on behalf of their clients, and whether they need to communicate concerns about their workload to their supervisor. In discussing the ABA Model Rules and their application to excessive public defense caseloads, the ABA Standing Committee on Ethics and Professional Responsibility has explained that lawyers have a duty to inform their supervisors, the heads of defense programs, and, if applicable, the governing board of the Provider when lawyers believe that they have an excessive number of cases.<sup>23</sup> Conversely, it is important that Providers not take retaliatory action against lawyers who, in good <sup>19</sup> The National Right to Counsel Committee recommends that systems of indigent defense establish "[u]niform definitions of a case and a continuous uniform case reporting system...for all criminal and juvenile cases. This system should provide continuous data that accurately contains the number of new appointments by case type, the number of new dispositions by case type, and the number of pending cases." JUSTICE DENIED, supra note 1, Recommendation 11, at 199. See also LA. REV. STAT. ANN. § 15-148 (B)(1) (Supp. 2009), which requires the state's public defender agency to establish a uniform case reporting system, including data pertaining to workload.

<sup>22</sup> The ABA Model Rules contemplate that issues respecting the discharge of professional duties will be brought to the attention of supervisors: "A subordinate lawyer does not violate the Rules of Professional Conduct if that lawyer acts in accordance with a supervisory lawyer's reasonable resolution of an arguable question of professional responsibility." ABA MODEL RULES, supra note 3, R. 5.2 (b). See also ABA Formal Op. 06-441, supra note 2, at 5-6.

<sup>23</sup> "If the supervisor fails to provide appropriate assistance or relief, the lawyer should continue to advance up the chain of command within the office until relief is obtained or the lawyer has reached and requested assistance or relief from the head of the public defender's office.... Such further action might include: if relief is not obtained from the head of the public defender's office, appealing to the governing board, if any, of the public defender's office...." faith, express concerns about their workloads.

GUIDELINE 4

Persons in Public Defense Provider programs who have management responsibilities determine, either on their own initiative or in response to workload concerns expressed by their lawyers, whether excessive lawyer workloads are present.

Comment

Public Defense Providers should learn of excessive workloads when lawyers who provide defense services communicate their concerns to management or from the system for monitoring workloads used by the Provider.<sup>24</sup> Clearly, management should take seriously concerns about case overload expressed by lawyers since those providing client representation are best able to appreciate the daily pressures of their workload yet may be reluctant to complain. Regardless of the source of concerns, it is incumbent upon management to determine whether the volume of cases, perhaps in combination with other responsibilities, is preventing lawyers from providing “competent” and “diligent” representation and a failure to discharge their responsibilities under applicable performance standards.<sup>25</sup> Depending upon the circumstances, supervisors of lawyers and heads of Provider programs are accountable under professional conduct rules when violations of ethical duties are committed by subordinate lawyers for whom they are responsible.<sup>26</sup> However, when a lawyer and supervisor disagree about whether the lawyer’s workload is excessive, the decision of the supervisor is controlling if it is a “reasonable resolution of an arguable question of professional duty.”<sup>27</sup> Where the resolution of the supervisor is not reasonable, the lawyer must take further action.<sup>28</sup>

Consistent with prior ABA policy, these Guidelines do not endorse specific numerical caseload standards, except to reiterate a statement contained in the commentary to existing principles

<sup>24</sup> Client complaints may also be an indication that representation is inadequate due to excessive workloads. See, e.g., NAT’L LEGAL AID AND DEFENDER ASSOC., GUIDELINES FOR LEGAL DEFENSE SYSTEMS IN THE UNITED STATES: REPORT OF THE NATIONAL STUDY COMMISSION ON DEFENSE SERVICES 405 (1976).

<sup>25</sup> “As an essential first step, the supervisor must monitor the workloads of subordinate lawyers to ensure that the workload of each lawyer is appropriate. This involves consideration of the type and complexity of cases being handled by each lawyer; the experience and ability of each lawyer; the resources available to support her; and any non-representational responsibilities assigned to the subordinate lawyers.” ABA Formal Op. 06-441, supra note 2, at 7. A supervisor’s assessment of the workloads of subordinate lawyers will be significantly aided if an adequate management information system is established, as noted in the Comment to Guideline 2 supra. As recognized in the ABA’s ethics opinion, the extent of support staff (e.g., investigators, social workers, and paralegals) to assist lawyers impacts the number of persons that a lawyer can represent. When adequate support personnel are lacking or if they have excessive caseloads, it is important for the Provider to seek additional personnel.

<sup>26</sup> “A lawyer shall be responsible for another lawyer’s violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct if: (1) the lawyer orders or, with knowledge of the specific conduct, ratifies the conduct involved; or (2) the lawyer is a partner or has comparable managerial authority in the law firm in which the other lawyer practices, or has direct supervisory authority over the other lawyer, and knows of the conduct at a time when its consequences can be avoided or mitigated but fails to take reasonable remedial action.” ABA MODEL RULES, supra note 3, R. 5.1 (c). “Firm” or “law firm” denotes...lawyers employed in a legal services organization or the legal department of a corporation or other organization.” Id. at R. 1.0 Terminology. Responsibility for lawyer conduct may also extend to lawyer members of governing boards of Public Defense Providers.

approved by the ABA: “National caseload standards should in no event be exceeded.”<sup>29</sup> This statement refers to numerical annual caseload limits published in a 1973 national report.<sup>30</sup> As noted by the ABA Standing Committee on Ethics and Professional Responsibility, while these standards “may be considered, they are not the sole factor in determining whether a workload is excessive. Such a determination depends not only the number of cases, but also on such factors as case complexity, the availability of support services, the lawyer’s experience and ability, and the lawyer’s nonrepresentational duties.”<sup>31</sup> Thus, while the ABA has not endorsed specific caseload numbers, except to the limited extent discussed above, the routine failure to fulfill performance obligations like those listed in Guideline 1, usually indicates that lawyers have excessive workloads.

GUIDELINE 5

Public Defense Providers consider taking prompt actions such as the following to avoid workloads that either are or are about to become excessive:

- Providing additional resources to assist the affected lawyers;
- Curtailing new case assignments to the affected lawyers;
- Reassigning cases to different lawyers within the defense program, with court approval, if necessary;
- Arranging for some cases to be assigned to private lawyers in return for reasonable compensation for their services;
- Urging prosecutors not to initiate criminal prosecutions when civil remedies are adequate to address conduct and public safety does not require prosecution;
- Seeking emergency resources to deal with excessive workloads or exemptions from funding reductions;
- Negotiating formal and informal arrangements with courts or other appointing authorities respecting case assignments; and
- Notifying courts or other appointing authorities that the Provider is unavailable to accept additional appointments.

Comment

Some of the most important ways in which a Provider may be able to reduce excessive lawyer workloads are listed in this Guideline. When workloads have been determined to be excessive, the steps suggested will be appropriate to pursue if they can be quickly achieved. However, if the steps will take a good deal of time to achieve, they will likely be appropriate to pursue only in advance of the time that workloads actually have become excessive. In other words, once workloads are determined to be excessive, a Provider must be able to achieve immediate relief; when this is not possible, the Provider must seek relief as set forth in Guideline 6.

<sup>30</sup> “In its report on the Courts, the Commission [National Advisory Commission on Criminal Justice Standards and Goals] recommended the following maximum annual caseloads for a public defender office, i.e., on average, the lawyers in the office should not exceed, per year, more than 150 felonies; 400 misdemeanors; 200 juvenile court cases; 200 mental health cases; or 25 appeals.” JUSTICE DENIED, supra note 1, at 66. As noted in JUSTICE DENIED, these caseload numbers are 35 years old, the numbers were never “empirically based,” and were intended “for a public defender’s office, not necessarily for each individual attorney in that office.” Id. In fact, the Commission warned of the “dangers of proposing any national guidelines.” Id. The American Council of Chief Defenders, a unit of the National Legal Aid and Defender Association comprised of the heads of defender programs in the United States, also has urged that the caseload numbers contained in the 1973 Commission report not be exceeded. See American Council of Chief Defenders Statement on Caseloads and Workloads, August 24, 2007. Some state and local governments have set limits on the number of cases that defense lawyers can handle on an annual basis. See infra note 37.

This Guideline is based on the assumption that judges are appointing either the Public Defense Provider or its lawyers to the cases of indigent clients. In jurisdictions in which the Provider is not appointed by judges or court representatives, but instead clients are simply referred to the defense program, the Provider is required to decline representation if acceptance would result in a violation of the rules of professional conduct.<sup>32</sup> Providers who continue to accept cases when an excessive workload is present will fail to provide competent and diligent services as required under rules of professional conduct, have an arguable conflict of interest because of the multiple clients competing for their time and attention,<sup>33</sup> and may be unable to fulfill their duties under the Sixth Amendment.<sup>34</sup>

In the more usual situation in which courts assign cases to the Public Defense Provider, the cooperation of courts may be necessary in order to implement some of the alternatives suggested in this Guideline. One of the most straightforward ways to address excessive lawyer workloads is for the Provider and judges or other officials to negotiate informal arrangements to suspend or reduce new court assignments, with the understanding that additional cases will be represented by assigned counsel, contract lawyers, or other Provider program. This may not be a feasible alternative, however, if funds are not available to compensate the lawyers.<sup>35</sup> It may also be possible to persuade a court to order, or for the funding authority to authorize, that additional resources be provided due either to the complexity of certain types of cases or to one or two particularly time-consuming cases.<sup>36</sup> Further, it may be possible to arrange through either contract or legislation a limit on the number and types of cases annually assigned to lawyers.<sup>37</sup>

<sup>32</sup> “Except as stated in paragraph (c) [where a court orders counsel to proceed with representation], a lawyer shall not represent a client or, where representation has commenced, shall withdraw from the representation of a client if the representation will result in violation of the rules of professional conduct or other law.” ABA MODEL RULES, supra note 3, R. 1.16 (a)(1).

<sup>35</sup> “[A]ttorneys in several states have successfully argued that a state’s refusal to provide adequate compensation amounts to a taking of property under federal or state constitutions, and just compensation must therefore be paid. There appear to be no recent decisions of state appellate courts requiring that lawyers provide pro bono service in indigent criminal and juvenile cases.” JUSTICE DENIED, supra note 1, at 104-05. The ABA has recognized that “[g]overnment has the responsibility to fund the full cost of quality legal representation for all eligible persons....” ABA PROVIDING DEFENSE SERVICES, supra note 4, Std. 5-1.6.

<sup>36</sup> For example, pursuant to a motion of The Defender Association in Seattle, Washington, a trial court ordered increased “attorney fees and paralegal fees and investigation fees to the levels requested...[as] necessary to provide effective assistance of counsel.” See In the Detention of Kevin Ambers, et al., Superior Court of Washington for King County, Order Granting Respondent’s Motion for Increased Payment for Respondent’s Counsel on above Consolidated Cases, January 20, 2006, available at <http://www.defender.org/files/archive/judgelauorderjan202006.pdf>.

<sup>37</sup> The New Hampshire Public Defender, a nonprofit organization that provides defense services, enters into a contract with the state’s Judicial Council that contains caseload limitations and requires the defender program to notify the courts if caseloads are too high so that private lawyers can be appointed. See JUSTICE DENIED, supra note 1, at 168. In Seattle, the City Council has enacted an ordinance that imposes a ceiling on the number of cases to which lawyers may be assigned annually. The ordinance can be accessed on the website of The Defender Association serving Seattle and King County, Washington. See <http://www.defender.org/node/18>. In Massachusetts, legislation authorizes the Committee on Public Counsel Services to establish “standards” that contain “caseload limitation levels” both for private assigned lawyers and public defenders. See MASS. G. L., Chapter 211D, § 9 (c) (2009).

In some jurisdictions where courts appoint counsel, it may nevertheless be possible for the Provider simply to notify judges or other officials that lawyers from the defense program are unavailable to accept appointments in all or certain categories of cases for a specified period of time or until further notice. A declaration of “unavailability” has sometimes been used successfully, such as in some counties in California. This approach is seemingly based on the implicit premise that governments, which establish and fund providers of public defense, never intended that the lawyers who furnish the representation would be asked to do so if it meant violating their ethical duties pursuant to professional conduct rules. On the other hand, some Providers may conclude that this approach is either not contemplated by the jurisdiction’s statutes<sup>38</sup> or is otherwise deemed inappropriate.

In addition to the options listed in this Guideline for dealing with excessive caseloads, there may be other ways in which Public Defense Providers can seek to achieve caseload reductions. For example, two national studies issued in 2009 recommended that legislatures consider reclassifying certain offenses as civil infractions so that the need to provide lawyers is removed, assuming there are not adverse public safety consequences.<sup>39</sup> However, if this course is followed, it is important that the possible adverse collateral consequences resulting from a conviction be carefully considered along with any new legislation since a defense lawyer will not be available to counsel the person.<sup>40</sup> Another alternative that can serve to reduce public defense caseloads is for cases to be diverted from the criminal justice system during the pretrial stage. Depending on the jurisdiction, implementation will require legislation, a change in court rules, or approval of prosecutors.<sup>41</sup>

When a Provider cannot reduce excessive lawyer workloads, a motion filed with the court, aimed at stopping case assignments and/or permitting lawyers to withdraw from cases (see Guideline 6 infra), or conceivably the filing of a separate civil action, will be necessary. Regardless of the type of litigation pursued, it is almost certain to be time-consuming, labor intensive, and the results not easily predicted. In addition, speedy resolution of the matter may prove elusive. If a trial court decision is adverse to the Provider, an appeal may be required. If the Provider is successful in the trial court, the state may appeal. Moreover, the trial court may simply fail to render a prompt decision in the matter. Accordingly, every effort should be made to resolve excessive workloads without resort to litigation, which is why the options specified in Guideline 5 are so important.

<sup>38</sup> Consider, for example, the law in Colorado pertaining to the Colorado State Public Defender: “The state public defender shall represent as counsel...each indigent person who is under arrest for or charged with committing a felony.” COLO. REV. STAT. § 21-1-103 (2004); “Case overload, lack of resources, and other similar circumstances shall not constitute a conflict of interest.” Id. at § 21-2-103. This statute is contrary to rules of professional conduct governing lawyers and with these Guidelines.

<sup>39</sup> The National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers has urged that “[o]ffenses that do not involve a significant risk to public safety...be decriminalized” and cites successful examples where this has occurred. See MINOR CRIMES, supra note 1, at 27-8. Similarly, the National Right to Counsel Committee has suggested that “certain non-serious misdemeanors...be reclassified, thereby reducing financial and other pressures on a state’s indigent defense system,” and also notes examples where this has taken place. See JUSTICE DENIED, supra note 1, at 198.

GUIDELINE 6

Public Defense Providers or lawyers file motions asking a court to stop the assignment of new cases and to withdraw from current cases, as may be appropriate, when workloads are excessive and other adequate alternatives are unavailable.

Comment

When alternative options for dealing with excessive workloads, such as those listed in Guideline 5, are exhausted, insufficient, or unavailable, the Public Defense Provider is obligated to seek relief from the court. Thus, a court should be asked to stop additional assignments in all or certain types of cases and, if necessary, that lawyers be permitted to withdraw from representation in certain cases. Continued representation in the face of excessive workloads imposes a mandatory duty to take corrective action in order to avoid furnishing legal services in violation of professional conduct rules.<sup>42</sup> If representation is furnished pursuant to court appointment, withdrawal from representation usually requires judicial approval.<sup>43</sup> Because lawyers have as their primary obligation the responsibility to represent the interests of current clients, withdrawals from representation is less preferable than seeking to halt the assignment of new appointments.<sup>44</sup> Normally, Providers, rather than individual lawyers, will take the initiative and move to suspend new case assignments and, if necessary, move to withdraw from cases since the Provider has the responsibility to monitor lawyer workloads (Guideline 1), determine whether workloads are excessive (Guideline 4), and explore options other than litigation (Guideline 5). If the Public Defense Provider has complied with Guidelines 1 through 4, it should be in an especially strong position to show that its workload is excessive, and its representations regarding workloads should be accepted by the court.<sup>45</sup> Nevertheless, in making its motion to the court, the Provider may deem it advisable to present statistical data, anecdotal information, as well as other kinds of evidence.<sup>46</sup> The Provider also may want to enlist the help of a private law firm with expertise in civil litigation that is willing to provide representation on a pro bono basis. There are notable examples in which private firms have volunteered their time and been extremely helpful to Providers in litigating issues related to excessive workloads.<sup>47</sup> As discussed earlier, an individual lawyer is obliged to take action when there is disagreement with those in charge of the Provider about whether the lawyer has an excessive workload and the lawyer concludes that Provider officials have made an unreasonable decision respecting the matter.<sup>48</sup>

<sup>42</sup> See ABA MODEL RULES, supra note 3, R. 1.16 (a)(1), quoted in note 32 supra. See also discussion in Comment to Guideline 1 supra. It may also be appropriate to include in a motion to withdraw a request that charges against one or more clients be dismissed due to the failure of the government to provide effective assistance of counsel as required by federal and state law.

<sup>47</sup> The following observation, offered in discussing the role of volunteer lawyers in litigating systemic challenges to indigent defense systems, is also applicable to litigating motions to withdraw and/or to halt additional appointments: “[E]xternal counsel affiliated with law firms, bar associations, or public interest organizations who are willing to provide pro bono representation can make significant contributions. Besides possessing the necessary experience, they are likely to have more time, personnel, and resources than do public defenders to devote to a major systemic challenge. They also are used to conducting extensive discovery, preparing exhibits, and may have funds to retain necessary experts.” Id. at 143.

GUIDELINE 7

When motions to stop the assignment of new cases and to withdraw from cases are filed, Public Defense Providers and lawyers resist judicial directions regarding the management of Public Defense Programs that improperly interfere with their professional and ethical duties in representing their clients.

Comment

The concern that underlies this Guideline relates to the risk that judges confronted with motions to halt the assignment of new cases or to permit lawyers to withdraw from cases will delve inappropriately into the internal operations of Public Defense Providers. While it is appropriate for judges to review motions asking that assignments be stopped and withdrawals from cases permitted, courts should not undertake to micro-manage the operations of defense programs.<sup>49</sup>

When Providers file motions requesting that assignments be stopped and that withdrawals be permitted, their prayer for relief should be accorded substantial deference because Providers are in the best position to assess the workloads of their lawyers. As the ABA has noted, “[o]nly the lawyers themselves know how much must be done to represent their clients and how much time the preparation is likely to take.”<sup>50</sup> In discussing a defense lawyer’s claim of conflict of interest in representing co-defendants, the Supreme Court has noted that “attorneys are officers of the court, and ‘when they address the judge solemnly upon a matter before the court, their declarations are virtually made under oath.’”<sup>51</sup> In an accompanying footnote, the Court further declared: “When a considered representation regarding a conflict of interest comes from an officer of the court, it should be given the weight commensurate with the grave penalties risked for misrepresentation.”<sup>52</sup>

2006); and ABA Formal Op. 06-441, supra note 2, at 1, 4-6. In 2009, a California appellate court endorsed the approach of the ABA’s ethics opinion: “Under the ABA opinion, a deputy public defender whose excessive workload obstructs his or her ability to provide effective assistance to a particular client should, with supervisory approval, attempt to reduce the caseload, as by transferring cases to another lawyer with a lesser caseload. If the deputy public defender is unable to obtain relief in that manner, the ABA opinion provides that he or she must ‘file a motion with the trial court requesting permission to withdraw from a sufficient number of cases to allow the provision of competent and diligent representation to the remaining clients.’... The conduct prescribed by the ABA Opinion, which is fully consistent with the California Rules of Professional Conduct, may also be statutorily mandated.” In re Edward S., 173 Cal. App. 4th 387, 413, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 725, 746 (Cal. App. 1st Dist. 2009). This decision cites with approval an earlier California decision, Ligda v. Superior Court, 85 Cal. Rptr. 744, 754 (Cal. Ct. App. 1970) (“[w]hen a public defender reels under a staggering workload, he ... should proceed to place the situation before the judge, who upon a satisfactory showing can relieve him, and order the employment of private counsel at public expense.”).

<sup>49</sup> “We acknowledge the public defender’s argument that the courts should not involve themselves in the management of public defender offices.” In re Certification of Conflict in Motions to Withdraw, 636 So.2d 18, 21-22 (Fla. 1994).

<sup>52</sup> Id., at n. 9. Judges should be especially understanding of the representations of Providers given that the “judiciary plays a central in preserving the principles of justice and the rule of law.” ABA CODE OF JUDICIAL CONDUCT, Preamble (2007). Similarly, prosecutors have a duty “to seek justice ... [and] to reform and improve the administration of criminal justice.” ABA STANDARDS FOR CRIMINAL JUSTICE: PROSECUTION FUNCTION STANDARDS, Std.3-1.2 (c), (d) (3rd ed., 1993). However, when a Provider seeks relief in court from an excessive workload, the prosecutor seemingly has a conflict of interest in opposing the Provider’s motion. Not only do the decisions of prosecutors in filing charges against persons directly impact the caseloads of Providers, but the

The ABA has recognized that the judiciary needs to ensure that Providers and their lawyers are not forced to accept unreasonable numbers of cases: “Courts should not require individuals or programs to accept caseloads that will lead to the furnishing of representation lacking in quality or to the breach of professional obligations.”<sup>53</sup> This Guideline is a corollary to the well accepted proposition that defense services should be independent of the judicial and executive branches of government.<sup>54</sup> Thus, an ABA standard recommends that “[t]he selection of lawyers for specific cases should not be made by the judiciary or elected officials...”<sup>55</sup> This same standard also urges that the plan for legal representation “guarantee the integrity of the relationship between lawyer and client.”<sup>56</sup>

GUIDELINE 8

Public Defense Providers or lawyers appeal a court’s refusal to stop the assignment of new cases or a court’s rejection of a motion to withdraw from cases of current clients.

Comment

The ABA Standing Committee on Ethics and Professional Responsibility has indicated that a trial court’s denial of motions to halt appointments or to withdraw from pending cases should be appealed, if possible.<sup>57</sup> An appeal or an application for a writ of mandamus or prohibition should properly be regarded as a requirement of “diligence” under professional conduct rules.<sup>58</sup> However, if a defense motion is rejected and an appeal is not permitted, the Public Defense Provider usually has no choice except to continue to provide representation.<sup>59</sup> Similarly, if the motion for relief is granted but implementation of the order is stayed pending appeal, the likelihood of successful prosecutions are enhanced if Providers are burdened with excessive caseloads. The adversary system is premised on the assumption that justice is best served when both sides in litigation are adequately funded and have sufficient time to prepare their respective cases.

<sup>53</sup> ABA PROVIDING DEFENSE SERVICES, supra note 4, Std. 5-5.3 (b). Sometimes the problem is not the number of cases, but the pressure placed on defense lawyers to proceed when they have not had sufficient time to prepare. In an Ohio case, a public defender was prepared to represent his client, but asked for a continuance before proceeding to trial because he had just been appointed earlier the same day and lacked sufficient time to interview witnesses. The trial court denied the public defender’s request for a continuance and held the lawyer in contempt because of his refusal to proceed to trial. In reversing the contempt finding, the appellate court concluded that the trial judge had “improperly placed an administrative objective of controlling the court’s docket above its supervisory imperative of facilitating effective, prepared representation at trial.” State v. Jones, 2008 WL 5428009, at *5 (Ohio App. 2008).

<sup>54</sup> “The legal representation plan for the jurisdiction should be designed to guarantee the integrity of the relationship between lawyer and client. The plan and the lawyers serving under it should be...subject to judicial supervision only in the same manner and to the same extent as are lawyers in private practice. The selection of lawyers for specific cases should not be made by the judiciary...” ABA PROVIDING DEFENSE SERVICES, supra note 4, at Std. 5-1.3 (a).

<sup>57</sup> “If the court denies the lawyer’s motion to withdraw, and any available means of appealing such ruling is unsuccessful, the lawyer must continue with the representation while taking whatever steps are feasible to ensure that she will be able to competently and diligently represent the defendant.” ABA Formal Op. 06-441, supra note 2, at 1.

<sup>58</sup> “A lawyer should pursue a matter on behalf of a client...and take whatever lawful and ethical measures are required to vindicate a client’s cause or endeavor. A lawyer must also act with zeal in advocacy upon the client’s behalf.” ABA MODEL RULES, supra note 3, R. 1.3, cmt. 1.

<sup>59</sup> “When ordered to do so, by a tribunal, a lawyer shall continue representation notwithstanding good cause for terminating the representation.” Id., R. 1.16 (C). See also supra note 32.

Provider will likely have to continue to provide representation.<sup>60</sup> This places the Provider in an extremely awkward situation since on the one hand those in charge of the defense program have made it clear that, in their professional judgment, caseloads are excessive and the lawyers providing direct client services are being forced to violate their ethical responsibilities, yet relief is unavailable. Accordingly, the Provider should continue to explore non-litigation alternatives (see Guideline 5) while requiring the Provider's lawyers to make a record in their cases, if appropriate, about the lawyers' inability, due to excessive caseloads, to furnish "competent" and "diligent" representation as required by professional conduct rules. The Public Defense Provider should also continue to seek public support from bar associations, community groups, and the media.<sup>61</sup>

<sup>60</sup>However, the Provider or lawyer also will likely want to proceed expeditiously in the appellate court to strike the stay or modify the order pending appeal.

<sup>61</sup>"Theoretically, when judges resolve court cases concerning indigent defense reform, it should be irrelevant whether the litigation is covered by print and other news media. Nor should it matter whether prominent persons in the state or community speak publicly in favor of necessary changes in the delivery of indigent defense services. However, the reality is that news reports about problems in indigent defense and strong public support for improvements may make a difference not only when legislatures consider new laws, but also when courts decide difficult cases." Criminal Justice Section Standards

Defense Function

DEFENSE FUNCTION

PART I.

GENERAL STANDARDS

Standard 4- 1.1 The Function of the Standards

These standards are intended to be used as a guide to professional conduct and performance. They are not intended to be used as criteria for the judicial evaluation of alleged misconduct of defense counsel to determine the validity of a conviction. They may or may not be relevant in such judicial evaluation, depending upon all the circumstances.

Return to this Standard's Table of Contents   Ordering Information   Return to Listing of Standards

Standard 4- 1.2 The Function of Defense Counsel

(a) Counsel for the accused is an essential component of the administration of criminal justice. A court properly constituted to hear a criminal case must be viewed as a tripartite entity consisting of the judge (and jury, where appropriate), counsel for the prosecution, and counsel for the accused.

(b) The basic duty defense counsel owes to the administration of justice and as an officer of the court is to serve as the accused's counselor and advocate with courage and devotion and to render effective, quality representation.

(c) Since the death penalty differs from other criminal penalties in its finality, defense counsel in a capital case should respond to this difference by making extraordinary efforts on behalf of the accused. Defense counsel should comply with the ABA Guidelines for the Appointment and Performance of Counsel in Death Penalty Cases.

(d) Defense counsel should seek to reform and improve the administration of criminal justice. When inadequacies or injustices in the substantive or procedural law come to defense counsel's attention, he or she should stimulate efforts for remedial action.

(e) Defense counsel, in common with all members of the bar, is subject to standards of conduct stated in statutes, rules, decisions of courts, and codes, canons, or other standards of professional conduct. Defense counsel has no duty to execute any directive of the accused which does not comport with law or such standards. Defense counsel is the professional representative of the accused, not the accused's alter ego.

(f) Defense counsel should not intentionally misrepresent matters of fact or law to the court.

(g) Defense counsel should disclose to the tribunal legal authority in the controlling jurisdiction known to defense counsel to be directly adverse to the position of the accused and not disclosed by the prosecutor.

(h) It is the duty of defense counsel to know and be guided by the standards of professional conduct as defined in codes and canons of the legal profession applicable in defense counsel's jurisdiction. Once representation has been undertaken, the functions and duties of defense counsel are the same whether defense counsel is assigned, privately retained, or serving in a legal aid or defender program.

Standard 4- 1.3   Delays; Punctuality; Workload

(a) Defense counsel should act with reasonable diligence and promptness in representing a client.

(b) Defense counsel should avoid unnecessary delay in the disposition of cases. Defense counsel should be punctual in attendance upon court and in the submission of all motions, briefs, and other papers. Defense counsel should emphasize to the client and all witnesses the importance of punctuality in attendance in court.

(c) Defense counsel should not intentionally misrepresent facts or otherwise mislead the court in order to obtain a continuance.

(d) Defense counsel should not intentionally use procedural devices for delay for which there is no legitimate basis.

(e) Defense counsel should not carry a workload that, by reason of its excessive size, interferes with the rendering of quality representation, endangers the client's interest in the speedy disposition of charges, or may lead to the breach of professional obligations. Defense counsel should not accept employment for the purpose of delaying trial.

Standard 4- 1.4   Public Statements

Defense counsel should not make or authorize the making of an extrajudicial statement that a reasonable person would expect to be disseminated by means of public communication if defense counsel knows or reasonably should know that it will have a substantial likelihood of prejudicing a criminal proceeding.

Standard 4- 1.5   Advisory Councils on Professional Conduct

(a) In every jurisdiction, an advisory body of lawyers selected for their experience, integrity, and standing at the trial bar should be established as an advisory council on problems of professional conduct in criminal cases. This council should provide prompt and confidential guidance and advice to lawyers seeking assistance in the application of standards of professional conduct in criminal cases.

(b) Communications between an inquiring lawyer and an advisory council member have the same attorney-client privilege for protection of the client's confidences as ordinarily exists between any other lawyer and client. The council member should be bound by statute or rule of court in the same manner as a lawyer is ordinarily bound in that jurisdiction not to reveal any disclosure of the client. Confidences may also be revealed, however, to the extent necessary:

(i) if the inquiring lawyer's client challenges the effectiveness of the lawyer's conduct of the case and the lawyer relies on the guidance received from the council member, or

(ii) if the inquiring lawyer's conduct is called into question in an authoritative disciplinary inquiry or proceeding.

Standard 4- 1.6   Trial Lawyer's Duty to Administration of Justice

(a) The bar should encourage through every available means the widest possible participation in the defense of criminal cases by lawyers. Lawyers should be encouraged to qualify themselves for participation in criminal cases both by formal training and through experience as associate counsel.

(b) All such qualified lawyers should stand ready to undertake the defense of an accused regardless of public hostility toward the accused or personal distaste for the offense charged or the person of the defendant.

(c) Such qualified lawyers should not assert or announce a general unwillingness to appear in criminal cases. Law firms should encourage partners and associates to become qualified and to appear in criminal cases.

(d) Such qualified lawyers should not seek to avoid appointment by a tribunal to represent an accused except for good cause, such as: representing the accused is likely to result in violation of applicable ethical codes or other law, representing the accused is likely to result in an unreasonable financial burden on the lawyer, or the client or crime is so repugnant to the lawyer as to be likely to impair the client-lawyer relationship or the lawyer's ability to represent the client.

PART II.

ACCESS TO COUNSEL

Standard 4- Standard 4-2.1 Communication

Every jurisdiction should guarantee by statute or rule of court the right of an accused person to prompt and effective communication with a lawyer and should require that reasonable access to a telephone or other facilities be provided for that purpose.

Standard 4- 2.2 Referral Service for Criminal Cases

(a) To assist persons who wish to retain defense counsel privately and who do not know a lawyer or how to engage one, every jurisdiction should have a referral service for criminal cases. The referral service should maintain a list of defense counsel willing and qualified to undertake the defense of a criminal case; it should be so organized that it can provide prompt service at all times.

(b) The availability of the referral service should be publicized. In addition, notices containing the essential information about the referral service and how to contact it should be posted conspicuously in police stations, jails, and wherever else it is likely to give effective notice.

Return to this Standard's Table of Contents   Ordering Information   Return to Listing of Standards

Standard 4- 2.3 Prohibited Referrals

(a) Defense counsel should not give anything of value to a person for recommending the lawyer's services.

(b) Defense counsel should not accept a referral from any source, including prosecutors, law enforcement personnel, victims, bondsmen, or court personnel where the acceptance of such a referral is likely to create a conflict of interest.

Return to this Standard's Table of Contents   Ordering Information   Return to Listing of Standards

PART III.

LAWYER-CLIENT RELATIONSHIP

Standard 4- 3.1 Establishment of Relationship

(a) Defense counsel should seek to establish a relationship of trust and confidence with the accused and should discuss the objectives of the representation and whether defense counsel will continue to represent the accused if there is an appeal. Defense counsel should explain the necessity of full disclosure of all facts known to the client for an effective defense, and defense counsel should explain the extent to which counsel's obligation of confidentiality makes privileged the accused's disclosures.

(b) To ensure the privacy essential for confidential communication between defense counsel and client, adequate facilities should be available for private discussions between counsel and accused in jails, prisons, courthouses, and other places where accused persons must confer with counsel.

(c) Personnel of jails, prisons, and custodial institutions should be prohibited by law or administrative regulations from examining or otherwise interfering with any communication or correspondence between client and defense counsel relating to legal action arising out of charges or incarceration.

Standard 4- 3.2 Interviewing the Client

(a) As soon as practicable, defense counsel should seek to determine all relevant facts known to the accused. In so doing, defense counsel should probe for all legally relevant information without seeking to influence the direction of the client's responses.

(b) Defense counsel should not instruct the client or intimate to the client in any way that the client should not be candid in revealing facts so as to afford defense counsel free rein to take action which would be precluded by counsel's knowing of such facts.

Return to this Standard's Table of Contents   Ordering Information   Return to Listing of Standards

Standard 4- 3.3 Fees

(a) Defense counsel should not enter into an agreement for, charge, or collect an illegal or unreasonable fee.

(b) In determining the amount of the fee in a criminal case, it is proper to consider the time and effort required, the responsibility assumed by counsel, the novelty and difficulty of the questions involved, the skill requisite to proper representation, the likelihood that other employment will be precluded, the fee customarily charged in the locality for similar services, the gravity of the charge, the experience, reputation, and ability of defense counsel, and the capacity of the client to pay the fee.

(c) Defense counsel should not imply that his or her compensation is for anything other than professional services rendered by defense counsel or by others for defense counsel.

(d) Defense counsel should not divide a fee with a nonlawyer, except as permitted by applicable ethical codes of conflict.

(e) Defense counsel not in the same firm should not divide fees unless the division is in proportion to the services performed by each counsel or, by written agreement with the client, each counsel assumes joint responsibility for the representation, the client is advised of and does not object to the participation of all counsel involved, and the total fee is reasonable.

(f) Defense counsel should not enter into an arrangement for, charge, or collect a contingent fee for representing a defendant in a criminal case.

(g) When defense counsel has not regularly represented the client, defense counsel should communicate the basis or rate of the fee to the client, preferably in writing, before or within a reasonable time after commencing the representation.

Standard 4- 3.4 Obtaining Literary or Media Rights from the Accused

Defense counsel, prior to conclusion of all aspects of the matter giving rise to his or her employment, should not enter into any agreement or understanding with a client or a prospective client by which defense counsel acquires an interest in literary or media rights to a portrayal or account based in substantial part on information relating to the employment or proposed employment.

Return to this Standard's Table of Contents   Ordering Information   Return to Listing of Standards

Standard 4- 3.5 Conflicts of Interest

(a) Defense counsel should not permit his or her professional judgment or obligations to be affected by his or her own political, financial, business, property, or personal interests.

(b) Defense counsel should disclose to the defendant at the earliest feasible opportunity any interest in or connection with the case or any other matter that might be relevant to the defendant's selection of counsel to represent him or her or counsel's continuing representation. Such disclosure should include communication of information reasonably sufficient to permit the client to appreciate the significance of any conflict or potential conflict of interest.

(c) Except for preliminary matters such as initial hearings or applications for bail, defense counsel who are associated in practice should not undertake to defend more than one defendant in the same criminal case if the duty to one of the defendants may conflict with the duty to another. The potential for conflict of interest in representing multiple defendants is so grave that ordinarily defense counsel should decline to act for more than one of several codefendants except in unusual situations when, after careful investigation, it is clear either that no conflict is likely to develop at trial, sentencing, or at any other time in the proceeding or that common representation will be advantageous to each of the codefendants represented and, in either case, that:

(i) the several defendants give an informed consent to such multiple representation; and

(ii) the consent of the defendants is made a matter of judicial record. In determining the presence of consent by the defendants, the trial judge should make appropriate inquiries respecting actual or potential conflicts of interest of counsel and whether the defendants fully comprehend the difficulties that defense counsel sometimes encounters in defending multiple clients.

(d) Defense counsel who has formerly represented a defendant should not thereafter use information related to the former representation to the disadvantage of the former client unless the information has become generally known or the ethical obligation of confidentiality otherwise does not apply.

(e) In accepting payment of fees by one person for the defense of another, defense counsel should be careful to determine that he or she will not be confronted with a conflict of loyalty since defense counsel's entire loyalty is due the accused. Defense counsel should not accept such compensation unless:

(i) the accused consents after disclosure;

(ii) there is no interference with defense counsel's independence of professional judgment or with the client-lawyer relationship; and

(iii) information relating to the representation of the accused is protected from disclosure as required by defense counsel's ethical obligation of confidentiality.

Defense counsel should not permit a person who recommends, employs, or pays defense counsel to render legal services for another to direct or regulate counsel's professional judgment in rendering such legal services.

(f) Defense counsel should not defend a criminal case in which counsel's partner or other professional associate is or has been the prosecutor in the same case.

(g) Defense counsel should not represent a criminal defendant in a jurisdiction in which he or she is also a prosecutor.

(h) Defense counsel who formerly participated personally and substantially in the prosecution of a defendant should not thereafter represent any person in the same or a substantially related matter. Defense counsel who was formerly a prosecutor should not use confidential information about a person acquired when defense counsel was a prosecutor in the representation of a client whose interests are adverse to that person in a matter.

(i) Defense counsel who is related to a prosecutor as parent, child, sibling or spouse should not represent a client in a criminal matter where defense counsel knows the government is represented in the matter by such a prosecutor. Nor should defense counsel who has a significant personal or financial relationship with a prosecutor represent a client in a criminal matter where defense counsel knows the government is represented in the matter by such prosecutor, except upon consent by the client after consultation regarding the relationship.

(j) Defense counsel should not act as surety on a bond either for the accused represented by counsel or for any other accused in the same or a related case.

(k) Except as law may otherwise expressly permit, defense counsel should not negotiate to employ any person who is significantly involved as an attorney or employee of the government in a matter in which defense counsel is participating personally and substantially.

Standard 4- 3.6 Prompt Action to Protect the Accused

Many important rights of the accused can be protected and preserved only by prompt legal action. Defense counsel should inform the accused of his or her rights at the earliest opportunity and take all necessary action to vindicate such rights. Defense counsel should consider all procedural steps which in good faith may be taken, including, for example, motions seeking pretrial release of the accused, obtaining psychiatric examination of the accused when a need appears, moving for change of venue or continuance, moving to suppress illegally obtained evidence, moving for severance from jointly charged defendants, and seeking dismissal of the charges.

Standard 4- 3.7 Advice and Service on Anticipated Unlawful Conduct

(a) It is defense counsel's duty to advise a client to comply with the law, but counsel may advise concerning the meaning, scope, and validity of a law.

(b) Defense counsel should not counsel a client in or knowingly assist a client to engage in conduct which defense counsel knows to be illegal or fraudulent but defense counsel may discuss the legal consequences of any proposed course of conduct with a client.

(c) Defense counsel should not agree in advance of the commission of a crime that he or she will serve as counsel for the defendant, except as part of a bona fide effort to determine the validity, scope, meaning, or application of the law, or where the defense is incident to a general retainer for legal services to a person or enterprise engaged in legitimate activity.

(d) Defense counsel should not reveal information relating to representation of a client unless the client consents after consultation, except for disclosures that are impliedly authorized in order to carry out the representation and except that defense counsel may reveal such information to the extent he or she reasonably believes necessary to prevent the client from committing a criminal act that defense counsel believes is likely to result in imminent death or substantial bodily harm.

Standard 4- 3.8 Duty to Keep Client Informed

(a) Defense counsel should keep the client informed of the developments in the case and the progress of preparing the defense and should promptly comply with reasonable requests for information.

(b) Defense counsel should explain developments in the case to the extent reasonably necessary to permit the client to make informed decisions regarding the representation.

Return to this Standard's Table of Contents   Ordering Information   Return to Listing of Standards

Standard 4- 3.9 Obligations of Hybrid and Standby Counsel

(a) Defense counsel whose duty is to actively assist a pro se accused should permit the accused to make the final decisions on all matters, including strategic and tactical matters relating to the conduct of the case.

(b) Defense counsel whose duty is to assist a pro se accused only when the accused requests assistance may bring to the attention of the accused matters beneficial to him or her, but should not actively participate in the conduct of the defense unless requested by the accused or insofar as directed to do so by the court.

PART IV.

INVESTIGATION AND PREPARATION

Standard 4- 4.1 Duty to Investigate

(a) Defense counsel should conduct a prompt investigation of the circumstances of the case and explore all avenues leading to facts relevant to the merits of the case and the penalty in the event of conviction. The investigation should include efforts to secure information in the possession of the prosecution and law enforcement authorities. The duty to investigate exists regardless of the accused's admissions or statements to defense counsel of facts constituting guilt or the accused's stated desire to plead guilty.

(b) Defense counsel should not seek to acquire possession of physical evidence personally or through use of an investigator where defense counsel's sole purpose is to obstruct access to such evidence.

Return to this Standard's Table of Contents   Ordering Information   Return to Listing of Standards

Standard 4- 4.2 Illegal Investigation

Defense counsel should not knowingly use illegal means to obtain evidence or information or to employ, instruct, or encourage others to do so.

Return to this Standard's Table of Contents   Ordering Information   Return to Listing of Standards

Standard 4- 4.3 Relations With Prospective Witnesses

(a) Defense counsel, in representing an accused, should not use means that have no substantial purpose other than to embarrass, delay, or burden a third person, or use methods of obtaining evidence that violate the legal rights of such a person.

(b) Defense counsel should not compensate a witness, other than an expert, for giving testimony, but it is not improper to reimburse a witness for the reasonable expenses of attendance upon court, including transportation and loss of income, attendance for depositions pursuant to statute or court rule, or attendance for pretrial interviews, provided there is no attempt to conceal the fact of reimbursement.

(c) It is not necessary for defense counsel or defense counsel's investigator, in interviewing a prospective witness, to caution the witness concerning possible self-incrimination and the need for counsel.

(d) Defense counsel should not discourage or obstruct communication between prospective witnesses and the prosecutor. It is unprofessional conduct to advise any person other than a client, or cause such person to be advised, to decline to give to the prosecutor or defense counsel for codefendants information which such person has a right to give.

(e) Unless defense counsel is prepared to forgo impeachment of a witness by counsel's own testimony as to what the witness stated in an interview or to seek leave to withdraw from the case in order to present such impeaching testimony, defense counsel should avoid interviewing a prospective witness except in the presence of a third person.

Standard 4- 4.4 Relations With Expert Witnesses

(a) Defense counsel who engages an expert for an opinion should respect the independence of the expert and should not seek to dictate the formation of the expert's opinion on the subject. To the extent necessary, defense counsel should explain to the expert his or her role in the trial as an impartial witness called to aid the fact finders and the manner in which the examination of witnesses is conducted.

(b) Defense counsel should not pay an excessive fee for the purpose of influencing an expert's testimony or fix the amount of the fee contingent upon the testimony an expert will give or the result in the case.

Standard 4- 4.5 Compliance With Discovery Procedure

Defense counsel should make a reasonably diligent effort to comply with a legally proper discovery request.

Standard 4- 4.6 Physical Evidence

(a) Defense counsel who receives a physical item under circumstances implicating a client in criminal conduct should disclose the location of or should deliver that item to law enforcement authorities only: (1) if required by law or court order, or (2) as provided in paragraph (d).

(b) Unless required to disclose, defense counsel should return the item to the source from whom defense counsel received it, except as provided in paragraph (c) and (d). In returning the item to the source, defense counsel should advise the source of the legal consequences pertaining to possession or destruction of the item. Defense counsel should also prepare a written record of these events for his or her file, but should not give the source a copy of such record.

(c) Defense counsel may receive the item for a reasonable period of time during which defense counsel: (1) intends to return it to the owner; (2) reasonably fears that return of the item to the source will result in destruction of the item; (3) reasonably fears that return of the item to the source will result in physical harm to anyone; (4) intends to test, examine, inspect, or use the item in any way as part of defense counsel's representation of the client; or (5) cannot return it to the source. If defense counsel tests or examines the item, he or she should thereafter return it to the source unless there is reason to believe that the evidence might be altered or destroyed or used to harm another or return is otherwise impossible. If defense counsel retains the item, he or she should retain it in his or her law office in a manner that does not impede the lawful ability of law enforcement authorities to obtain the item.

(d) If the item received is contraband, i.e., an item possession of which is in and of itself a crime such as narcotics, defense counsel may suggest that the client destroy it where there is no pending case or investigation relating to this evidence and where such destruction is clearly not in violation of any criminal statute. If such destruction is not permitted by law or if in defense counsel's judgment he or she cannot retain the item, whether or not it is contraband, in a way that does not pose an unreasonable risk of physical harm to anyone, defense counsel should disclose the location of or should deliver the item to law enforcement authorities.

(e) If defense counsel discloses the location of or delivers the item to law enforcement authorities under paragraphs (a) or (d), or to a third party under paragraph (c)(1), he or she should do so in the way best designed to protect the client's interests.

PART V.

CONTROL AND DIRECTION OF LITIGATION

Standard 4- 5.1 Advising the Accused

(a) After informing himself or herself fully on the facts and the law, defense counsel should advise the accused with complete candor concerning all aspects of the case, including a candid estimate of the probable outcome.

(b) Defense counsel should not intentionally understate or overstate the risks, hazards, or prospects of the case to exert undue influence on the accused's decision as to his or her plea.

(c) Defense counsel should caution the client to avoid communication about the case with witnesses, except with the approval of counsel, to avoid any contact with jurors or prospective jurors, and to avoid either the reality or the appearance of any other improper activity.

Return to this Standard's Table of Contents   Ordering Information   Return to Listing of Standards

Standard 4- 5.2 Control and Direction of the Case

(a) Certain decisions relating to the conduct of the case are ultimately for the accused and others are ultimately for defense counsel. The decisions which are to be made by the accused after full consultation with counsel include:

- (i) what pleas to enter;
- (ii) whether to accept a plea agreement;
- (iii) whether to waive jury trial;
- (iv) whether to testify in his or her own behalf; and
- (v) whether to appeal.

(b) Strategic and tactical decisions should be made by defense counsel after consultation with the client where feasible and appropriate. Such decisions include what witnesses to call, whether and how to conduct cross-examination, what jurors to accept or strike, what trial motions should be made, and what evidence should be introduced.

(c) If a disagreement on significant matters of tactics or strategy arises between defense counsel and the client, defense counsel should make a record of the circumstances, counsel's advice and reasons, and the conclusion reached. The record should be made in a manner which protects the confidentiality of the lawyer-client relationship.

PART VI.

DISPOSITION WITHOUT TRIAL

Standard 4- 6.1 Duty to Explore Disposition Without Trial

(a) Whenever the law, nature, and circumstances of the case permit, defense counsel should explore the possibility of an early diversion of the case from the criminal process through the use of other community agencies.

(b) Defense counsel may engage in plea discussions with the prosecutor. Under no circumstances should defense counsel recommend to a defendant acceptance of a plea unless appropriate investigation and study of the case has been completed, including an analysis of controlling law and the evidence likely to be introduced at trial.

Return to this Standard's Table of Contents   Ordering Information   Return to Listing of Standards

Standard 4- 6.2 Plea Discussions

(a) Defense counsel should keep the accused advised of developments arising out of plea discussions conducted with the prosecutor.

(b) Defense counsel should promptly communicate and explain to the accused all significant plea proposals made by the prosecutor.

(c) Defense counsel should not knowingly make false statements concerning the evidence in the course of plea discussions with the prosecutor.

(d) Defense counsel should not seek concessions favorable to one client by any agreement which is detrimental to the legitimate interests of a client in another case.

(e) Defense counsel representing two or more clients in the same or related cases should not participate in making an aggregated agreement as to guilty or nolo contendere pleas, unless each client consents after consultation, including disclosure of the existence and nature of all the claims or pleas involved.

PART VII.

TRIAL

Standard 4- 7.1 Courtroom Professionalism

(a) As an officer of the court, defense counsel should support the authority of the court and the dignity of the trial courtroom by strict adherence to codes of professionalism and by manifesting a professional attitude toward the judge, opposing counsel, witnesses, jurors, and others in the courtroom.

(b) Defense counsel should not engage in unauthorized ex parte discussions with or submission of material to a judge relating to a particular case which is or may come before the judge.

(c) When court is in session, defense counsel should address the court and should not address the prosecutor directly on all matters relating to the case.

(d) Defense counsel should comply promptly with all orders and directives of the court, but defense counsel has a duty to have the record reflect adverse rulings or judicial conduct which counsel considers prejudicial to his or her client's legitimate interests. Defense counsel has a right to make respectful requests for reconsiderations of adverse rulings.

(e) Defense counsel should cooperate with courts and the organized bar in developing codes of professionalism for each jurisdiction.

Standard 4- -7.2 Selection of Jurors

(a) Defense counsel should prepare himself or herself prior to trial to discharge effectively his or her function in the selection of the jury, including the raising of any appropriate issues concerning the method by which the jury panel was selected and the exercise of both challenges for cause and peremptory challenges.

(b) In those cases where it appears necessary to conduct a pretrial investigation of the background of jurors, investigatory methods of defense counsel should neither harass nor unduly embarrass potential jurors or invade their privacy and, whenever possible, should be restricted to an investigation of records and sources of information already in existence.

(c) The opportunity to question jurors personally should be used solely to obtain information for the intelligent exercise of challenges. Defense counsel should not intentionally use the voir dire to present factual matter which defense counsel knows will not be admissible at trial or to argue counsel's case to the jury.

Standard 4- 7.3 Relations With Jury

(a) Defense counsel should not intentionally communicate privately with persons summoned for jury duty or impaneled as jurors prior to or during the trial. Defense counsel should avoid the reality or appearance of any such communications.

(b) Defense counsel should treat jurors with deference and respect, avoiding the reality or appearance of currying favor by a show of undue solicitude for their comfort or convenience.

(c) After discharge of the jury from further consideration of a case, defense counsel should not intentionally make comments to or ask questions of a juror for the purpose of harassing or embarrassing the juror in any way which will tend to influence judgment in future jury service. If defense counsel believes that the verdict may be subject to legal challenge, he or she may properly, if no statute or rule prohibits such course, communicate with jurors to determine whether such challenge may be available.

Standard 4- 7.4 Opening Statement

Defense counsel's opening statement should be confined to a statement of the issues in the case and the evidence defense counsel believes in good faith will be available and admissible. Defense counsel should not allude to any evidence unless there is a good faith and reasonable basis for believing such evidence will be tendered and admitted in evidence.

Return to this Standard's Table of Contents   Ordering Information   Return to Listing of Standards

Standard 4- 7.5 Presentation of Evidence

(a) Defense counsel should not knowingly offer false evidence, whether by documents, tangible evidence, or the testimony of witnesses, or fail to take reasonable remedial measures upon discovery of its falsity.

(b) Defense counsel should not knowingly and for the purpose of bringing inadmissible matter to the attention of the judge or jury offer inadmissible evidence, ask legally objectionable questions, or make other impermissible comments or arguments in the presence of the judge or jury.

(c) Defense counsel should not permit any tangible evidence to be displayed in the view of the judge or jury which would tend to prejudice fair consideration of the case by the judge or jury until such time as a good faith tender of such evidence is made.

(d) Defense counsel should not tender tangible evidence in the presence of the judge or jury if it would tend to prejudice fair consideration of the case, unless there is a reasonable basis for its admission in evidence. When there is any substantial doubt about the admissibility of such evidence, it should be tendered by an offer of proof and a ruling obtained.

Standard 4- 7.6 Examination of Witnesses

(a) The interrogation of all witnesses should be conducted fairly, objectively, and with due regard for the dignity and legitimate privacy of the witness, and without seeking to intimidate or humiliate the witness unnecessarily.

(b) Defense counsel's belief or knowledge that the witness is telling the truth does not preclude cross-examination.

(c) Defense counsel should not call a witness in the presence of the jury who the lawyer knows will claim a valid privilege not to testify.

(d) Defense counsel should not ask a question which implies the existence of a factual predicate for which a good faith belief is lacking.

Standard 4- 7.7 Argument to the Jury

(a) In closing argument to the jury, defense counsel may argue all reasonable inferences from the evidence in the record. Defense counsel should not intentionally misstate the evidence or mislead the jury as to the inferences it may draw.

(b) Defense counsel should not express a personal belief or opinion in his or her client's innocence or personal belief or opinion in the truth or falsity of any testimony or evidence.

(c) Defense counsel should not make arguments calculated to appeal to the prejudices of the jury.

(d) Defense counsel should refrain from argument which would divert the jury from its duty to decide the case on the evidence.

Standard 4- 7.8 Facts Outside the Record

Defense counsel should not intentionally refer to or argue on the basis of facts outside the record whether at trial or on appeal, unless such facts are matters of common public knowledge based on ordinary human experience or matters of which the court can take judicial notice.

PART VIII.

AFTER CONVICTION

Standard 4- 8.1 Sentencing

(a) Defense counsel should, at the earliest possible time, be or become familiar with all of the sentencing alternatives available to the court and with community and other facilities which may be of assistance in a plan for meeting the accused's needs. Defense counsel's preparation should also include familiarization with the court's practices in exercising sentencing discretion, the practical consequences of different sentences, and the normal pattern of sentences for the offense involved, including any guidelines applicable at either the sentencing or parole stages. The consequences of the various dispositions available should be explained fully by defense counsel to the accused.

(b) Defense counsel should present to the court any ground which will assist in reaching a proper disposition favorable to the accused. If a presentence report or summary is made available to defense counsel, he or she should seek to verify the information contained in it and should be prepared to supplement or challenge it if necessary. If there is no presentence report or if it is not disclosed, defense counsel should submit to the court and the prosecutor all favorable information relevant to sentencing and in an appropriate case, with the consent of the accused, be prepared to suggest a program of rehabilitation based on defense counsel's exploration of employment, educational, and other opportunities made available by community services.

(c) Defense counsel should also insure that the accused understands the nature of the presentence investigation process, and in particular the significance of statements made by the accused to probation officers and related personnel. Where appropriate, defense counsel should attend the probation officer's interview with the accused.

(d) Defense counsel should alert the accused to the right of allocution, if any, and to the possible dangers of making a statement that might tend to prejudice an appeal.

Standard 4- 8.2 Appeal

(a) After conviction, defense counsel should explain to the defendant the meaning and consequences of the court's judgment and defendant's right of appeal. Defense counsel should give the defendant his or her professional judgment as to whether there are meritorious grounds for appeal and as to the probable results of an appeal. Defense counsel should also explain to the defendant the advantages and disadvantages of an appeal. The decision whether to appeal must be the defendant's own choice.

(b) Defense counsel should take whatever steps are necessary to protect the defendant's rights of appeal.

Return to this Standard's Table of Contents   Ordering Information   Return to Listing of Standards

Standard 4- 8.3 Counsel on Appeal

(a) Appellate counsel should not seek to withdraw from a case solely on the basis of his or her own determination that the appeal lacks merit.

(b) Appellate counsel should give a client his or her best professional evaluation of the questions that might be presented on appeal. Counsel, when inquiring into the case, should consider all issues that might affect the validity of the judgment of conviction and sentence, including any that might require initial presentation in a postconviction proceeding. Counsel should advise on the probable outcome of a challenge to the conviction or sentence. Counsel should endeavor to persuade the client to abandon a wholly frivolous appeal or to eliminate contentions lacking in substance.

(c) If the client chooses to proceed with an appeal against the advice of counsel, counsel should present the case, so long as such advocacy does not involve deception of the court. When counsel cannot continue without misleading the court, counsel may request permission to withdraw.

(d) Appellate counsel has the ultimate authority to decide which arguments to make on appeal. When appellate counsel decides not to argue all of the issues that his or her client desires to be argued, appellate counsel should inform the client of his or her pro se briefing rights.

(e) In a jurisdiction with an intermediate appellate court, counsel for a defendant-appellant or a defendant-appellee should continue to represent the client if the prosecution seeks review in the highest court, unless new counsel is substituted or unless the court permits counsel to withdraw. Similarly, in any jurisdiction, such appellate counsel should continue to represent the client if the prosecution seeks review in the Supreme Court of the United States.

Standard 4- 8.4 Conduct of Appeal

(a) Appellate counsel should be diligent in perfecting appeals and expediting their prompt submission to appellate courts.

(b) Appellate counsel should be accurate in referring to the record and the authorities upon which counsel relies in the presentation to the court of briefs and oral argument.

(c) Appellate counsel should not intentionally refer to or argue on the basis of facts outside the record on appeal, unless such facts are matters of common public knowledge based on ordinary human experience or matters of which the court may take judicial notice.

Standard 4- 8.5 Post-conviction Remedies

After a conviction is affirmed on appeal, appellate counsel should determine whether there is any ground for relief under other post-conviction remedies. If there is a reasonable prospect of a favorable result, counsel should explain to the defendant the advantages and disadvantages of taking such action. Appellate counsel is not obligated to represent the defendant in a post-conviction proceeding unless counsel has agreed to do so. In other respects, the responsibility of a lawyer in a post-conviction proceeding should be guided generally by the standards governing the conduct of lawyers in criminal cases.

Standard 4- 8.6 Challenges to the Effectiveness of Counsel

(a) If defense counsel, after investigation, is satisfied that another defense counsel who served in an earlier phase of the case did not provide effective assistance, he or she should not hesitate to seek relief for the defendant on that ground.

(b) If defense counsel, after investigation, is satisfied that another defense counsel who served in an earlier phase of the case provided effective assistance, he or she should so advise the client and may decline to proceed further.

(c) If defense counsel concludes that he or she did not provide effective assistance in an earlier phase of the case, defense counsel should explain this conclusion to the defendant and seek to withdraw from representation with an explanation to the court of the reason therefor.

(d) Defense counsel whose conduct of a criminal case is drawn into question is entitled to testify concerning the matters charged and is not precluded from disclosing the truth concerning the accusation to the extent defense counsel reasonably believes necessary, even though this involves revealing matters which were given in confidence.

Guidelines for Legal Defense Systems in the United States

From 1974 to 1976, following consultations with the Attorney General and the Administrator of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, the National Legal Aid and Defender Association convened a 35-member National Study Commission on Defense Services, with LEAA grant support. The Commission's charter was to utilize the standards developed by the National Advisory Commission on Criminal Justice Standards and goals in 1973 as a "basic underpinning for an extensive study of defense services aimed at preparing a blueprint of guidelines and procedures which would meet the nation's indigent defense needs." The National Study Commission was divided into six topical Task Forces: 1) Scope of Services, Eligibility and Recoupment; 2) Workload, Manpower and Budget Projections; 3) Defender System Structure; 4) Internal Defender Office Structure; 5) Assigned Counsel System Structure; and 6) The Defense Attorney's Role in Diversion and Plea Bargaining. Following extensive study and the preparation of a Draft Report, a three-day National Colloquium on the Future of Defender Services was convened in 1976 in Washington, DC, to which were invited all state chief justices, state bar presidents, LEAA state planning agency executive directors, and defender program heads from around the country. The Colloquium produced some 60 commentaries upon the Draft Report, which was then further reviewed by the Commission and Colloquium participants. The black letter "Summary of Recommendations" printed here constitutes 20 pages of the Commission's 560-page Final Report, omitting extensive commentary and discussion.

I. AVAILABILITY OF REPRESENTATION

1.1 Nature of Cases and Proceedings for Which Counsel Should be Provided

Effective representation should be provided to all eligible persons:

- (a) In any governmental fact-finding proceeding, the purpose of which is to establish the culpability or status of such persons, which might result in the loss of liberty or in a legal disability of a criminal or punitive nature; and
- (b) In any proceeding to take affirmative remedial action relative to the scope of services set forth in part (a) of this section.

1.2 Time of Entry

Effective representation should be available for every eligible person as soon as:

- (a) The person is arrested or detained, or
- (b) The person reasonably believes that a process will commence which might result in a loss of liberty or the imposition of a legal disability of a criminal or punitive nature, whichever occurs earliest.

1.3 Procedures for Providing Early Representation: Program Responsibilities

In order to ensure early representation for all eligible persons, the defender office or assigned counsel program should:

- (a) Respond to all inquiries made by, or on behalf of, any eligible person whether or not that individual is in the custody of law enforcement officials;
- (b) Establish the capability to provide emergency representation on a 24-hour basis;
- (c) Implement systematic procedures, including daily checks of detention facilities, to ensure that prompt representation is available to all persons eligible for services;
- (d) Provide adequate facilities for interviewing prospective clients who have not been arrested or who are free on pre-trial release;
- (e) Prepare, distribute and make available by posting in a conspicuous place in all police stations, courthouses and detention facilities a brochure that describes in simple, cogent language or languages the rights of any person who may require the services of the defender or assigned counsel and the nature and availability of such services, including the telephone number and address of the local defender office or assigned counsel program; and

(f) Publicize its services in the media.

Upon initial contact with a prospective client, the defender or assigned counsel should offer specific advice as to all relevant constitutional or statutory rights, elicit matters of defense, and direct investigators to commence fact investigations, collect information relative to pre-trial release, and make a preliminary determination of eligibility for publicly provided defense services.

Where the defender or assigned counsel interviews a prospective client and it is determined that said person is ineligible for publicly provided representation, the attorney should decline the case and, in accordance with appropriate procedure, assist the person in obtaining private counsel. However, should immediate service be necessary to protect that person's interest, such service should be rendered until the person has had the opportunity to retain private counsel.

1.4 Procedures for Providing Early Representation: Law Enforcement Responsibilities

In order for defenders and assigned counsel to meet their responsibilities in providing early representation, it is also essential that it be the initial responsibility of the law enforcement authority having custody of any person to:

- (a) Determine whether such person is represented by counsel and if said person is so represented to immediately contact his attorney; or
- (b) If said person is not represented by counsel, to immediately contact the local defender office or assigned counsel program.

All employees of government who come into contact with any person who is without counsel should inquire into whether the initial responsibility of the custodial authority has been properly discharged. If it has not, this responsibility should extend, but should not be limited to, courts, prosecutors, parole and probation officers, personnel of pre-trial release programs, and their agents.

1.5 Financial Eligibility Criteria

Effective representation should be provided to anyone who is unable, without substantial financial hardship to himself or to his dependents, to obtain such representation. This determination should be made by ascertaining the liquid assets of the person which exceed the amount needed for the support of the person or his dependents and for the payment of current obligations. If the person's liquid assets are not sufficient to cover the anticipated costs of representation as indicated by the prevailing fees charged by competent counsel in the area, the person should be considered eligible for publicly provided representation. The accused's assessment of his own financial ability to obtain competent representation should be given substantial weight.

- (a) Liquid assets include cash in hand, stocks and bonds, bank accounts and any other property which can be readily converted to cash. The person's home, car, household furnishings, clothing and any property declared exempt from attachment or execution by law, should not be considered in determining eligibility. Nor should the fact of whether or not the person has been released on bond or the resources of a spouse, parent or other person be considered.
- (b) The cost of representation includes investigation, expert testimony, and any other costs which may be related to providing effective representation.

1.6 Method of Determining Financial Eligibility

The financial eligibility of a person for publicly provided representation should be made initially by the defender office or assigned counsel program subject to review by a court upon a finding of ineligibility at the request of such person. Any information or statements used for the determination should be considered privileged under the attorney-client relationship.

A decision of ineligibility which is affirmed by a judge should be reviewable by an expedited interlocutory appeal. The person should be informed of this right to appeal and if he desires to exercise it, the clerk of the court should perfect the appeal. The record on appeal should include all evidence presented to the court on the issue of eligibility and the judge's findings of fact and conclusions of law denying eligibility.

1. 7 Partial Eligibility

If the accused is determined to be eligible for defense services in accordance with approved financial eligibility criteria and procedures, and if, at the time that the determination is made, he is able to provide a limited cash contribution to the cost of his defense without imposing a substantial financial hardship upon himself or his dependents, such contribution should be required as a condition of continued representation at public expense.

- (a) The defender office or assigned counsel program should determine the amount to be contributed under this section, but such contribution should be paid directly into the general fund of the state, county, or other appropriate funding agency. The contribution should be made in a single lump sum payment immediately upon, or shortly after, the eligibility determination.
- (b) The amount of contribution to be made under this section should be determined in accordance with predetermined standards and administered in an objective manner; provided, however, that the amount of the contribution should not exceed the lesser of (1) ten (10) percent of the total maximum amount which would be payable for the representation in question under the assigned counsel fee schedule, where such a schedule is used in the particular jurisdiction, or (2) a sum equal to the fee generally paid to an assigned counsel for one trial day in a comparable case.

II. STRUCTURE OF SYSTEMS FOR DEFENSE OF ELIGIBLE PERSONS

2.1 Administrative Structures for Mixed Systems

Where a jurisdiction is served by both a defender office and an assigned counsel program, there are two acceptable methods of coordinating these components:

- (a) The Defender Director may also serve as the assigned counsel administrator and bear the responsibility, in cooperation with the private bar, and with the guidance of an advisory board, for the establishment, maintenance and training of the panel and for all other administrative and support functions for the assigned counsel component; or
- (b) The defender office and the assigned counsel program may exist as two independent entities, but coordinate their efforts in such matters as training and support services to the extent that it is feasible and in the allocation of caseload. Where necessary to facilitate coordination, an advisory board should be utilized.

2.2 Allocation of Cases

In a mixed defender and assigned counsel system, the percentage of cases handled by each component of the system should depend upon the relative sizes, expertise and availability of the defender staff and of the panel of private lawyers.

Cases should be allocated in accordance with a fair and well-promulgated plan. The administrator should be responsible for developing, promulgating and implementing this plan.

The plan should allocate a substantial share of cases to each component of the system and should not a priori preclude allocation of any specific type or types of cases from assignment to either component. Provision should be made for cases involving multiple defendants, conflicts of interest, and matters requiring special expertise.

2.3 Ad Hoc Appointment of Counsel

Appointment of counsel on a random or ad hoc basis is explicitly rejected as an appropriate means of furnishing legal representation in criminal cases.

2.4 State Level Organization with Centralized Administration

Defender services should be organized at the state level in order to ensure uniformity and equality of legal representation and supporting services, and to guarantee professional independence for individual defenders. The defender system should provide services by means of city, county, or multi-county programs to every jurisdiction in the state.

- (a) Except in the case of pre-existing agencies, the planning and creation of local or regional defender offices should be undertaken by a state defender office which is responsible for providing all defender services.
- (b) The role of the State Defender Director with respect to offices throughout the state should be as follows:
  - (1) The State Defender Director should appoint Deputy Defenders to head the local and regional offices and should set general policy and guidelines regarding the operation of such offices and the handling of cases; however, the daily administration of the local and regional offices and the handling of individual cases should be the responsibility of the Deputy Defenders.
  - (2) The State Defender Director should ensure that on-site evaluations of each defender office or assigned counsel program in the state, whether organized as part of the state defender system or as a preexisting entity, are conducted not less than once a year. The State Defender Director should be authorized to contract with outside agencies where necessary for this purpose.
  - (3) The State Defender Director should visit all offices and programs around the state on a frequent basis.
  - (4) The Office of State Defender should provide initial training for all new defender staff attorneys and conduct seminars for the continuing education of the staff of all defender offices and coordinated assigned counsel programs in the state.

2.5 Preexisting Agencies in a State Defender System

The State Defender Director should be permitted to contract with preexisting qualified entities to provide defense services.

The State Defender Director should be responsible for ensuring compliance by contracted programs with national standards.

Where the on-going program has been determined to be in full compliance with national standards, it should be eligible to receive state funding for its program and the Office of the State Defender should provide any necessary back-up services.

Where the on-going defender or coordinated assigned counsel program fails to comply with national standards, that program should have 120 days in which to comply. If, upon reevaluation after that time, the program continues to fall short of national standards, the Office of State Defender should itself replace the prior program.

2.6 Private Defender Organizations

Where a defender organization provides services pursuant to contract, in order to maintain continuity and attract qualified personnel to the position of Defender Director, provision should be made, either by law or by contract, for the continuation of the defender service beyond the contract period.

The scope of the services to be provided should be stated explicitly in the contract.

Contracts for defender services should not be let on the basis of competitive bidding.

The contract should specify the workload anticipated as it relates to the amount of funds being provided in order to provide a formula in the event that the anticipated workload is exceeded.

2.7 Location of Defender Offices

In a state level defender system, the principal office should ordinarily be located in the state capital, and other offices should be located with reference to population and caseload factors and access to trial and appellate courts and penal institutions.

Local defender offices should be located near the appropriate courthouses, but never in such proximity that the defender offices become identified with the judicial and law enforcement components of the criminal justice system. Defender offices should maintain interview and waiting rooms in the courthouse.

Regional, metropolitan and single county defenders should establish branch offices whenever operational efficiency, defender access to courts, or clients' access to defenders would be significantly enhanced thereby.

2.8 Regionalization of Defender Services

In states which have not yet established the Office of State Defender, local political subdivisions having a sufficient number of cases to occupy two or more attorneys on a full-time basis should be required to establish an organized defender system. If a local political subdivision lacks a sufficient number of cases to occupy the full-time services of at least two attorneys, it should be required to combine with other political subdivisions to establish a regional, organized defender system.

Statewide regulations should be established in conformity with national standards governing the staffing and budgetary requirements of local and regional defender offices to ensure provision of uniformly high quality defender services and to protect the independence of the office from political and judicial influence. Staffing requirements for regional offices should be related to travel time for attending court and jail facilities as well as to approved caseload standards.

In the absence of full state funding, participating local governments should allocate costs among themselves. Alternative bases for allocation should include, but not be limited to, population, caseload, and equal sharing.

2.9 Full-time Defenders and Minimum Staff Size

Defender Directors and staff attorneys should be full-time employees, prohibited from engaging in the private practice of law. No defender office should be staffed by less than two full-time defenders. Where this cannot be accomplished by regionalization, it should be accomplished by merging the criminal and civil legal aid functions.

2.10 The Defender Commission

A special Defender Commission should be established for every defender system, whether public or private.

The Commission should consist of from nine to thirteen members, depending upon the size of the community, the number of identifiable factions or components of the client population, and judgments as to which non-client groups should be represented.

Commission members should be selected under the following criteria:

- (a) The primary consideration in establishing the composition of the Commission should be ensuring the independence of the Defender Director.
- (b) The members of the Commission should represent a diversity of factions in order to ensure insulation from partisan politics.
- (c) No single branch of government should have a majority of votes on the Commission.
- (d) Organizations concerned with the problems of the client community should be represented on the Commission.
- (e) A majority of the Commission should consist of practicing attorneys.
- (f) The Commission should not include judges, prosecutors, or law enforcement officials.

Members of the Commission should serve staggered terms in order to ensure continuity and avoid upheaval.

2.11 Functions of the Defender Commission

The primary function of the Defender Commission should be to select the State Defender Director. The Commission should also:

- (a) Assist the State Defender Director in drawing up procedures for the selection of Assistants or Deputies;

- (b) Receive possible client complaints, initiate statistical studies of case disposition, and monitor the performance of the Defender Director;
- (c) Maintain a continuing dialogue with the State Defender Director in order to provide input and advice;
- (d) Assist in ensuring the independence of the defender system by serving as a buffer and educating the public regarding constitutional requirements and the functions of the defenders;
- (e) Serve as liaison between the legislature and the defender system upon request of the Defender Director; and
- (f) Remove the Defender Director from office in the event that good cause is shown.

The Commission should not interfere with the discretion, judgment and zealous advocacy of defender attorneys in specific cases.

The Commission should meet on a regular basis and should be presided over by a chairperson elected by its members.

The Commission should serve without pay, and should be reimbursed for travel and other reasonable expenditures incurred as a result of membership.

A majority of commission members should constitute a quorum, and any resolution, policy adoption, or motion should require a vote of a majority of those present. However, selection of the Defender Director should require the vote of each member due to the importance of that decision. Voting by proxy should be prohibited.

2.12 Qualifications of the Defender Director and Conditions of Employment

The Defender Director should be a member of the bar of the state in which he is to serve. He should be selected on the basis of a non-partisan, merit procedure which ensures the selection of a person with the best available administrative and legal talent, regardless of political party affiliation, contributions, or other irrelevant criteria.

The Defender Director's term of office should be from four to six years in duration and should be subject to renewal. The director should not be removed from office in the course of a term without a hearing procedure at which good cause is shown.

2.13 The Governing Body for Assigned Counsel Programs

An assigned counsel program should be operated under the auspices of a general governing body. The majority of the members of the governing body should be attorneys but should not be judges or prosecuting attorneys. Its composition should conform to the criteria established for the Defender Commission.

The functions of the governing body should include the following: designing the general scheme of the system; specifying the qualifications for the position of administrator of the system; defining the function of the administrator and authorizing sufficient staff to support that function; prescribing salaries and terms of employment; adopting appropriate rules or procedures for the operation of the governing body itself, as well as general guidelines for the operation of the system; acting as a selection committee for the appointment of an administrator, or in the alternative, providing for a special selection committee; exercising general fiscal and organizational control of the system; seeking and maintaining proper funding of the system; ensuring the independence of the administrator and assigned counsel; and encouraging the public, the courts, and the funding source to recognize the significance of the defense function as a vital and independent component of the justice system.

2.14 Qualifications, Conditions of Employment, and Role of the Administrator

An assigned counsel program should be administered by a qualified attorney licensed to practice in the jurisdiction where the system operates. In addition, the qualifications of the administrator should include, but not be limited to, the following: extensive experience in the field of criminal defense; experience in administration; ability to work cooperatively with other elements of the criminal justice system while retaining an independence of attitude to promote and protect the proper rendering of defense services; ability to maintain proper relations with the private bar; and, where the assigned counsel program co-exists with a defender system which has a separate administrator, the ability to maintain a cooperative working relationship with the defender system.

The functions of the administrator should include, but not be limited to, the following: developing and executing operational policy and control of the system; assisting the governing body in discharging its responsibilities; further assisting the governing body in the development of the budget, and in planning and establishing fee schedules and fiscal controls; acquiring such staff as is necessary to carry out the mission of the system; designing the internal operational and administrative controls necessary for the orderly disposition of cases; designing and implementing orientation and training programs for assigned counsel; and developing access to supporting services.

The administrator should have the authority to select the attorneys who will comprise the assigned counsel panel; to suspend or dismiss panel members for cause, subject to the review of the governing body; to hire and discharge such staff as is necessary to operate the system; to monitor the quality of the services being rendered and to take appropriate measures to maintain a competent level of services; to approve expenditures for the acquisition of supporting services; and to approve the payment of attorney fee vouchers. However, requests for fees exceeding the recommended maximum, or appeals from the administrator's action, should be received by a panel of attorneys appointed by the governing board.

The following terms of employment should apply to the assigned counsel administrator. The administrator's salary should be sufficient to attract a capable person and should be at least as high as that of the chief prosecutor in the area served. The administrator and staff should be allowed reasonable expenses to participate in continuing education programs and bar association and defender association functions. The administrator should serve for a definite term of years which should be no less than three nor greater than six years and should be eligible for reappointment for successive terms. The administrator should not be subject to removal from office in the course of a term without good cause being shown and should be afforded a hearing before the governing body.

2.15 Establishing the Assigned Counsel Panel

In establishing the assigned counsel panel, the administrator should solicit all members of the practicing bar in the area to be served by the system. The administrator should appoint all of those attorneys who display a willingness to participate in the program and manifest the ability to perform criminal defense work at a competent level. Provision should also be made for attorneys who are willing to learn criminal defense work, or to become more proficient in such work, to be inducted into the program upon completion of an appropriate training regime.

Standards of performance and conduct should be developed and disseminated among all panel members and potential panel members. In the event that those standards are disregarded or breached, it should be cause for either admonishment, suspension or removal from the panel.

2. 16 Assignment of Cases to Panel Members

Although methods of assigning cases may vary with local procedures and conditions, the administrator, in designing the system and making assignments, should adhere to the following goals:

- (a) The cases should be distributed in an equitable way among the panel members to ensure balanced workloads through a rotating system with allowances for variance when necessary;
- (b) The more serious and complex cases should be assigned to attorneys with a sufficient level of experience and competence to afford proper representation; and
- (c) Apprentice members of the panel should only be assigned cases which are within their capabilities; however, they should be given the opportunity to expand their experience gradually under supervision.

2.17 Sources of Funding for Defense Systems

The primary responsibility for funding of defense services should be borne at the state level. Each state should provide adequate funding for all defense services within its jurisdiction regardless of the level of government at which those services are administered.

The federal government should provide financial aid to the states for the purposes of establishing organized defense services where none exist and of ensuring uniformity in the quality of the services being provided in existing programs. This aid should take the form of long-term direct matching grants.

Defense systems should be empowered to seek and receive private funds. However, private funding is not a stable source of funds and should not be relied upon except for capital expenditures such as library acquisitions and equipment.

The private bar should not be required to provide defense services on a pro bono basis either as the primary delivery agent or for cases involving a conflict of interest with or overflow from the defender office.

2.18 Administration of Defense System Funds

(a) Defender Systems

The defender system should be an independent agency and, as such, should prepare its own budget and submit its budget directly to the appropriating authority. Its budget should not be presented as part of the judicial or executive branch budgets, nor should it be subject to diminution or alteration by any branch of government other than the appropriating authority. The Defender Commission should review and advise the Defender Director on the budget before its submission and provide support for the budget request.

The defender system should operate under an annual or biennial lump sum appropriation which would enable the Defender Director to reallocate funds without prior approval of the appropriating authority. The payment of the defender on a case-by-case reimbursement basis, the direct provision of in-kind services or facilities to the defender system by the government, and other substitutes for providing a complete and sufficient budget are explicitly rejected as means of funding defender systems.

(b) Assigned Counsel Programs

The financial administration of assigned counsel program funds should be in the form of an open-ended budget whereby compensation would be paid in accordance with caseload and the nature and extent of the services rendered.

III. THE COST OF PROVIDING COUNSEL

3.1 Assigned Counsel Fees and Supporting Services

Assigned counsel should be adequately compensated for services rendered. Fees should be related to the prevailing rates among the private bar for similar services. These rates should be reviewed periodically and adjusted accordingly.

Funds should be available in a budgetary allocation for the services of investigators, expert witnesses and other necessary services and facilities.

In developing a fee schedule, the effect of the fee schedule upon the quality of representation should be considered. Fee structures should be designed to compensate attorneys for effort, skill and time actually, properly and necessarily expended in assigned cases.

Fee schedules, whether provided by statute or policy, should be designed to allow hourly in-court and out-of-court rates up to a stated maximum for various classes of cases, with provision for compensation in excess of the scheduled maxima in extraordinary cases.

3.2 Defender System Salaries

The Defender Director's compensation should be set at a level which is commensurate with his qualifications and experience, and which recognizes the responsibility of the position. The Director's compensation should be comparable with that paid to presiding judges, is professionally appropriate when compared with the private bar, and is in no event less than that of the chief prosecutor.

The starting levels of compensation for staff attorneys should be adequate to attract qualified personnel. Salary levels thereafter should be set to promote the Defender Director's policy on retention of legal staff and should in no event be less than that paid in the prosecutor's office. Compensation should be professionally appropriate when analyzed or compared with the compensation of the private bar.

In order to attract and retain qualified supporting personnel, compensation should be comparable to that paid by the private bar and related positions in the private sector and should in no event be less than that paid for similar positions in the court system and prosecution offices.

3.3 Projecting Defense System Personnel Needs

Defense system personnel needs should be projected by means of detailed resource planning. Such planning requires, at a minimum, detailed records on the flow of cases through the criminal justice process and on the resources expended on each case at each step in the process.

3.4 Nonpersonnel Needs in Defender Offices

Defender offices should have a budget for operating expenses that provides for a professional quality office, library and equipment comparable to a private law firm of similar size. Facilities and resources should be at least comparable to, and in no event less than, that provided for other components of the justice system with whom the defender must interact, such as the courts, prosecution, and the police.

Defender office facilities should include separate offices for management, legal and social work staff, shared space for investigators, paraprofessionals and other support staff, secure space for confidential records, equipment and petty cash, and reasonable allocations of ancillary space related to staff size for reception and client waiting areas, conference rooms and library, mailroom and reproduction, supplies and storage. Separate toilet facilities should be provided for staff. Parking should be provided for staff who require the use of an automobile for field tasks.

Defender office budgets should include funds for procurement of experts and consultants, ordering of minutes and transcripts on an expedited basis and for the procurement of other necessary services. Defender offices should not be required to seek prior approval or post-expenditure ratification of payments for such services except in those limited cases where the expenditure is extraordinary.

Defender offices should be equipped with quality communications and reproduction equipment. Where data requirements so warrant, defender offices should have data processing facilities and services on lease or contract which are designed for defender requirements. If the defender office is included in a criminal justice information system, the system should be required to meet defender specifications regarding reporting frequency, data definition and format.

Defender offices should be exempt from governmental public bidding requirements for purchasing where the public bidding process cannot be completed for timely acquisition of services or equipment.

IV. TAILORING SPECIFICATIONS TO DIVERSE DEFENDER PROGRAMS

4.1 Task Allocation in the Trial Function: Specialists and Supporting Services

Defender organizations should analyze their operations for opportunities to achieve more effective representation, increased cost effectiveness and improved client and staff satisfaction through specialization. The decision to specialize legal and supporting staff functions should be made whenever the use of specialization would result in substantial improvements in the quality of defender services and cost savings in light of the program's management and coordination requirements; provided that, attorney tasks should never be specialized where the result would be to impair the attorney's ability to represent a client from the beginning of a case through sentencing.

Proper attorney supervision in a defender office requires one full-time supervisor for every ten staff lawyers, or one part-time supervisor for every five lawyers.

Social workers, investigators, paralegal and paraprofessional staff as well as clerical/secretarial staff should be employed to assist attorneys in performing tasks not requiring attorney credentials or experience and for tasks where supporting staff possess specialized skills.

Defender offices should employ investigators with criminal investigation training and experience. A minimum of one investigator should be employed for every three staff attorneys in an office. Every defender office should employ at least one investigator.

Professional business management staff should be employed by defender offices to provide expertise in budget development and financial management, personnel administration, purchasing, data processing, statistics, record-keeping and information systems, facilities management and other administrative services if senior legal management are expending at least one person-year of effort for these functions or where administrative and business management functions are not being performed effectively and on a timely basis.

The primary responsibility for managing, evaluating and coordinating all services provided to a client should be borne by the attorney. The attorney should conduct the initial interview with the client and make an evaluation of the case prior to entry by specialists and supporting staff into the case with the exception of specific ministerial duties necessary to start the attorney's file.

Except where an assigned counsel plan provides such services, defender organizations should provide appointed counsel with specialist and supporting services in cases not involving a present or potential conflict of interest.

Defender offices should employ staff to gather and maintain information on all aspects of the available pre-trial diversion options and to assist defense counsel and defendants both in determining the suitability of any given program and in expediting the client's entry into a program when the client so desires.

4.2 Task Allocation and Supporting Services in Rural Programs

Defender programs in rural areas which are staffed by only two or three attorneys should meet standards prescribed for larger programs except that specialization should be avoided and case assignments and routine administrative and public relations duties should be rotated to ensure that each staff attorney is fully familiar with the operation of the program and with all components of the criminal justice system.

4.3 Relationship of Appellate and Trial Functions; Task Allocation

The appellate and post-conviction functions should be independent of the trial function in order to accomplish free and unrestricted review of trial court proceedings.

Where the appellate office is part of a defender system which includes both trials and appeals, the appellate function should be as organizationally independent of the trial function as is feasible.

- (a) Counsel on appeal should be different from trial counsel and capable of exercising independent review of the competence and performance of trial counsel.
- (b) An appellate defender should not have responsibility for any trial work while in an appellate capacity and should remain in appellate work for a substantial period of time in order to provide continuous representation to a client throughout the appellate process.
- (c) While the appellate function should be separate from the trial function, under certain circumstances the trial attorney should be permitted to handle the appeal provided that there is an independent review of the record by appellate personnel.

Where the appellate defender office is separate from the trial office, it is essential to ensure the following coordination:

- (a) Appellate counsel should contact and fully discuss the appeal with trial counsel; and
- (b) The trial defender office should have the capacity to process interlocutory and emergency appeals.

Where paraprofessionals and law students are utilized in the appellate process, the defender assigned to a client should establish a personal relationship with the client through personal interviews and continued contact.

A copy of all pleadings affecting the merits of the case filed for a client by the defender should be automatically forwarded to the client. Because the client is not present at most appellate proceedings, the client should be informed of the occurrence of all substantial hearings, rulings and decisions affecting the case.

The responsibility for handling a case on appeal should be borne by the attorney. The attorney should supervise all supporting staff who work on a case.

The following services and facilities should be available to appellate defender offices:

- (a) Adequate resources for the hiring of expert witnesses and investigative services;
- (b) Administrative personnel to maintain docket control cards, open files, accumulate all court records before the case is assigned to a defender, and set up initial appointments with and explain the appellate process to clients;
- (c) Word processing systems and equipment; and
- (d) An adequate library and brief-bank with access to a complete resource library.
  - (1) Adequate personnel should be available to operate the library and maintain and index the brief-bank.
  - (2) Individual staff attorneys should be provided with a functional working library for their own offices.
  - (3) All slip sheet opinions released by the jurisdiction's appellate courts should be obtained by the office upon release, indexed and immediately distributed to the appellate attorneys.

4.4 Use of Law Students

Although law schools throughout the nation should be encouraged to establish closely supervised clinical criminal law, courses in cooperation with local defender offices, it is deplorable that law students are now filling gaps that should be filled by the practicing bar. Law student programs should not be viewed as a long-term answer to the problem of adequately meeting the needs of defendants in the criminal justice system.

Law students utilized as supporting personnel in defender agencies should be carefully supervised, given a broad range of experience and, where appropriate, adequately compensated for their work.

Law students functioning as subcounsel in criminal matters should be thoroughly prepared in criminal law and procedure, ethics, and court practice before being permitted to handle actual courtroom appearances.

A law student should be permitted to handle as lead counsel motions, hearings, and trials only after the student has been certified under a student practice rule and provided that the supervising lawyer has determined that, to the best of his knowledge and belief, the student will not bias either the court or the jury against the defendant. The student should not be permitted to handle the case unless the client has consented in writing to student representation; however, the consent of the trial judge should not be required. The client's consent should be indicated on the court record prior to any courtroom proceeding.

Law students should not conduct initial substantive client interviews without the presence of a supervising lawyer.

Law students should not handle as lead counsel criminal cases in which the charges against the accused involve complex legal, evidentiary, or tactical decisions, or where there is a likelihood of a substantial deprivation of liberty upon conviction.

The requirement of close supervision necessitates that the supervising lawyer have a complete understanding of the case, be available to the student prior to any court appearance for consultation and be physically present and immediately available for consultation during the time the student is presenting a matter in court.

4. 5 Prisoner Legal Assistance Programs

Every defender system should make an assessment of the availability of post-conviction representation of the criminally confined in its jurisdiction and, if indicated, establish a separate division to deliver that representation in a comprehensive fashion.

The defender system should seek to utilize and incorporate existing community resources including, but not limited to, law students, paraprofessionals, jailhouse lawyers and volunteers to assist in delivering the services. These individuals, however, should be carefully selected, properly trained and supervised, and their duties precisely defined.

Since the legal claims of prisoners may require of defender staff attorneys many skills and/or substantive law knowledge not necessarily possessed by criminal law practitioners, this fact should be reflected in the program's hiring policies, training programs, law library content and internal office structure.

In the event that the defender system opts, due to lack of available resources, lack of expertise, or for others reasons to limit its inmate representation to certain specified types of cases, the Defender Director should identify and coordinate with alternative prison legal services programs and initiate an effective referral system for inmate requests.

V. CORE QUESTIONS RELATING TO INTERNAL OPERATIONS

5.1 Establishing Maximum Pending Workload Levels for Individual Attorneys

In order to achieve the prime objective of effective assistance of counsel to all defender clients, which cannot be accomplished by even the ablest, most industrious attorneys in the face of excessive workloads, every defender system should establish maximum caseloads for individual attorneys in the system.

Caseloads should reflect national standards and guidelines. The determination by the defender office as to whether or not the workloads of the defenders in the office are excessive should take into consideration the following factors:

- (a) objective statistical data;
- (b) factors related to local practice; and
- (c) an evaluation and comparison of the workloads of experienced, competent private defense practitioners.

5.2 Statistics and Record-keeping

Every defender office should maintain a central filing and record system with daily retrieval of information concerning all open cases. The system should include, at a minimum, an alphabetical card index system with a card containing detailed and current information on every open case, and a docket book or calendar which contains future court appearance activities.

Every Defender Director should receive, on a weekly or monthly basis, detailed caseload and dispositional data, broken down by type of case, type of function, disposition, and by individual attorney workload.

5.3 Elimination of Excessive Caseloads

Defender office caseloads and individual defender attorney workloads should be continuously monitored, assessed and predicted so that, wherever possible, caseload problems can be anticipated in time for preventive action.

Whenever the Defender Director, in light of the system's established workload standards, determines that the assumption of additional cases by the system might reasonably result in inadequate representation for some or all of the system's clients, the defender system should decline any additional cases until the situation is altered.

When faced with an excessive caseload, the defender system should diligently pursue all reasonable means of alleviating the problem, including:

- (a) Declining additional cases and, as appropriate, seeking leave of court to withdraw from cases already assigned;
- (b) Actively seeking the support of the judiciary, the Defender Commission, the private bar, and the community in the resolution of the caseload problem;
- (c) Seeking evaluative measures from the appropriate national organization as a means of independent documentation of the problem;

- (d) Hiring assigned counsel to handle the additional cases; and
- (e) Initiating legal causes of action.

An individual staff attorney has the duty not to accept more clients than he can effectively handle and should keep the Defender Director advised of his workload in order to prevent an excessive workload situation. If such a situation arises, the staff attorney should inform the court and his client of his resulting inability to render effective assistance of counsel.

5.4 Supervision and Evaluation of Defender System Personnel

The professional performance of defender staff attorneys should be subject to systematic supervision and evaluation based upon publicized criteria. Supervision and evaluation efforts should be individualized, and should include monitoring of time and caseload records, review and inspection of case files and transcripts, in-court observation and periodic conferences.

5.5 Monitoring and Evaluation of Assigned Counsel Program Personnel

All evaluations of panel attorneys should be conducted by the administrator of the program. The results of evaluations should be reported to the attorney upon request of the attorney or in the discretion of the administrator.

A system of performance evaluations based upon personal monitoring by the administrator, augmented by regular inputs from judges, prosecutors, other defense lawyers and clients should be developed. Periodic review of selected cases should be made by the administrator.

The criteria of performance utilized in evaluations should be those of a skilled and knowledgeable criminal lawyer.

5.6 Accreditation and Specialization

An accreditation program for defender offices and assigned counsel programs should be developed within the appropriate national professional organization to encourage compliance with national standards and to promote the general improvement of defense services.

A certification program for criminal law specialists should be considered.

5.7 Training Staff Attorneys in a Defender System

The training of defenders should be systematic, comprehensive and at least equal in scope to that received by prosecutors. Every defender office should provide an orientation program for new staff attorneys. Intensive entry-level training should be provided at the state or local level and, to the extent possible, defender hiring practices should be coordinated to facilitate an entry-level training program during which newly hired attorneys are not assigned to regular office duties.

In-service training programs for defender attorneys should be provided at the state and local level so that all attorneys are kept abreast of developments in criminal law, criminal procedure and the forensic sciences. As a part of in-service training, defender attorneys should be required to read appellate slip opinions, loose-leaf services and legal periodicals.

Every defender office should seek to enroll staff attorneys in national and statewide training programs and courses that have relevance to the development of trial advocacy skills.

Defender offices should provide training for investigative staff.

5.8 Training Assigned Counsel

A single person or organization should assume the responsibility for training of assigned counsel panel members. Where there is an administrator, that individual should bear the responsibility.

Training programs should take into consideration the prior experience and skills of the attorneys. Special programs should be established for those less experienced attorneys who wish to qualify for the assigned counsel panel.

Formal training programs stressing lectures, demonstrations, and supervised participant involvement should be regularly scheduled. Joint sponsorship of such programs by defender organizations, local bar groups, and/or national organizations should be encouraged.

Reasonable attendance at training programs should be required of attorneys in order to remain on the panel.

If the operating budget is not sufficient, funds should be requested from outside sources to initiate formal training or to further develop formal training programs.

Assigned counsel should be encouraged to periodically attend other criminal law-related seminars in addition to the regular formal training programs.

Facilities for training programs should include audio and video tapes. Further, a national organization should consider providing, as a service, such tapes to defender offices and bar associations concerned with training attorneys who regularly accept appointments in criminal cases.

In addition to formal training programs, those responsible for the adequacy of assigned counsel performance should make the following resources available: an apprenticeship program, an initial hand-out or package of materials, an evaluation procedure, a motion and brief bank, a complete law library, information on experts, a newsletter, access to other attorneys for consultation, and law student assistance.

5.9 Recruitment, Hiring, Promotion and Removal of Defender Office Personnel

Defender offices should actively recruit the best qualified attorneys available for staff positions by advertising on the local, state and national levels, and by formulating and promulgating hiring criteria and policies. Recruiting should include special efforts to employ attorney candidates from minority groups which are substantially represented in the defender office's client populations.

A national referral and placement service should be instituted in order to facilitate nationwide defender recruitment and placement.

Defender staff attorney appointments should be made by the Defender Director, based upon merit, entirely free of political and other irrelevant factors. Upon appointment, staff attorneys should be required to make a time commitment of from two to five years to defender work.

Defender office investigative staff should be systematically recruited, selected and supervised to ensure that the investigative function is properly discharged.

Defender promotion policies should be tied to merit and performance criteria, and removal of staff attorneys should be only for cause, except during a fixed probationary period which an office may employ for newly hired attorneys.

5.10 Attorney, Client Relationships in a Defense System

Defenders and assigned counsel should be mindful that their primary loyalty is to their clients. They should seek to instill an attitude of trust and confidence in clients, and should scrupulously adhere to ethical dictates regarding confidentiality.

The defense attorney should frequently consult with his client so that the client fully understands the nature and scope of the legal representation which will be provided to him. Particular emphasis should be placed upon informing the client of the following:

- (a) The nature and frequency of court appearances;
- (b) The possibility of delays in the legal process; and
- (c) The factual and legal bases for recommendations made by counsel to the client concerning pleas or trials.

Defense systems should devise means of obtaining feedback from clients in a systematic way. Information thus developed should be used for tenure and promotion purposes and to enhance the system's sensitivity to client needs and improve the general quality of representation.

5.11 Continuity of Representation

Defender offices should provide for continuous and uninterrupted representation of eligible clients from initial appearance through sentencing up to, but not including, the appellate and post-conviction stages by the same individual attorney. Defender offices should urge changes in court structure and administration to reduce fragmentation and to facilitate continuous representation.

If necessary, the procedures for early representation, including initial contact, should permit a limited exception to continuous representation. However, the defender office should implement procedures for early case assignment and for informing the client of the name of the attorney who will represent him after the initial period covered by the exception.

5.12 Choice of Counsel in Defense Systems

In a mixed system where both defender and assigned counsel programs exist, the client should be given the option of selecting either system.

The initial assignment of attorneys in defender and assigned counsel programs should be an internal administrative function. However, to the extent administratively feasible and consistent with the overall effectiveness of the system, the client should be afforded an opportunity to choose a particular attorney.

Whenever an attorney-client relationship has been established between an eligible accused and his attorney, the defense system should not terminate or interfere with that relationship without great justification, and the attorney should resist efforts by the court to terminate or interfere with that relationship.

Whenever it reasonably appears to counsel for an eligible accused that he is unable, for any reason, to furnish effective representation to a particular client, he should withdraw from the case with the consent of the client and the approval of the court, and should assist the client in securing new counsel. The defense system should not seek to prevent the individual attorney's withdrawal under these circumstances.

Whenever an eligible accused requests that different counsel be assigned to his case, the defense system should investigate the grounds for the request and should assign new counsel if (1) this constitutes the client's first such request, or (2) the investigation discloses that the attorney, for any reason, is unable to provide effective representation to the client. In all other cases the defense system should refuse to reassign the case, and should inform the client of his right to petition the court for reassignment of counsel.

5.13 Role in the Community and the Criminal Justice System

Every defense system should strive to instill in its members a high standard of professionalism and excellence.

The relationship between defense system attorneys and prosecuting attorneys should be characterized by the same high level of professionalism that is expected between other responsible members of the litigating bar.

Defense system attorneys should be especially sensitive to the image that they project to clients, and should accordingly refrain from demonstrations of camaraderie in and around the courthouse, the police station and the detention facility with prosecuting attorneys and other law enforcement personnel.

Defense systems attorneys should consult regularly with members of the judiciary in order to promote understanding and resolution of problems. However, they should be subject to judicial influence and supervision only in the same manner and to the same extent as are lawyers in private practice.

The defense system should strive to eliminate areas of conflict and to develop areas of mutual cooperation with fellow members of the legal community and organized bar, recognizing that bar support can assist the defense system in securing an appropriate budget, resisting political pressures, instituting criminal justice reforms, and gaining the support of the legal community. Defense system attorneys should involve themselves in programs and committees of the bar.

Subject to procedures for early representation, defense systems should scrupulously decline to represent defendants who are ineligible for defender services as determined by prevailing standards. Adherence to this policy is designed to minimize the economic impact of the defense system upon the private bar and to avoid thereby unnecessary conflict with this important source of potential support. Where the accused has been determined eligible for defender services, the attorney should withdraw from the case in deference to private counsel only upon request of the accused.

The defense system's Director should educate the community about the purpose and function of the defense system. He should develop and maintain relations with community organizations to promote understanding of program operations and to assist in improving defense services. He should include police, judges, prosecutors and corrections-personnel in training programs. The defense system should make speakers available for school and community organizations and should encourage media coverage and issue regular press statements. Every defense system should have an official among whose responsibilities is press liaison and should have a procedure by which media requests for information are channeled to the appropriate official.

Performance Guidelines for Criminal Defense Representation

NLADA's Performance Guidelines offer an excellent, comprehensive and worthwhile definition of what constitutes good solid trial lawyering. They give realistic meaning to the Sixth Amendment's right to counsel and to the ultimate goal for all trial counsel: "zealous and quality representation."

The Guidelines are comprehensive but not exhaustive. The language allows for flexibility. While some actions are absolutely essential, others are left to counsel's considered judgment and to the peculiarities of practice and law in each jurisdiction. In other words, rather than being a checklist of required actions, the Guidelines are a series of steps each attorney must consider performing on behalf of each client, applying professional discretion to determine whether each individual step is necessary in the client's case.

The guidelines are divided into nine sections:

1. Role, Duties and Training and Experience of Counsel
2. Pre-Trial Release Proceedings
3. Initial Appearance, Preliminary Hearing, and Prosecution Requests for Non-Testimonial Evidence
4. Investigation, Discovery, Theory of the Case
5. Pre-Trial Motions
6. Plea Negotiations
7. Duties at Trial
8. Sentencing
9. Post-Sentencing Duties

Each section contains multiple guidelines, which, taken together, define the role and duties of defense counsel. After each guideline there are references to "Related Standards" that include nationally recognized standards and codes (e.g., the ABA, the National Advisory Commission on Criminal Justice Standards and Goals, the National Study Commission on Defense Services, and various NLADA standards), statutes, regulations, and policy manuals developed by state and local public defender and assigned counsel programs. The commentary, supported by footnotes citing to primary legal and secondary materials, provides an explanation and rationale for each guideline.

Although the guidelines do not specifically address the duties of death penalty, post-conviction or appellate counsel, they may be helpful in defining effective assistance of counsel in briefs and at post-conviction hearings.

BLACKLETTER

Guideline 1.1 Role of Defense Counsel

(a) The paramount obligation of criminal defense counsel is to provide zealous and quality representation to their clients at all stages of the criminal process. Attorneys also have an obligation to abide by ethical norms and act in accordance with the rules of the court.

Guideline 1.2 Education, Training and Experience of Defense Counsel

(a) To provide quality representation, counsel must be familiar with the substantive criminal law and the law of criminal procedure and its application in the particular jurisdiction. Counsel has a continuing obligation to stay abreast of changes and developments in the law. Where appropriate, counsel should also be informed of the practices of the specific judge before whom a case is pending.

(b) Prior to handling a criminal matter, counsel should have sufficient experience or training to provide quality representation.

Guideline 1.3 General Duties of Defense Counsel

(a) Before agreeing to act as counsel or accepting appointment by a court, counsel has an obligation to make sure that counsel has available sufficient time, resources, knowledge and experience to offer quality representation to a defendant in a particular matter. If it later appears that counsel is unable to offer quality representation in the case, counsel should move to withdraw.

(b) Counsel must be alert to all potential and actual conflicts of interest that would impair counsel's ability to represent a client. Where appropriate, counsel may be obliged to seek an advisory opinion on any potential conflicts.

(c) Counsel has the obligation to keep the client informed of the progress of the case, where it is possible to do so.

Guideline 2.1 General Obligations of Counsel Regarding Pretrial Release

The attorney has an obligation to attempt to secure the pretrial release of the client under the conditions most favorable and acceptable to the client.

Guideline 2.2 Initial Interview

(a) Preparation:

Prior to conducting the initial interview the attorney, should, where possible:

(1) be familiar with the elements of the offense and the potential punishment, where the charges against the client are already known;

(2) obtain copies of any relevant documents which are available, including copies of any charging documents, recommendations and reports made by bail agencies concerning pretrial release, and law enforcement reports that might be available;

(3) be familiar with the legal criteria for determining pretrial release and the procedures that will be followed in setting those conditions;

(4) be familiar with the different types of pretrial release conditions the court may set and whether private or public agencies are available to act as a custodian for the client's release;

(5) be familiar with any procedures available for reviewing the trial judge's setting of bail.

(b) The Interview:

(1) The purpose of the initial interview is both to acquire information from the client concerning pretrial release and also to provide the client with information concerning the case. Counsel should ensure at this and all successive interviews and proceedings that barriers to communication, such as differences in language or literacy, be overcome.

(2) Information that should be acquired includes, but is not limited to:

(A) the client's ties to the community, including the length of time he or she has lived at the current and former addresses, family relationships, immigration status (if applicable), employment record and history;

(B) the client's physical and mental health, educational and armed services records;

(C) the client's immediate medical needs;

(D) the client's past criminal record, if any, including arrests and convictions for adult and juvenile offenses and prior record of court appearances or failure to appear in court; counsel should also determine whether the client has any pending charges and also whether he or she is on probation or parole and the client's past or present performance under supervision;

(E) the ability of the client to meet any financial conditions of release;

(F) the names of individuals or other sources that counsel can contact to verify the information provided by the client; counsel should obtain the permission of the client before contacting these individuals;

(3) Information to be provided the client includes, but is not limited to:

(A) an explanation of the procedures that will be followed in setting the conditions of pretrial release;

(B) an explanation of the type of information that will be requested in any interview that may be conducted by a pretrial release agency and also an explanation that the client should not make statements concerning the offense;

(C) an explanation of the attorney-client privilege and instructions not to talk to anyone about the facts of the case without first consulting with the attorney;

(D) the charges and the potential penalties;

(E) a general procedural overview of the progression of the case, where possible;

(c) Supplemental Information:

Whenever possible, counsel should use the initial interview to gather additional information relevant to preparation of the defense. Such information may include, but is not limited to:

(1) the facts surrounding the charges against the client;

(2) any evidence of improper police investigative practices or prosecutorial conduct which affects the client's rights;

(3) any possible witnesses who should be located;

(4) any evidence that should be preserved;

(5) where appropriate, evidence of the client's competence to stand trial and/or mental state at the time of the offense.

Guideline 2.3 Pretrial Release Proceedings

(a) Counsel should be prepared to present to the appropriate judicial officer a statement of the factual circumstances and the legal criteria supporting release and, where appropriate, to make a proposal concerning conditions of release.

(b) Where the client is not able to obtain release under the conditions set by the court, counsel should consider pursuing modification of the conditions of release under the procedures available.

(c) If the court sets conditions of release which require the posting of a monetary bond or the posting of real property as collateral for release, counsel should make sure the client understands the available options and the procedures that must be followed in posting such assets. Where appropriate, counsel should advise the client and others acting in his or her behalf how to properly post such assets.

(d) Where the client is incarcerated and unable to obtain pretrial release, counsel should alert the court to any special medical or psychiatric and security needs of the client and request that the court direct the appropriate officials to take steps to meet such special needs.

Guideline 3.1 Presentment and Arraignment

The attorney should preserve the client's rights at the initial appearance on the charges by:

(1) entering a plea of not guilty in all but the most extraordinary circumstances where a sound tactical reason exists for not doing so;

(2) requesting a trial by jury, if failure to do so may result in the client being precluded from later obtaining a trial by jury;

(3) seeking a determination of whether there is probable cause to support the charges alleged and, if there is not probable cause, or other grounds exist for dismissal, requesting that the court dismiss the charge or charges;

(4) requesting a timely preliminary hearing if it is provided for under the rules of the court unless there is a sound tactical reason for not to do so.

Guideline 3.2 Preliminary Hearing

(a) Where the client is entitled to a preliminary hearing, the attorney should take steps to see that the hearing is conducted timely unless there are strategic reasons for not doing so.

(b) In preparing for the preliminary hearing, the attorney should become familiar with:

(1) the elements of each of the offenses alleged;

(2) the law of the jurisdiction for establishing probable cause;

(3) factual information which is available concerning probable cause.

Guideline 3.3 Prosecution Requests for Non-Testimonial Evidence

The attorney should be familiar with the law governing the prosecution's power to require a defendant to provide non-testimonial evidence (such as handwriting exemplars and physical specimens), the circumstances in which a defendant may refuse to do so, the extent to which counsel may participate in the proceedings, and the record of the proceedings required to be maintained.

Guideline 4.1 Investigation

(a) Counsel has a duty to conduct an independent investigation regardless of the accused's admissions or statements to the lawyer of facts constituting guilt. The investigation should be conducted as promptly as possible.

(b) Sources of investigative information may include the following:

(1) Charging documents

Copies of all charging documents in the case should be obtained and examined to determine the specific charges that have been brought against the accused. The relevant statutes and precedents should be examined to identify:

(A) the elements of the offense(s) with which the accused is charged;

(B) the defenses, ordinary and affirmative, that may be available;

(C) any defects in the charging documents, constitutional or otherwise, such as statute of limitations or double jeopardy.

(2) the accused

If not previously conducted, an in-depth interview of the client should be conducted as soon as possible and appropriate after appointment or retention of counsel. The interview with the client should be used to:

(A) seek information concerning the incident or events giving rise to the charge(s) or improper police investigative practices or prosecutorial conduct which affects the client's rights; (B) explore the existence of other potential sources of information relating to the offense;

(C) collect information relevant to sentencing.

(3) potential witnesses

Counsel should consider whether to interview the potential witnesses, including any complaining witnesses and others adverse to the accused. If the attorney conducts such interviews of potential witnesses, he or she should attempt to do so in the presence of a third person who will be available, if necessary, to testify as a defense witness at trial. Alternatively, counsel should have an investigator conduct such interviews.

(4) the police and prosecution

Counsel should make efforts to secure information in the possession of the prosecution or law enforcement authorities, including police reports. Where necessary, counsel should pursue such efforts through formal and informal discovery unless a sound tactical reason exists for not doing so.

(5) physical evidence

Where appropriate, counsel should make a prompt request to the police or investigative agency for any physical evidence or expert reports relevant to the offense or sentencing.

(6) the scene

Where appropriate, counsel should attempt to view the scene of the alleged offense. This should be done under circumstances as similar as possible to those existing at the time of the alleged incident (e.g., weather, time of day, and lighting conditions).

(7) expert assistance

Counsel should secure the assistance of experts where it is necessary or appropriate to:

- (A) the preparation of the defense;
- (B) adequate understanding of the prosecution's case;
- (C) rebut the prosecution's case.

Guideline 4.2 Formal and Informal Discovery

(a) Counsel has a duty to pursue as soon as practicable discovery procedures provided by the rules of the jurisdiction and to pursue such informal discovery methods as may be available to supplement the factual investigation of the case. In considering discovery requests, counsel should take into account that such requests may trigger reciprocal discovery obligations.

(b) Counsel should consider seeking discovery of the following items:

- (1) potential exculpatory information;
- (2) the names and addresses of all prosecution witnesses, their prior statements, and criminal record, if any;
- (3) all oral and/ or written statements by the accused, and the details of the circumstances under which the statements were made;
- (4) the prior criminal record of the accused and any evidence of other misconduct that the government may intend to use against the accused;
- (5) all books, papers, documents, photographs, tangible objects, buildings or places, or copies, descriptions, or other representations, or portions thereof, relevant to the case;
- (6) all results or reports of relevant physical or mental examinations, and of scientific tests or experiments, or copies thereof;
- (7) statements of co-defendants;

Guideline 4.3 Theory of the Case

During investigation and trial preparation, counsel should develop and continually reassess a theory of the case.

Guideline 5.1 The Decision to File Pretrial Motions

(a) Counsel should consider filing an appropriate motion whenever there exists a good-faith reason to believe that the applicable law may entitle the defendant to relief which the court has discretion to grant.

(b) The decision to file pretrial motions should be made after thorough investigation, and after considering the applicable law in light of the circumstances of each case.

Among the issues that counsel should consider addressing in a pretrial motion are:

- (1) the pretrial custody of the accused;
- (2) the constitutionality of the implicated statute or statutes;
- (3) the potential defects in the charging process;
- (4) the sufficiency of the charging document;
- (5) the propriety and prejudice of any joinder of charges or defendants in the charging document;
- (6) the discovery obligations of the prosec ution and the reciprocal discovery obligations of the defense;

(7) the suppression of evidence gathered as the result of violations of the Fourth, Fifth or Sixth Amendments to the United States Constitution, or corresponding or additional state constitutional provisions, including;

(A) the fruits of illegal searches or seizures;

(B) involuntary statements or confessions;

(C) statements or confessions obtained in violation of the accused's right to counsel, or privilege against self-incrimination;

(D) unreliable identification evidence which would give rise to a substantial likelihood of irreparable misidentification.

(8) suppression of evidence gathered in violation of any right, duty or privilege arising out of state or local law;

(9) access to resources which or experts who may be denied to an accused because of his or her indigence;

(10) the defendant's right to a speedy trial;

(11) the defendant's right to a continuance in order to adequately prepare his or her case;

(12) matters of trial evidence which may be appropriately litigated by means of a pretrial motion in limine;

(13) matters of trial or courtroom procedure.

(c) Counsel should withdraw or decide not to file a motion only after careful consideration, and only after determining whether the filing of a motion may be necessary to protect the defendant's rights against later claims of waiver or procedural default. In making this decision, counsel should remember that a motion may have many objectives in addition to the ultimate relief requested by the motion. Counsel thus should consider whether:

(1) the time deadline for filing pretrial motions warrants filing a motion to preserve the client's rights, pending the results of further investigation;

(2) changes in the governing law might occur after the filing deadline which could enhance the likelihood that relief ought to be granted;

(3) later changes in the strategic and tactical posture of the defense case may occur which affect the significance of potential pretrial motions.

Guideline 5.2 Filing and Arguing Pretrial Motions

(a) Motions should be filed in a timely manner, should comport with the formal requirements of the court rules and should succinctly inform the court of the authority relied upon. In filing a pretrial motion, counsel should be aware of the effect it might have upon the defendant's speedy trial rights.

(b) When a hearing on a motion requires the taking of evidence, counsel's preparation for the evidentiary hearing should include:

(1) investigation, discovery and research relevant to the claim advanced;

(2) the subpoenaing of all helpful evidence and the subpoenaing and preparation of all helpful witnesses;

(3) full understanding of the burdens of proof, evidentiary principles and trial court procedures applying to the hearing, including the benefits and costs of having the client testify.

Guideline 5.3 Subsequent Filing of Pretrial Motions

Counsel should be prepared to raise during the subsequent proceedings any issue which is appropriately raised pretrial, but could not have been so raised because the facts supporting the motion were unknown or not reasonably available. Further, counsel should be prepared to renew a pretrial motion if new supporting information is disclosed in later proceedings.

Guideline 6.1 The Plea Negotiation Process and the Duties of Counsel

(a) Counsel should explore with the client the possibility and desirability of reaching a negotiated disposition of the charges rather than proceeding to a trial and in doing so should fully explain the rights that would be waived by a decision to enter a plea and not to proceed to trial.

(b) Counsel should ordinarily obtain the consent of the client before entering into any plea negotiation.

(c) Counsel should keep the client fully informed of any continued plea discussion and negotiations and convey to the accused any offers made by the prosecution for a negotiated settlement.

(d) Counsel should not accept any plea agreement without the client's express authorization.

(e) The existence of ongoing tentative plea negotiations with the prosecution should not prevent counsel from taking steps necessary to preserve a defense.

Guideline 6.2 The Contents of the Negotiations

(a) In order to develop an overall negotiation plan, counsel should be fully aware of, and make sure the client is fully aware of: (1) the maximum term of imprisonment and fine or restitution that may be ordered, and any mandatory punishment or sentencing guideline system;

(2) the possibility of forfeiture of assets;

(3) other consequences of conviction such as deportation, and civil disabilities;

(4) any possible and likely sentence enhancements or parole consequences;

(5) the possible and likely place and manner of confinement;

(6) the effect of good-time credits on the sentence of the client and the general range of sentences for similar offenses committed by defendants with similar backgrounds.

(b) In developing a negotiation strategy, counsel should be completely familiar with:

(1) concessions that the client might offer the prosecution as part of a negotiated settlement, including, but not limited to:

(A) not to proceed to trial on the merits of the charges;

(B) to decline from asserting or litigating any particular pretrial motions;

(C) an agreement to fulfill specified restitution conditions and/or participation in community work or service programs, or in rehabilitation or other programs.

(D) providing the prosecution with assistance in prosecuting or investigating the present case or other alleged criminal activity.

(2) benefits the client might obtain from a negotiated settlement, including, but not limited to an agreement:

(A) that the prosecution will not oppose the client's release on bail pending sentencing or appeal;

(B) that the defendant may enter a conditional plea to preserve the right to litigate and contest certain issues affecting the validity of a conviction;

(C) to dismiss or reduce one or more of the charged offenses either immediately, or upon completion of a deferred prosecution agreement;

(D) that the defendant will not be subject to further investigation or prosecution for uncharged alleged criminal conduct;

(E) that the defendant will receive, with the agreement of the court, a specified sentence or sanction or a sentence or sanction within a specified range;

(F) that the prosecution will take, or refrain from taking, at the time of sentencing and/or in communications with the preparer of the official presentence report, a specified position with respect to the sanction to be imposed on the client by the court.

(G) that the prosecution will not present, at the time of sentencing and/or in communications with the preparer of the official presentence report, certain information.

(H) that the defendant will receive, or the prosecution will recommend, specific benefits concerning the accused's place and/or manner of confinement and/or release on parole and the information concerning the accused's offense and alleged behavior that may be considered in determining the accused's date of release from incarceration.

(c) In conducting plea negotiations, counsel should be familiar with:

(1) the various types of pleas that may be agreed to, including a plea of guilty, a plea of nolo contendere, a conditional plea of guilty and a plea in which the defendant is not required to personally acknowledge his or her guilt (Alford plea);

(2) the advantages and disadvantages of each available plea according to the circumstances of the case;

(3) whether the plea agreement is binding on the court and prison and parole authorities.

(d) In conducting plea negotiations, counsel should attempt to become familiar with the practices and policies of the particular jurisdiction, judge and prosecuting authority which may affect the content and likely results of negotiated plea bargains.

Guideline 6.3 The Decision to Enter a Plea of Guilty

(a) Counsel should inform the client of any tentative negotiated agreement reached with the prosecution, and explain to the client the full content of the agreement, and the advantages and disadvantages and the potential consequences of the agreement.

(b) The decision to enter a plea of guilty rests solely with the client, and counsel should not attempt to unduly influence that decision.

Guideline 6.4 Entry of the Plea before the Court

(a) Prior to the entry of the plea, counsel should:

(1) make certain that the client understands the rights he or she will waive by entering the plea and that the client's decision to waive those rights is knowing, voluntary and intelligent;

(2) make certain that the client fully and completely understands the conditions and limits of the plea agreement and the maximum punishment, sanctions and other consequences the accused will be exposed to by entering a plea;

(3) explain to the client the nature of the plea hearing and prepare the client for the role he or she will play in the hearing, including answering questions of the judge and providing a statement concerning the offense.

(b) When entering the plea, counsel should make sure that the full content and conditions of the plea agreement are placed on the record before the court.

(c) After entry of the plea, counsel should be prepared to address the issue of release pending sentencing. Where the client has been released pretrial, counsel should be prepared to argue and persuade the court that the client's continued release is warranted and appropriate. Where the client is in custody prior to the entry of the plea, counsel should, where practicable, advocate for and present to the court all reasons warranting the client's release on bail pending sentencing.

Guideline 7.1 General Trial Preparation

(a) The decision to proceed to trial with or without a jury rests solely with the client. Counsel should discuss the relevant strategic considerations of this decision with the client.

(b) Where appropriate, counsel should have the following materials available at the time of trial:

- (1) copies of all relevant documents filed in the case;
- (2) relevant documents prepared by investigators;
- (3) voir dire questions;
- (4) outline or draft of opening statement;
- (5) cross-examination plans for all possible prosecution witnesses;
- (6) direct examination plans for all prospective defense witnesses;
- (7) copies of defense subpoenas;
- (8) prior statements of all prosecution witnesses (e.g., transcripts, police reports);
- (9) prior statements of all defense witnesses;
- (10) reports from defense experts;
- (11) a list of all defense exhibits, and the witnesses through whom they will be introduced;
- (12) originals and copies of all documentary exhibits;
- (13) proposed jury instructions with supporting case citations;
- (14) copies of all relevant statutes and cases;
- (15) outline or draft of closing argument.

(c) Counsel should be fully informed as to the rules of evidence, and the law relating to all stages of the trial process, and should be familiar with legal and evidentiary issues that can reasonably be anticipated to arise in the trial.

(d) Counsel should decide if it is beneficial to secure an advance ruling on issues likely to arise at trial (e.g., use of prior convictions to impeach the defendant) and, where appropriate, counsel should prepare motions and memoranda for such advance rulings.

(e) Throughout the trial process counsel should endeavor to establish a proper record for appellate review. As part of this effort, counsel should request, whenever necessary, that all trial proceedings be recorded.

(f) Where appropriate, counsel should advise the client as to suitable courtroom dress and demeanor. If the client is incarcerated, counsel should be alert to the possible prejudicial effects of the client appearing before the jury in jail or other inappropriate clothing.

(g) Counsel should plan with the client the most convenient system for conferring throughout the trial. Where necessary, counsel should seek a court order to have the client available for conferences.

(h) Throughout preparation and trial, counsel should consider the potential effects that particular actions may have upon sentencing if there is a finding of guilt.

Guideline 7.2 Voir Dire and Jury Selection

(a) *Preparation

(1) Counsel should be familiar with the procedures by which a jury venire is selected in the particular jurisdiction and should be alert to any potential legal challenges to the composition or selection of the venire.

(2) Counsel should be familiar with the local practices and the individual trial judge's procedures for selecting a jury from a panel of the venire, and should be alert to any potential legal challenges to these procedures.

(3) Prior to jury selection, counsel should seek to obtain a prospective juror list.

(4) Where appropriate, counsel should develop voir dire questions in advance of trial. Counsel should tailor voir dire questions to the specific case. Among the purposes voir dire questions should be designed to serve are the following:

(A) to elicit information about the attitudes of individual jurors, which will inform about peremptory strikes and challenges for cause;

(B) to convey to the panel certain legal principles which are critical to the defense case;

(C) to preview the case for the jurors so as to lessen the impact of damaging information which is likely to come to their attention during the trial;

(D) to present the client and the defense case in a favorable light, without prematurely disclosing information about the defense case to the prosecutor.

(E) to establish a relationship with the jury, when the voir dire is conducted by an attorney.

(5) Counsel should be familiar with the law concerning mandatory and discretionary voir dire inquiries so as to be able to defend any request to ask particular questions of prospective jurors.

(6) Counsel should be familiar with the law concerning challenges for cause and peremptory strikes. Counsel should also be aware of any local rules concerning whether peremptory challenges need to be exhausted in order to preserve for appeal any challenges for cause which have been denied.

(7) Where appropriate, counsel should consider whether to seek expert assistance in the jury selection process.

(b) *Examining the Prospective Jurors

(1) Counsel should consider seeking permission to personally voir dire the panel. If the court conducts voir dire, counsel should consider submitting proposed questions to be incorporated into the court's voir dire.

(2) Counsel should take all steps necessary to protect the voir dire record for appeal, including, where appropriate, filing a copy of the proposed voir dire questions or reading proposed questions into the record.

(3) If the voir dire questions may elicit sensitive answers, counsel should consider requesting that questioning be conducted outside the presence of the remaining jurors and that the court, rather than counsel, conduct the voir dire as to those sensitive questions.

(4) In a group voir dire, counsel should avoid asking questions which may elicit responses which are likely to prejudice other prospective jurors.

(c) Challenges

(1) Counsel should consider challenging for cause all persons about whom a legitimate argument can be made for actual prejudice or bias relevant to the case when it is likely to benefit the client.

Guideline 7.3 Opening Statement

(a) Prior to delivering an opening statement, counsel should ask for sequestration of witnesses, unless a strategic reason exists for not doing so.

(b) Counsel should be familiar with the law of the jurisdiction and the individual trial judge's rules regarding the permissible content of an opening statement.

(c) Counsel should consider the strategic advantages and disadvantages of disclosure of particular information during opening statement and of deferring the opening statement until the beginning of the defense case.

(d) Counsel's objective in making an opening statement may include the following:

(1) to provide an overview of the defense case;

(2) to identify the weaknesses of the prosecution's case;

(3) to emphasize the prosecution's burden of proof;

(4) to summarize the testimony of witnesses, and the role of each in relationship to the entire case;

(5) to describe the exhibits which will be introduced and the role of each in relationship to the entire case;

(6) to clarify the jurors' responsibilities;

(7) to state the ultimate inferences which counsel wishes the jury to draw.

(e) Counsel should consider incorporating the promises of proof the prosecutor makes to the jury during opening statement in the defense summation.

(f) Whenever the prosecutor oversteps the bounds of a proper opening statement, counsel should consider objecting, requesting a mistrial, or seeking cautionary instructions, unless tactical considerations weigh against any such objections or requests. Such tactical considerations may include, but are not limited to:

(1) the significance of the prosecutor's error;

(2) the possibility that an objection might enhance the significance of the information in the jury's mind;

(3) whether there are any rules made by the judge against objecting during the other attorney's opening argument.

Guideline 7.4 Confronting the Prosecution's Case

(a) Counsel should attempt to anticipate weaknesses in the prosecution's proof and consider researching and preparing corresponding motions for judgment of acquittal.

(b) Counsel should consider the advantages and disadvantages of entering into stipulations concerning the prosecution's case.

(c) In preparing for cross-examination, counsel should be familiar with the applicable law and procedures concerning cross-examinations and impeachment of witnesses. In order to develop material for impeachment or to discover documents subject to disclosure, counsel should be prepared to question witnesses as to the existence of prior statements which they may have made or adopted.

(d) In preparing for cross-examination, counsel should:

(1) consider the need to integrate cross-examination, the theory of the defense and closing argument;

(2) consider whether cross-examination of each individual witness is likely to generate helpful information;

(3) anticipate those witnesses the prosecutor might call in its case-in-chief or in rebuttal;

(4) consider a cross-examination plan for each of the anticipated witnesses;

(5) be alert to inconsistencies in a witness' testimony;

(6) be alert to possible variations in witnesses' testimony;

(7) review all prior statements of the witnesses and any prior relevant testimony of the prospective witnesses;

(8) where appropriate, review relevant statutes and local police regulations for possible use in cross-examining police witnesses;

(9) be alert to issues relating to witness credibility, including bias and motive for testifying.

(e) Counsel should consider conducting a voir dire examination of potential prosecution witnesses who may not be competent to give particular testimony, including expert witnesses whom the prosecutor may call. Counsel should be aware of the applicable law of the jurisdiction concerning competency of witnesses in general and admission of expert testimony in particular in order to be able to raise appropriate objections.

(f) Before beginning cross-examination, counsel should ascertain whether the prosecutor has provided copies of all prior statements of the witnesses as required by applicable law. If counsel does not receive prior statements of prosecution witnesses until they have completed direct examination, counsel should request adequate time to review these documents before commencing cross-examination.

(g) Where appropriate, at the close of the prosecution's case and out of the presence of the jury, counsel should move for a judgment of acquittal on each count charged. Counsel should request, when necessary, that the court immediately rule on the motion, in order that counsel may make an informed decision about whether to present a defense case.

Guideline 7.5 Presenting the Defense Case

(a) Counsel should develop, in consultation with the client, an overall defense strategy. In deciding on defense strategy, counsel should consider whether the client's interests are best served by not putting on a defense case, and instead relying on the prosecution's failure to meet its constitutional burden of proving each element beyond a reasonable doubt.

(b) Counsel should discuss with the client all of the considerations relevant to the client's decision to testify.

(c) Counsel should be aware of the elements of any affirmative defense and know whether, under the applicable law of the jurisdiction, the client bears a burden of persuasion or a burden of production.

(d) In preparing for presentation of a defense case, counsel should, where appropriate:

(1) develop a plan for direct examination of each potential defense witness;

(2) determine the implications that the order of witnesses may have on the defense case;

(3) consider the possible use of character witnesses;

(4) consider the need for expert witnesses.

(e) In developing and presenting the defense case, counsel should consider the implications it may have for a rebuttal by the prosecutor.

(f) Counsel should prepare all witnesses for direct and possible cross-examination. Where appropriate, counsel should also advise witnesses of suitable courtroom dress and demeanor.

(g) Counsel should conduct redirect examination as appropriate.

(h) At the close of the defense case, counsel should renew the motion for judgment of acquittal on each charged count.

Guideline 7.6 Closing Argument

(a) Counsel should be familiar with the substantive limits on both prosecution and defense summation.

(b) Counsel should be familiar with the local rules and the individual judge's practice concerning time limits and objections during closing argument, and provisions for rebuttal argument by the prosecution.

(c) In developing closing argument, counsel should review the proceedings to determine what aspects can be used in support of defense summation and, where appropriate, should consider:

(1) highlighting weaknesses in the prosecution's case;

(2) describing favorable inferences to be drawn from the evidence;

(3) incorporating into the argument:

(A) helpful testimony from direct and cross-examinations;

(B) verbatim instructions drawn from the jury charge;

(C) responses to anticipated prosecution arguments;

(4) the effects of the defense argument on the prosecutor's rebuttal argument.

(d) Whenever the prosecutor exceeds the scope of permissible argument, counsel should consider objecting, requesting a mistrial, or seeking cautionary instructions unless tactical considerations suggest otherwise. Such tactical considerations may include, but are not limited to:

(1) whether counsel believes that the case will result in a favorable verdict for the client;

(2) the need to preserve the objection for a double jeopardy motion;

(3) the possibility that an objection might enhance the significance of the information in the jury's mind.

Guideline 7.7 Jury Instructions

(a) Counsel should be familiar with the local rules and the individual judges' practices concerning ruling on proposed instructions, charging the jury, use of standard charges and preserving objections to the instructions.

(b) Where appropriate, counsel should submit modifications of the standard jury instructions in light of the particular circumstances of the case, including the desirability of seeking a verdict on a lesser included offense. Where possible, counsel should provide caselaw in support of the proposed instructions.

(c) Where appropriate, counsel should object to and argue against improper instructions proposed by the prosecution.

(d) If the court refuses to adopt instructions requested by counsel, or gives instructions over counsel's objection, counsel should take all steps necessary to preserve the record, including, where appropriate, filing a copy of proposed instructions or reading proposed instructions into the record.

(e) During delivery of the charge, counsel should be alert to any deviations from the judge's planned instructions, object to deviations unfavorable to the client, and, if necessary, request additional or curative instructions.

(f) If the court proposes giving supplemental instructions to the jury, either upon request of the jurors or upon their failure to reach a verdict, counsel should request that the judge state the proposed charge to counsel before it is delivered to the jury.

Guideline 8.1 Obligations of Counsel in Sentencing

(a) Among counsel's obligations in the sentencing process are:

(1) where a defendant chooses not to proceed to trial, to ensure that a plea agreement is negotiated with consideration of the sentencing, correctional, and financial implications;

(2) to ensure the client is not harmed by inaccurate information or information that is not properly before the court in determining the sentence to be imposed;

(3) to ensure all reasonably available mitigating and favorable information, which is likely to benefit the client, is presented to the court;

(4) to develop a plan which seeks to achieve the least restrictive and burdensome sentencing alternative that is most acceptable to the client, and which can reasonably be obtained based on the facts and circumstances of the offense, the defendant's background, the applicable sentencing provisions, and other information pertinent to the sentencing decision;

(5) to ensure all information presented to the court which may harm the client and which is not shown to be accurate and truthful or is otherwise improper is stricken from the text of the presentence investigation report before distribution of the report.

(6) to consider the need for and availability of sentencing specialists, and to seek the assistance of such specialists whenever possible and warranted.

Guideline 8.2 Sentencing Options, Consequences and Procedures

(a) Counsel should be familiar with the sentencing provisions and options applicable to the case, including:

- (1) any sentencing guideline structure;
- (2) deferred sentence, judgment without a finding, and diversionary programs;
- (3) expungement and sealing of records;
- (4) probation or suspension of sentence and permissible conditions of probation;
- (5) restitution;
- (6) fines;
- (7) court costs;
- (8) imprisonment including any mandatory minimum requirements;
- (9) confinement in mental institution;
- (10) forfeiture.

(b) Counsel should be familiar with direct and collateral consequences of the sentence and judgment, including:

- (1) credit for pre-trial detention;
- (2) parole eligibility and applicable parole release ranges;
- (3) effect of good-time credits on the client's release date and how those credits are earned and calculated;
- (4) place of confinement and level of security and classification;
- (5) self-surrender to place of custody;
- (6) eligibility for correctional programs and furloughs;
- (7) available drug rehabilitation programs, psychiatric treatment, and health care;
- (8) deportation;
- (9) use of the conviction for sentence enhancement in future proceedings;
- (10) loss of civil rights;
- (11) impact of a fine or restitution and any resulting civil liability;
- (12) restrictions on or loss of license.

(c) Counsel should be familiar with the sentencing procedures, including:

- (1) the effect that plea negotiations may have upon the sentencing discretion of the court;
- (2) the procedural operation of any sentencing guideline system;
- (3) the effect of a judicial recommendation against deportation;
- (4) the practices of the officials who prepare the presentence report and the defendant's rights in that process;
- (5) the access to the presentence report by counsel and the defendant;
- (6) the prosecution's practice in preparing a memorandum on punishment;
- (7) the use of a sentencing memorandum by the defense;
- (8) the opportunity to challenge information presented to the court for sentencing purposes;
- (9) the availability of an evidentiary hearing to challenge information and the applicable rules of evidence and burdens of proof at such a hearing;
- (10) the participation that victims and prosecution or defense witnesses may have in the sentencing proceedings.

Guideline 8.3 Preparation for Sentencing

(a) In preparing for sentencing, counsel should consider the need to:

- (1) inform the client of the applicable sentencing requirements, options, and alternatives, and the likely and possible consequences of the sentencing alternatives;

(2) maintain regular contact with the client prior to the sentencing hearing, and inform the client of the steps being taken in preparation for sentencing;

(3) obtain from the client relevant information concerning such subjects as his or her background and personal history, prior criminal record, employment history and skills, education, medical history and condition, and financial status, and obtain from the client sources through which the information provided can be corroborated;

(4) ensure the client has adequate time to examine the presentence report;

(5) inform the client of his or her right to speak at the sentencing proceeding and assist the client in preparing the statement, if any, to be made to the court, considering the possible consequences that any admission of guilt may have upon an appeal, subsequent retrial or trial on other offenses;

(6) prepare the client to be interviewed by the official preparing the presentence report;

(7) inform the client of the effects that admissions and other statements may have upon an appeal, retrial, parole proceedings, or other judicial proceedings, such as forfeiture or restitution proceedings;

(8) inform the client of the sentence or range of sentences counsel will ask the court to consider; if the client and counsel disagree as to the sentence or sentences to be urged upon the court, counsel shall inform the client of his or her right to speak personally for a particular sentence or sentences;

(9) collect documents and affidavits to support the defense position and, where relevant, prepare witnesses to testify at the sentencing hearing; where necessary, counsel should specifically request the opportunity to present tangible and testimonial evidence.

Guideline 8.4 The Official Presentence Report

(a) Counsel should be familiar with the procedures concerning the preparation, submission, and verification of the presentence investigation report or similar document. In addition, counsel should:

(1) determine whether a presentence report will be prepared and submitted to the court prior to sentencing; where preparation of the report is optional, counsel should consider the strategic implications of requesting that a report be prepared;

(2) provide to the official preparing the report relevant information favorable to the client, including, where appropriate, the defendant's version of the offense;

(3) review the completed report;

(4) take appropriate steps to ensure that erroneous or misleading information which may harm the client is deleted from the report;

(5) take appropriate steps to preserve and protect the client's interests where the defense challenges information in the presentence report as being erroneous or misleading and:

(A) the court refuses to hold a hearing on a disputed allegation adverse to the defendant;

(B) the prosecution fails to prove an allegation;

(C) the court finds an allegation not proved.

Such steps include requesting that a new report be prepared with the challenged or unproved information deleted before the report or memorandum is distributed to correctional and/or parole officials.

(6) Where appropriate counsel should request permission to see copies of the report to be distributed to be sure that the information challenged has actually been removed from the report or memorandum.

Guideline 8.5 The Prosecution's Sentencing Position

(a) Counsel should attempt to determine, unless there is a sound tactical reason for not doing so, whether the prosecution will advocate that a particular type or length of sentence be imposed.

(b) If a written sentencing memorandum is submitted by the prosecution, counsel should request to see the memorandum and verify that the information presented is accurate; if the memorandum contains erroneous or misleading information, counsel should take appropriate steps to correct the information unless there is a sound strategic reason for not doing so.

(c) If the defense request to see the prosecution memorandum is denied, an application to examine the document should be made to the court or a motion made to exclude consideration of the report by the court and to prevent distribution of the memorandum to parole and correctional officials.

Guideline 8.6 The Defense Sentencing Memorandum

(a) Counsel should prepare and present to the court a defense sentencing memorandum where there is a strategic reason for doing so. Among the topics counsel may wish to include in the memorandum are:

(1) challenges to incorrect or incomplete information in the official presentence report and any prosecution sentencing memorandum;

(2) challenges to improperly drawn inferences and inappropriate characterizations in the official presentence report and any prosecution sentencing memorandum;

(3) information contrary to that before the court which is supported by affidavits, letters, and public records;

(4) information favorable to the defendant concerning such matters as the offense, mitigating factors and relative culpability, prior offenses, personal background, employment record and opportunities, education background, and family and financial status;

(5) information which would support a sentencing disposition other than incarceration, such as the potential for rehabilitation or the nonviolent nature of the crime;

(6) information concerning the availability of treatment programs, community treatment facilities, and community service work opportunities;

(7) presentation of a sentencing proposal.

Guideline 8.7 The Sentencing Process

(a) Counsel should be prepared at the sentencing proceeding to take the steps necessary to advocate fully for the requested sentence and to protect the client's interest.

(b) Counsel should be familiar with the procedures available for obtaining an evidentiary hearing before the court in connection with the imposition of sentence.

(c) In the event there will be disputed facts before the court at sentencing, counsel should consider requesting an evidentiary hearing. Where a sentencing hearing will be held, counsel should ascertain who has the burden of proving a fact unfavorable to the defendant, be prepared to object if the burden is placed on the defense, and be prepared to present evidence, including testimony of witnesses, to contradict erroneous or misleading information unfavorable to the defendant.

(d) Where information favorable to the defendant will be disputed or challenged, counsel should be prepared to present supporting evidence, including testimony of witnesses, to establish the facts favorable to the defendant.

(e) Where the court has the authority to do so, counsel should request specific orders or recommendations from the court concerning the place of confinement, parole eligibility, psychiatric treatment or drug rehabilitation, permission for the client to surrender directly to the place of confinement and against deportation of the defendant.

Guideline 9.1 Motion for a New Trial

(a) Counsel should be familiar with the procedures available to request a new trial including the time period for filing such a motion, the effect it has upon the time to file a notice of appeal, and the grounds that can be raised.

(b) When a judgment of guilty has been entered against the defendant after trial, counsel should consider whether it is appropriate to file a motion for a new trial with the trial court. In deciding whether to file such a motion, the factors counsel should consider include:

(1) The likelihood of success of the motion, given the nature of the error or errors that can be raised;

(2) the effect that such a motion might have upon the defendant's appellate rights, including whether the filing of such a motion is necessary to, or will assist in, preserving the defendant's right to raise on appeal the issues that might be raised in the new trial motion.

Guideline 9.2 Right to Appeal

(a) Counsel should inform the defendant of his or her right to appeal the judgment of the court and the action that must be taken to perfect an appeal. In circumstances where the defendant wants to file an appeal but is unable to do so without the assistance of counsel, the attorney should file the notice in accordance with the rules of the court and take such other steps as are necessary to preserve the defendant's right to appeal, such as ordering transcripts of the trial proceedings.

(b) Counsel's advice to the defendant should include an explanation of the right to appeal the judgment of guilty and, in those jurisdictions where it is permitted, the right to appeal the sentence imposed by the court.

(c) Where the defendant takes an appeal, trial counsel should cooperate in providing information to appellate counsel concerning the proceedings in the trial court.

Guideline 9.3 Bail Pending Appeal

(a) Where a client indicates a desire to appeal the judgment and/or sentence of the court, counsel should inform the client of any right that may exist to be released on bail pending the disposition of the appeal.

(b) Where an appeal is taken and the client requests bail pending appeal, trial counsel should cooperate with appellate counsel in providing information to pursue the request for bail.

Guideline 9.4 Self-Surrender

Where a custodial sentence has been imposed, counsel should consider requesting a stay of execution of the judgment to permit the client to report directly to the place of confinement.

Guideline 9.5 Sentence Reduction

Counsel should inform the client of procedures available for requesting a discretionary review of, or reduction in, the sentence imposed by the trial court, including any time limitations that apply to such a request.

Guideline 9.6 Expungement or Sealing of Record

Counsel should inform the client of any procedures available for requesting that the record of conviction be expunged or sealed.
