
“STAND YOUR GROUND” KILLS

How These NRA-Backed Laws Promote Racist Violence

JULY 2020

Contents

3	Introduction
5	Distorting the Law of Self-Defense
9	Exacerbating Systemic Racism
11	Exacerbating Gender Bias
12	Elevating Homicide Rates
13	Conclusion
14	Stand Your Ground Laws State by State
17	Endnotes

Introduction

In July 2018 near Clearwater, Florida, 28-year-old Markeis McGlockton was killed in front of his high school sweetheart and their three young children by a man who claimed that he was standing his ground.¹ Markeis was unarmed and Black. His shooter was armed and white.

The fatal shooting of Markeis McGlockton represents just one of many tragedies in which a dangerous transformation of the law of self-defense—which proponents have branded as “Stand Your Ground”—has been used to justify murderous vigilantism, especially against Black men.

Markeis worked nights and watched his kids during the day while his longtime girlfriend, Britany, was at work.² He liked to rap and make music videos with friends, and had recently taken up painting. He was rarely seen without his children in tow.³ The couple didn’t know it yet, but Britany was pregnant with their fourth child.⁴

On a Thursday afternoon in July, the family drove to a Circle A convenience store to buy chips and drinks. To avoid maneuvering around the trucks parked in front of the store, Britany pulled her car into a handicap spot and left it running while Markeis and their five-year-old son went inside. She and their other two children, an infant and a three-year-old, remained in the car.

Less than a minute later, 47-year-old Michael Drejka drove into the parking lot and parked his SUV perpendicular to Britany’s car.⁵ He began to walk around the vehicle and peer into the windows, looking for handicap tags. He then approached Britany’s driver side window, yelling and motioning with his hands. Fearful for her family’s safety, Britany cracked the window and asked him what his problem was. When the man yelled at her about parking in a handicap spot, she told him to mind his own business and said her boyfriend went into the store briefly to get snacks.

Another customer arrived and observed an irate and confrontational Michael arguing with Britany. The customer thought about intervening on Britany’s behalf but instead saw Markeis paying at the counter, and told him there was an “altercation” outside the store that “he might want to get involved” in. When Markeis arrived outside, Britany was exiting the vehicle.⁶ Markeis shoved Michael away from her and onto the ground.

Less than three seconds later,⁷ while still on the pavement, Michael unholstered a .40 caliber handgun and pointed it directly at Markeis. Security camera footage shows that Markeis immediately backed at least 10 feet away from him,⁸ and had begun to turn away when Michael fired a single shot into Markeis’s chest.

Markeis staggered into the store and collapsed in front of his five-year-old son, who watched, screaming, as his mother tried to apply pressure to the wound to stop the bleeding. Despite Britany's efforts, she couldn't save Markeis's life.⁹

A day later, Pinellas County Sheriff Bob Gualtieri announced that his agency would not arrest Michael because he believed shooting Markeis was “within the bookends of ‘stand your ground’ and within the bookends of force being justified” under Florida law.¹⁰ Though he conceded that security camera footage showing Markeis backing away from the confrontation “gave him pause,” the sheriff pointed to Michael's claim that he feared he was going to be “reattacked” as justification for using lethal force under Florida's law.¹¹

Reporters soon discovered that Michael had angrily confronted a truck driver over the same parking spot just three months earlier. He had directed racial slurs at the driver and threatened to shoot him. Michael later called the truck driver's employer and told him “he was lucky that he didn't blow his employee's head off.” Six years earlier, the sheriff's office had also responded to two separate road rage incidents in which Michael Drejka had drawn and pointed his handgun at other drivers, first at two teenagers who had cut him off by stopping at a yellow light, and then at a woman he said was driving too slowly through a school zone.

Despite this history, Sheriff Gualtieri held a press conference nearly two weeks after Markeis's death to reiterate his belief that Florida's Stand Your Ground law provided Michael with immunity from arrest.¹² Our analysis below details how these laws—currently enacted in 27 states—remove the traditional obligation to de-escalate a confrontation and avoid using lethal force in public by stepping away (or “retreating”) when it is safe to do so.

On August 1, one day after the press conference, the sheriff referred the case to the local state attorney's office for review.¹³ Based on the report submitted by a detective in the sheriff's office recommending that Michael be arrested for manslaughter, the state's attorney brought charges on August 13,¹⁴ and ultimately won a conviction—according to jurors, after multiple votes, and almost entirely because a security camera had captured video footage of Markeis backing at least 10 feet away before Michael shot him.¹⁵

Justice was delayed in this case, even with security camera footage of a retreating unarmed victim, multiple credible eye witnesses, and a shooter's known history of threatening violence with a firearm. Law enforcement and prosecutors have at least initially cited Stand Your Ground laws in determining not to arrest the killers of other young men and boys of color, including Trayvon Martin, Jordan Davis, Jamonta Miles, Daniel Adkins, Jr., and more recently, Ahmaud Arbery, to name only a few.¹⁶ In countless other cases, justice was not just delayed but denied.

A growing body of research has established that Stand Your Ground laws lead to significantly more killing and have no deterrent effect on other crimes. These laws suffer from pervasive racial and gender bias in their application, deepening disparities in the legal system and disproportionately justifying the use of violence by people who are white and male against people who are not.

Giffords Law Center and the SPLC Action Fund stand with partners and allies like Amnesty International, Cities United, the Community Justice Action Fund, The Dream Defenders, the NAACP, among others, who have led calls to dismantle Stand Your Ground nationwide.¹⁷ We urge state lawmakers to repeal these laws in the 27 states where they have been enacted and to pass laws overturning harmful court decisions that have imposed Stand Your Ground standards in eight other states. We hope the information and research provided below will help inform and motivate advocates and lawmakers to prioritize the sanctity of human life and equal justice in the law of self-defense.

Left: Markeis McGlockton, who was shot and killed by Michael Drejka in July 2018. Right: Britany Jacobs, Markeis's girlfriend, along with two of their children.

Stand Your Ground Laws Distort the Law of Self-Defense

Stand Your Ground laws alter traditional laws on self-defense to permit the use of force, including deadly force, in a broader range of situations in public. In other words, they classify more killings as justified and punish fewer as murders.

These laws are at best unnecessary, and at worst, extremely harmful. Centuries-old legal principles and codified self-defense laws across the US have long affirmed an individual's right to use proportionate physical force to defend him or herself and others against imminent violence. Self-defense laws in the US typically justify use of lethal force in situations in which it is objectively reasonable for a person to believe that lethal force is necessary to prevent imminent death or serious bodily harm to themselves or another person.

Traditionally, these laws have made clear that taking human life is not justified if it can be proven beyond reasonable doubt that the person could have safely de-escalated the situation by simply stepping away from a confrontation.¹⁸

SELF-DEFENSE LAWS ARE PRACTICAL; PEOPLE ARE GENERALLY EXPECTED TO STEP AWAY FROM AN INCIDENT ONLY IF THEY KNOW THEY CAN DO SO WITH COMPLETE SAFETY.¹⁹

In most US jurisdictions, court precedents and/or state laws have carved out an exception to this duty to de-escalate called the Castle Doctrine. Based on the theory that “a person’s home is their castle,” this legal principle has created a presumption that individuals are justified in using force against someone breaking into their occupied home, without having to consider options such as leaving the home to avoid a threat or confrontation.²⁰

In a nation with more guns than people,²¹ even this relatively narrow presumption can result in predictably tragic assumptions and deaths, like when law enforcement agents act on no-knock warrants and storm into people’s homes unannounced,²² or when people mistake a lost or intoxicated person wandering into their home for a burglar and open fire.²³ People have also attempted to invoke the Castle Doctrine as a defense for racist murders of people who didn’t unlawfully enter their homes. Recent tragic examples include incidents where young Black people were shot after knocking on a stranger’s door to ask for directions,²⁴ seeking help after a car accident,²⁵ and walking across a front yard after leaving a neighbor’s party.²⁶

More recently, lobbying organizations like the National Rifle Association and the American Legislative Exchange Council have pushed for even more extreme transformations of self-defense laws to further tilt the scales of justice in favor of killing. In practice, this has meant providing the largely white male base of these organizations greater authority to use lethal force in more places with impunity.²⁷

Some states have expanded the Castle Doctrine’s boundaries to include the entire residential property, in some cases permitting the use of deadly force to prevent the commission of any felony on that property,²⁸ including, for instance, breaking into a car in the driveway. Mississippi law states that “the killing of a human being” is justifiable when trying to prevent another person from committing a felony in the immediate premises of a dwelling, vehicle, or place of business or employment that is occupied by the person using lethal force.²⁹ Other states have created a presumption that lethal force is justified against burglars or intruders in an occupied workplace, business, or vehicle, in addition to homes.³⁰

A few states have gone further by authorizing the use of lethal force against people breaking into unoccupied vehicles and businesses or committing certain property theft crimes anywhere else.³¹ Florida law, for instance, states that an individual is justified in using deadly force if he or she reasonably believes that such conduct is necessary to prevent the imminent commission of felony burglary, including cases where an unarmed individual unlawfully enters an unoccupied vehicle anywhere it may be.³²

Texas law goes even further still, authorizing use of deadly force to protect or retrieve property of any value in any place, if a person reasonably believes that deadly force is immediately necessary to prevent “theft during the nighttime” or to prevent someone from fleeing immediately after a nighttime theft, as long as the person reasonably believes the property cannot be recovered any other way.³³ In 2013, a jury acquitted a Texas man who shot and killed a woman he had hired as an escort because he claimed she had committed “theft during the nighttime” by leaving with his money without having sex with him. The jury found that Texas’s law allowed the man to use deadly force to recover his money.³⁴

Most significantly, a majority of states have now enacted Stand Your Ground laws applicable in all public spaces, starting with Utah in 1994³⁵ and then, at the behest of the NRA, Florida in 2005.³⁶ Twenty-seven states have passed Stand Your Ground legislation into law and in eight more, court decisions have similarly altered the law of self-defense.³⁷ In addition to removing the traditional duty to safely retreat in public, these laws also usually declare that people perceiving a threat of harm have an affirmative right to “stand [their] ground” if they are not engaged in criminal activity and are in any place where they have a right to be. Some states, including Florida, have additional provisions intended to further discourage the arrest and prosecution of people who claim to have stood their ground in self-defense.

Stand Your Ground laws codify a standard for the use of force (including deadly force with a firearm) that is confusingly vague and therefore susceptible to highly uneven application by law enforcement and the judicial system, while also unmistakably signaling support for a “shoot first, ask questions later” culture of impunity around taking human life. These laws often provide the last person left standing with what the American Bar Association has called a “low-cost license to kill.”³⁸

The gun lobby has continued to mount a campaign to pass Stand Your Ground laws in every state³⁹ as part of a larger push to promote a gun culture centered around “do-it-yourself-security” through hypervigilant armed citizenship, often as an expression of white male identity, and extending into public as well as the home.⁴⁰

Until the late 20th century, nearly every state placed significant restrictions on an individual's ability to carry weapons, especially concealed firearms, in public.⁴¹ In the 1960s, the NRA, as well as early gun control supporters, even endorsed legislation to broaden these restrictions in response to calls by the Black Panthers for Black people to arm and defend themselves.⁴² The NRA describes its "right to carry" movement as beginning in Florida in 1987, when the state enacted a new law requiring state authorities to provide a concealed carry license to any applicant who met specific (minimal) criteria. The NRA notes that Florida's "shall issue" law soon "became the model for similar laws thereafter adopted in 33 other states."⁴³

It was no coincidence that the NRA aggressively pushed for weaker public carry limitations in the same places and around the same time as Stand Your Ground laws.⁴⁴ Until recently, the percent of American households with firearms was shrinking drastically.⁴⁵ As cultural shifts led fewer Americans to participate in recreational hunting and sport shooting, firearm sales were in steep decline until the firearm industry adapted by developing and selling large numbers of semiautomatic pistols aggressively marketed for self-defense.⁴⁶ In 1996, the NRA's chief lobbyist claimed credit for generating new gun sales with an aggressive campaign marketing new concealable, high-powered handguns: "The gun industry should send me a basket of fruit,” she said. “Our efforts have created a new market.”⁴⁷ By 2005, previously declining gun manufacturers were boasting about transitioning to an “aggressive growth mode” by refocusing their marketing around “extensive expansion into the handgun market,” “demand creation,” and fear-based messaging around the need for guns for personal safety.⁴⁸ Between 1999 and 2017, the percentage of Americans who named self-defense as their primary reason for owning a gun rose from 26% to 67%.⁴⁹

Black Panther Party members demonstrate outside a New York City courthouse in 1969.

David Fenton/Getty Images

By successfully lobbying for major changes to states’ longstanding gun safety and self-defense laws, the gun industry encouraged more people, especially white men,⁵⁰ to acquire firearms, arm themselves in public, and use those firearms with less accountability. In the seven years after Florida enacted its Stand Your Ground law, the number of people who received permits to carry concealed weapons in public tripled.⁵¹ Under the state’s intentionally lax standards, permits were issued to Markeis McGlockton’s killer, Michael Drejka, who had a history of brandishing and threatening to use his firearm in road rage incidents; Jordan Davis’s killer, Michael Dunn, who had a history of domestic violence; and Trayvon Martin’s killer, George Zimmerman, who had a history of domestic violence and assaulting a police officer, and who is reportedly still authorized to carry lethal weapons in public even after he killed Trayvon Martin and was later convicted of criminally stalking someone else.⁵²

As a member of the US Commission on Civil Rights wrote in a February 2020 report, this “deadly cocktail of Stand Your Ground and concealed-carry is a license to kill.”⁵³ And organized hate groups have taken note. Leaked chat logs revealed that when planning an armed march in Charlottesville, Virginia, in August 2017, neo-Nazi and white supremacist groups discussed the applicable rules for “shooting and killing people under Stand Your Ground.”⁵⁴ Soon after, in connection with planned protests against the white nationalist Richard Spencer’s appearance at the University of Florida, right-wing militants discussed plans to come to the location “to test Florida’s Stand Your Ground law.”⁵⁵

Stand Your Ground Laws Exacerbate Systemic Racism

In 2013, President Obama asked the nation:

“If Trayvon Martin was of age and armed, could he have stood his ground on that sidewalk? And do we actually think that he would have been justified in shooting Mr. Zimmerman who had followed him in a car because he felt threatened?”⁵⁶

Statistically speaking, the answer is no. Expert testimony submitted to the US Commission on Civil Rights examined FBI data in over 2,600 homicide cases to determine the likelihood that a fatal shooting would be deemed justified when, as with George Zimmerman’s case, a civilian male shot and killed one other male he did not know. In Stand Your Ground states, these homicides were ruled justified in 45% of cases involving a white shooter and Black victim, but just 11% of cases involving a Black shooter and white victim.⁵⁷

While Stand Your Ground laws signal the state's unmistakable support for armed public confrontations, these laws are also vague enough to allow for highly uneven application by law enforcement and the legal system. An examination of hundreds of Stand Your Ground cases in Florida by the Tampa Bay Times revealed that "cases with nearly identical factual circumstances resulted in inconsistent and opposite outcomes where one defendant was afforded criminal immunity while another was convicted and given a lengthy sentence."⁵⁸ Researchers confirmed that these inconsistencies were not arbitrary: studies have shown clearly and repeatedly that race and gender are significant factors explaining how otherwise similar cases led to "opposite outcomes."⁵⁹

It should be noted that the vast majority of interpersonal gun violence in the US involves a male victim and shooter of the same race,⁶⁰ and that the vast majority of concealed weapon permit holders are white men.⁶¹ It is perhaps unsurprising then that research suggests that Stand Your Ground laws have caused especially significant increases in homicide deaths involving white male victims compared to other demographic groups.⁶² However, these laws have also been used to disproportionately justify use of deadly force by white men as well, especially when that force is used against Black Americans.

Across the US, killings are much more likely to be ruled justified when the perpetrator is white or the victim is not.⁶³ Research suggests that Stand Your Ground laws deepen these vast racial disparities in the legal system.⁶⁴ The number of homicides of Black people deemed justifiable more than doubled in Stand Your Ground states between 2005 and 2011, while remaining unchanged in the rest of the country.⁶⁵

An analysis of Stand Your Ground cases in Florida found "striking evidence" of racial bias.⁶⁶ Defendants invoking Stand Your Ground defenses were twice as likely to be convicted for killing white victims compared to non-white victims.⁶⁷ In Florida, Black adolescents comprised 63.5% of all adolescent firearm homicide victims before passage of the state's Stand Your Ground law. After the law was enacted, that number rose to 72%.⁶⁸

THE URBAN INSTITUTE'S ANALYSIS OF STAND YOUR GROUND CASES ACROSS MULTIPLE STATES FOUND THAT AFTER CONTROLLING FOR RELEVANT FACTORS, "A WHITE (CIVILIAN) SHOOTER WHO KILLS A BLACK VICTIM IS 350 PERCENT MORE LIKELY TO BE FOUND TO BE JUSTIFIED THAN IF THE SAME SHOOTER KILLED A WHITE VICTIM."⁶⁹

These disparate outcomes reflect the degree to which racism and implicit bias shape judgements about the “reasonableness” of a person’s belief that they are in danger in public.⁷⁰ Modern research continues to show conclusively that many Americans are quicker to associate Black teenagers and men with suspicion, criminality, and violence. Research published in 2017 by the American Psychological Association, for instance, showed that people tend to perceive Black men as larger, stronger, and more muscular than white men of the exact same height and weight.⁷¹ Other similar studies showed that police officers were less able to distinguish harmless objects from guns when they were held by Black subjects.⁷²

When the law encourages people with these racist biases to carry deadly weapons in public and to more readily use those weapons, the consequences are predictably deadly and unequal.

Stand Your Ground Laws Exacerbate Gender Bias

Researchers have also found “striking evidence” of gender bias in the application of Stand Your Ground laws.⁷³ Domestic violence advocates have long noted that the Castle Doctrine has historically envisioned situations “in which a stranger violates the sanctity of the home,” but that this conception overlooks the fact that women are much more likely to be attacked by an intimate partner, who often shares the same dwelling.⁷⁴ Female survivors of domestic violence also often “face a persistent skepticism regarding both their accounts of abuse and their recitations of harm,”⁷⁵ making it less likely that the legal system will believe them when they claim to have acted in self-defense. An analysis of Florida cases found that female defendants accused of killing a partner were twice as likely to be convicted as male defendants in comparable cases.⁷⁶

Perhaps the best known example of this bias, intersecting with racial bias, came in the prosecution and conviction of Marissa Alexander. Marissa, a 31-year-old Black mother in Florida, was initially sentenced to 20 years in prison after firing a warning shot into a wall in the direction of her abusive husband after he threatened to kill her, violated a domestic violence restraining order, and tried to corner her in a bathroom.⁷⁷ Courts rejected her attempt to invoke a Stand Your Ground defense. The state attorney argued that since Marissa had fled the bathroom and returned to face her husband, she “was not in fear” when she fired her weapon, but was instead “angry.”⁷⁸

In one 2016 study, a statistical model based on Florida Stand Your Ground cases estimated that there was a 55% chance that a defendant would be convicted in situations matching the key objective facts of Marissa Alexander’s case.⁷⁹ The model also found that in a hypothetical case in which all other factors were exactly the same, except the shooter was male, the estimated chance of conviction would fall to 14%. In other words, according to this model, Marissa Alexander’s odds of going to prison for firing a warning shot were nearly four times higher because she was a woman.

At least anecdotally, transgender men and women also appear to face unequal access to the Stand Your Ground defense. In a notable case in Georgia, in 2011, a 20-year-old Black trans man named Ky Peterson was sentenced to 20 years in (a women’s) prison for fatally shooting a man who had knocked him unconscious, dragged him to an abandoned trailer, and started raping him.⁸⁰ As an LGBT rights attorney remarked about the case, “In so many ways, our [nation’s] conception of victimhood has always been taken away from people of color and taken away from gender-nonconforming people and taken away from women.”⁸¹

Instead of expanding a right to self-defense for victims of violence, cases like these have led legal experts to observe that “the real achievement” of Stand Your Ground legislation is “the normalization and promotion of (often white) male violence in an ever-expanding number of scenarios.”⁸²

Stand Your Ground Laws Lead to More Killing

Proponents of Stand Your Ground laws have argued that these laws would decrease homicides and deter other crimes.⁸³ In a survey of policy experts by the nonpartisan Rand Corporation, pro-gun rights panelists estimated that enacting a Stand Your Ground law would lead to a 4% reduction in gun homicides overall and a 5% reduction in other violent crimes.⁸⁴

The research clearly shows that they were wrong. Not only do Stand Your Ground laws not achieve their proffered goal of deterring crime—they lead to spikes in homicides and in the number of killings that are deemed justified, without any deterrent effect on other crimes.

As one of the first states to implement a Stand Your Ground law, Florida has been an important and tragic test case. Multiple studies have shown that Florida’s Stand Your Ground law escalated violence across the state.

Researchers found:

- A 32% INCREASE IN RATES OF FIREARM HOMICIDE AND A 24% INCREASE IN RATES OF HOMICIDE OVERALL.⁸⁵
- A 45% INCREASE IN FIREARM HOMICIDES AMONG ADOLESCENTS.⁸⁶
- A TRIPLING OF THE NUMBER OF HOMICIDES CLASSIFIED AS “JUSTIFIABLE” IN THE FIVE YEARS AFTER FLORIDA ENACTED ITS LAW.⁸⁷
- IN 79% OF CASES, THE ASSAILANT COULD HAVE RETREATED TO AVOID THE CONFRONTATION, AND IN 68% OF CASES, THE PERSON KILLED WAS UNARMED.⁸⁸
- THE LARGEST NEGATIVE IMPACT ON HOMICIDES OCCURRED IN NEIGHBORHOODS THAT INITIALLY HAD THE LOWEST HOMICIDE RATES.⁸⁹

As Stand Your Ground laws spread from Florida across the country, researchers have found that these laws are also associated with increases in firearm homicides, hospitalizations, and injuries elsewhere, without the promised benefits in crime reduction.⁹⁰ Cases involving lethal force are significantly more likely to be ruled justified in Stand Your Ground states than in other states.⁹¹ One study concluded that there was “compelling evidence that by lowering the expected costs associated with using lethal force, [Stand Your Ground] laws induce more of it.”⁹²

More specifically, researchers have found that:

- STAND YOUR GROUND LAWS ARE ASSOCIATED WITH SIGNIFICANT INCREASES IN FIREARM INJURIES RESULTING IN EMERGENCY ROOM VISITS AND INPATIENT HOSPITALIZATIONS.⁹³
- IN ANY GIVEN MONTH, APPROXIMATELY 30 TO 50 PEOPLE ACROSS THE COUNTRY ARE KILLED AS A RESULT OF STAND YOUR GROUND LAWS.⁹⁴
- IN 21 STATES THAT ADOPTED STAND YOUR GROUND LAWS, OVERALL HOMICIDES INCREASED BY AROUND 8%, WITHOUT ANY CORRESPONDING DETERRENT EFFECT ON VIOLENT CRIMES LIKE BURGLARY, ROBBERY, OR AGGRAVATED ASSAULT.⁹⁵

In a meta-analysis of this research published in April 2020, the Rand Corporation recommended that “states with stand-your-ground laws should consider repealing them as a strategy for reducing firearm homicides.”⁹⁶ And in February 2020, a member of the US Commission on Civil Rights concluded that “under both the increased deterrence and decrease in homicide policy rationales, Stand Your Ground in practice appears to fail miserably on the national level.”⁹⁷

Conclusion

In 2012, after the killing of Trayvon Martin, author Ta-Nehisi Coates wrote about the killing of another Florida resident, Brandon Baker.⁹⁸ Late at night, a man named Seth Browning became concerned about Brandon’s driving and followed him in his car for several miles to get his license plate number. Brandon pulled over, got out of his pickup truck, and, according to Seth Browning, aggressively approached his car. Seth used pepper spray on Brandon and his twin brother. When Brandon reached into Seth’s vehicle and punched him, Seth pulled out a gun and fatally shot him.

When reviewing the facts of Stand Your Ground cases, Coates wrote, “what you find is people with very little incentive to de-escalate.”⁹⁹

What we have in Florida—and doubtlessly in other parts of the country—is the state relinquishing a crucial aspect of meting out justice. The logic here militates toward getting a gun . . . The logic incentivizes an armed citizenry where the beneficiary of justice is simply the last man standing. Your side of the story is irrelevant if you are dead. Perhaps that is the point.¹⁰⁰

As a policy experiment, Stand Your Ground has failed. In a nation awash with increasingly lethal firearms, weak standards for carrying them in public, and systemic racism and sexism, these laws make us less safe and less equal. They encourage a trigger-happy culture of anxious vigilantism that cheapens the value of human life. And they deepen vast and harmful disparities in our legal system. To honor those our nation has lost and to avert future violence, we must repeal Stand Your Ground laws state by state and restore the presumption that taking human life should be a last resort—not the first.

27 States Have Enacted Stand Your Ground Laws

While 27 states have adopted Stand Your Ground laws, an additional eight remove the duty to retreat through court decisions.

- States with Stand Your Ground Laws
- States with Stand Your Ground standards due to court decisions

Stand Your Ground State by State

STATE	STAND YOUR GROUND?	DEADLY FORCE AGAINST A FLEEING PERSON?	PROVISIONS LIMITING ARRESTS IN SYG CASES?	DEADLY FORCE AGAINST PROPERTY CRIMES?
ALABAMA	YES
ALASKA	YES
ARIZONA	YES			YES
ARKANSAS	NO
CALIFORNIA	YES*
COLORADO	YES*
CONNECTICUT	NO
DELAWARE	NO
FLORIDA	YES		YES	YES
GEORGIA	YES
HAWAII	NO
IDAHO	YES
ILLINOIS	YES*			YES
INDIANA	YES
IOWA	YES
KANSAS	YES		YES
KENTUCKY	YES		YES
LOUISIANA	YES
MAINE	NO
MARYLAND	NO
MASSACHUSETTS	NO
MICHIGAN	YES
MINNESOTA	NO
MISSISSIPPI	YES			YES
MISSOURI	YES
MONTANA	YES

STATE	STAND YOUR GROUND?	DEADLY FORCE AGAINST A FLEEING PERSON?	PROVISIONS LIMITING ARRESTS IN SYG CASES?	DEADLY FORCE AGAINST PROPERTY CRIMES?
NEBRASKA	NO
NEVADA	YES
NEW HAMPSHIRE	YES
NEW JERSEY	NO
NEW MEXICO	YES*
NEW YORK	NO
NORTH CAROLINA	YES			AMBIGUOUS
NORTH DAKOTA	NO
OHIO	NO
OKLAHOMA	YES		YES
OREGON	YES*			YES
PENNSYLVANIA	YES
RHODE ISLAND	NO
SOUTH CAROLINA	YES	YES	YES
SOUTH DAKOTA	YES
TENNESSEE	YES		YES
TEXAS	YES	YES		YES
UTAH	YES			AMBIGUOUS
VERMONT	YES*
VIRGINIA	YES*
WASHINGTON	YES*
WASHINGTON DC	NO
WEST VIRGINIA	YES
WISCONSIN	NO
WYOMING	YES

* STAND YOUR GROUND ESTABLISHED BY COURT CASE, NOT LEGISLATION

Endnotes

¹ Except where otherwise indicated, the events detailed regarding the killing of Markeis McGlockton are based on information contained in the criminal complaint filed by the Assistant State Attorney for the Sixth Judicial Circuit of Florida against Michael Drejka. See Criminal Complaint Against Michael Drejka, State of Florida v. Drejka, Michael, 18-09851-CF (August 13, 2018) <https://hpc.pinellasclerk.org/CaseData/18-09851-CF/40270075.tif>

² Kathryn Varn, “Markeis McGlockton: Artist, loving father, and much more than just a hashtag,” Tampa Bay Times, August 31, 2018, https://web.archive.org/web/20180831162817/https://www.tampabay.com/news/publicsafety/Markeis-McGlockton-Artist-loving-father-and-much-more-than-just-a-hashtag_171316279

³ Id.

⁴ Zachary Sampson, “Girlfriend of victim in Clearwater parking lot shooting is pregnant with his child,” Tampa Bay Times, December 21, 2018, <https://www.tampabay.com/news/publicsafety/girlfriend-of-victim-in-clearwater-parking-lot-shooting-is-pregnant-with-his-child-20181221/>.

⁵ YouTube, “Video Shows Michael Drejka shoot Markeis McGlockton: 10News WTSP,” August 17, 2019, <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=01Me0y92pKA>; Terry Spencer, “Attorney: Parking lot shooting of man ‘cold-blooded murder,’” Associated Press, July 26, 2018, <https://apnews.com/611a9cea1d4042edb78d8e2d3d1febd1/Attorney:-Parking-lot-shooting-of-man-'cold-blooded-murder'>.

⁶ Id.

⁷ Hannah Knowles, “A white Florida man cited ‘stand your ground’ for shooting a black man. A jury found him guilty,” The Washington Post, August 25, 2019, <https://www.washingtonpost.com/nation/2019/08/24/white-florida-man-cited-stand-your-ground-shooting-black-man-jury-found-him-guilty/>.

⁸ Kathryn Varn and Zachary T. Sampson, “How prosecutors decided to charge Michael Drejka, shooter in controversial stand your ground case,” Tampa Bay Times, August 13, 2018, https://www.tampabay.com/news/publicsafety/crime/How-prosecutors-decided-to-charge-Michael-Drejka-shooter-in-controversial-stand-your-ground-case_170858731/.

⁹ Cleve Wootson Jr., “He is accused of killing someone in a parking spot dispute. Authorities say he was standing his ground,” The Washington Post, July 23, 2018, <https://www.washingtonpost.com/news/post-nation/wp/2018/07/21/hes-accused-of-killing-someone-in-a-parking-spot-dispute-authorities-say-he-was-standing-his-ground/>.

¹⁰ Kathryn Varn, “No arrest in fatal shooting during argument over handicap parking space,” Tampa Bay Times, July 20, 2018, https://web.archive.org/web/20180725192819/http://tampabay.com:80/news/publicsafety/crime/No-arrest-in-fatal-shooting-during-argument-over-handicap-parking-space_170174041

¹¹ Julia Jacobs, “‘Stand Your Ground’ Cited by Florida Sheriff Who Declined to Arrest Suspect in Killing,” The New York Times, July 21, 2018, <https://www.nytimes.com/2018/07/21/us/florida-stand-your-ground.html>

¹² Kathryn Varn, “Sheriff Gualtieri defends ‘stand your ground’ decision in convenience store shooting,” Tampa Bay Times, July 31, 2018, https://web.archive.org/web/20180802015055/http://www.tampabay.com/news/publicsafety/Sheriff-Gualtieri-defends-stand-your-ground-decision-in-convenience-store-shooting_170477933

¹³ Sandra Weathers, “Markeis McGlockton shooting case turned over to State Attorney’s Office,” BayNews9, August 1, 2018, <https://www.baynews9.com/fl/tampa/news/2018/08/01/markeis-mcglckton-shooting-case-turned-over-to-state-attorney-s-office>

¹⁴ Kathryn Varn and Zachary T. Sampson, “How prosecutors decided to charge Michael Drejka, shooter in controversial stand your ground case,” Tampa Bay Times, August 13, 2018, https://www.tampabay.com/news/publicsafety/crime/How-prosecutors-decided-to-charge-Michael-Drejka-shooter-in-controversial-stand-your-ground-case_170858731/.

¹⁵ Kathryn Varn, “We talked to jurors who found Michael Drejka guilty of manslaughter,” Tampa Bay Times, August 29, 2019, <https://www.tampabay.com/news/crime/2019/08/29/we-talked-to-jurors-who-found-michael-drejka-guilty-of-manslaughter/>

¹⁶ Subsequent review and investigation in these high profile cases ultimately led to the defendants’ arrest and prosecution, often only after significant public scrutiny and community advocacy brought heightened attention to officers and prosecutors’ failures to arrest and charge people invoking a ‘Stand Your Ground’ justification for killing.

¹⁷ See J. Brian Charles, “Ahmaud Arbery Shooting Ignites Fight to Repeal ‘Stand Your Ground’ Laws,” The Trace, May 15, 2020, <https://www.thetrace.org/2020/05/ahmaud-arbery-shooting-ignites-fight-to-repeal-stand-your-ground-laws/>; NAACP, “NAACP RELEASES ‘TRAYVON’S LAW’ PRINCIPLES FOR STATE LEGISLATIVE ADVOCACY,” Press Release, July 30, 2013, <https://www.naacp.org/latest/naacp-releases-trayvons-law-principles-for-state-legislative-advocacy-2/>; “Dream Defenders Team Up With NAACP To Fight ‘Stand Your Ground’ Laws,” HuffPost Black Voices, September 24, 2013, https://www.huffpost.com/entry/dream-defenders-naacp-stand-your-ground-laws_n_3983706

¹⁸ See American Bar Association, “National Task Force on Stand Your Ground Laws: Report and Recommendations,” (September 2015): 1.

¹⁹ See Eugene Volkh, “The ‘Duty to Retreat,’ the Duty (or Not) to Comply With Demands, Necessity, and Liberty,” The Volokh Conspiracy, April 3, 2012, <http://volokh.com/2012/04/03/the-duty-to-retreat-the-duty-or-not-to-comply-with-demands-necessity-and-liberty/>.

²⁰ “Castle Doctrine,” Legal Information Institute, Cornell Law School, last accessed July 20, 2020, https://www.law.cornell.edu/wex/castle_doctrine.

Endnotes

- ²¹ Christopher Ingraham, “There are more guns than people in the United States, according to a new study of global firearm ownership,” The Washington Post, June 19, 2018, <https://www.washingtonpost.com/news/wonk/wp/2018/06/19/there-are-more-guns-than-people-in-the-united-states-according-to-a-new-study-of-global-firearm-ownership/>.
- ²² See, e.g., Richard A. Oppel Jr. and Derrick Bryson Taylor, “Here’s What You Need to Know About Breonna Taylor’s Death,” The New York Times, June 5, 2020, <https://www.nytimes.com/article/breonna-taylor-police.html>
- ²³ See, e.g., “Acquittal in Doorstep Killing of Japanese Student,” The New York Times, May 24, 1993, <https://www.nytimes.com/1993/05/24/us/acquittal-in-doorstep-killing-of-japanese-student.html>
- ²⁴ Enjoli Francis, “Man found guilty of firing gun at black teen who knocked on his door to ask for directions,” ABC News, October 12, 2018, <https://abcnews.go.com/US/man-found-guilty-firing-gun-black-teen-knocked/story?id=58460794#:~:text=1%3A55-,Ret.,and%20assault%20to%20commit%20murder.&text=Jeffrey%20Zeigler%2C%2053%2C%20was%20convicted,the%20commission%20of%20a%20felony>.
- ²⁵ Oralandar Brand-Williams, “State Supreme Court denies new trial in porch shooting,” The Detroit News, March 9, 2018, <https://www.detroitnews.com/story/news/local/wayne-county/2018/03/09/theodore-wafer-denied-new-trial-porch-shooting/32778751/>
- ²⁶ Josh Shaffer, “Murder conviction upheld in racially charged homeowner shooting,” The News & Observer, April 3, 2020, <https://www.newsobserver.com/news/local/crime/article241744461.html>
- ²⁷ See discussion below regarding evidence that Stand Your Ground laws lead to significantly more homicides being ruled justifiable by white and male shooters compared to similarly situated Black and female shooters. The NRA has also, with few exceptions, emphasized white identity politics and racist fears to maintain its membership instead of seeking, for instance, to increase gun ownership among Black households; speak out in defense of Black people’s equal right to carry and use firearms for self-defense, including after recent high-profile instances when police officers killed Black people, including Philando Castile, for lawfully carrying firearms; or addressing the American legal system’s enormously unequal treatment of self-defense claims. See, e.g., Alex Yablon, “Why the NRA Stands Up for Some Black Gun Owners, But Not Others,” The Trace, July 21, 2016, <https://www.thetrace.org/2016/07/nra-black-gun-owners-philando-castile/>; Adam Serwer, “The NRA’s Catch-22 for Black Men Shot by Police,” The Atlantic, September 13, 2018, <https://www.theatlantic.com/ideas/archive/2018/09/the-nras-catch-22-for-black-men-shot-by-police/570124/>; Jane Coaston, “The NRA just called its own video network ‘distasteful and racist,’” Vox, October 28, 2019, <https://www.vox.com/policy-and-politics/2019/10/28/20936511/nra-nratv-ackerman-mcqueen-lawsuit-complaint>.
- ²⁸ Several states’ statutes allow people to use deadly force when “reasonably necessary” to prevent certain non-violent property crimes, including felony thefts or auto burglaries into unoccupied vehicles, stretching these justified homicide laws past their purported ‘self-defense’ goals. These states include, to various degrees, Florida, Illinois, Mississippi, and Texas.
- ²⁹ Miss. Code Ann. § 97-3-15(1) (e). See also, Olier v. Bailey, 164 So.3d 982, 994 (Miss. 2015) (“Landowners in this State are permitted to use lethal force to resist attempts “to commit any felony . . . upon or in any dwelling . . . or in the immediate premises thereof in which such a person shall be.”)
- ³⁰ See, e.g., 2011 Wis. AB 69 (amending Wis. Stat. § 939.48), establishing a legal presumption under Wisconsin law that a person reasonably believed lethal force was necessary, in specified circumstances, if another individual was unlawfully and forcibly entering the person’s dwelling, motor vehicle, or place of business, in which the person was present, if the person knew or reasonably believed that an unlawful and forcible entry was occurring.
- ³¹ Some courts have refused to validate laws justifying killing in defense of property. In 2015, Nevada’s Supreme Court ruled that a literal reading of the state’s law authorizing the use of deadly force to resist any attempted felony, including theft, would be “unreasonable and absurd” unless the person killed had posed a threat of serious bodily injury. Newell v. State, 131 Nev. 974, 980 (2015) (interpreting Nev. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 200.160(2)). Theft of items valued above $1,200 is a felony under Nevada law. Nev. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 205.0835(2)(b).
- In 2015, South Dakota’s Supreme Court similarly reaffirmed that it would interpret the state’s law on justifiable homicide to only permit use of deadly force in circumstances involving a danger of serious bodily harm, though the literal text of South Dakota’s statute authorized a person to use deadly force “in the lawful defense of such person, or of his or her husband, wife, parent, child, master, mistress, or servant if there is reasonable ground to apprehend a design to commit a felony . . . and imminent danger of such design being accomplished.” State v. Birdsheed, 871 N.W.2d 62, 73 (2015) (citing State v. Pellegrino, 577 N.W.2d 590, 596 (1998)).
- ³² Fla. Stat. §§ 776.031(2); 776.08; 810.02(4). See also, Rodriguez v. State, 837 So.2d 1177, 1178-79 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2003) (rejecting claims that burglaries are only “forcible felonies” if they involve the use or threat of force or violence).
- ³³ Tex. Penal Code §§ 9.41; 9.42.
- ³⁴ Miles Graham, “When You Can Kill in Texas,” Time, June 13, 2013, <https://nation.time.com/2013/06/13/when-you-can-kill-in-texas/>
- ³⁵ See 1994 Utah HB 13 (amending Utah Code Ann. § 76-2-402).
- ³⁶ See Mike Spies, “The N.R.A. Lobbyist Behind Florida’s Pro-Gun Policies,” The New Yorker, March 5, 2018, <https://www.newyorker.com/magazine/2018/03/05/the-nra-lobbyist-behind-floridas-pro-gun-policies>; Chris Brown, “Marion Hammer: The NRA Lobbyist Behind Florida’s Stand Your Ground Legislation,” Media Matters for America, March 22, 2012, <https://www.mediamatters.org/national-rifle-association/marion-hammer-nra-lobbyist-behind-floridas-stand-your-ground-legislation> NRA-ILA, “NRA Presents ALEC Model Legislation in Grapevine, Texas,” August 12, 2005, <https://www.nraila.org/articles/20050812/nra-presents-alec-model-legislation-in>
- ³⁷ See appendix for a full list of these states and citations for relevant statutes and decisions.

Endnotes

- ³⁸ See Mark Obbie, “American Bar Association Calls for Repeal of Stand Your Ground Laws,” The Trace, September 19, 2015, <https://www.thetrace.org/2015/09/bar-association-stand-your-ground/>.
- ³⁹ Ohio’s legislature scheduled testimony in favor of Stand Your Ground legislation for February 26, 2020, eight years to the day after George Zimmerman shot and killed an unarmed Black teenager named Trayvon Martin and brought Stand Your Ground laws to widespread national attention. Jake Zuckerman, “On Anniversary Of Trayvon Martin Shooting, Ohio Committee Fields ‘Stand Your Ground’ Support,” Patch, March 2, 2020, <https://patch.com/ohio/across-oh/anniversary-trayvon-martin-shooting-ohio-committee-fields-stand-your-ground-support>.
- ⁴⁰ See, e.g., Michael Siegel, “How the Firearms Industry Influences US gun culture, in 6 Charts,” PRI: The World, February 23, 2018, <https://www.pri.org/stories/2018-02-23/how-firearms-industry-influences-us-gun-culture-6-charts>; Liz Mineo, “The Loaded History of Self-Defense,” The Harvard Gazette, March 7, 2017, <https://news.harvard.edu/gazette/story/2017/03/the-loaded-history-of-self-defense/>.
- ⁴¹ See Giffords Law Center to Prevent Gun Violence, “Concealed Carry,” <https://lawcenter.giffords.org/gun-laws/policy-areas/guns-in-public/concealed-carry/>.
- ⁴² Thad Morgan, “The NRA Supported Gun Control When the Black Panthers Had the Weapons,” History.com, August 30, 2018, <https://www.history.com/news/black-panthers-gun-control-nra-support-mulford-act>.
- ⁴³ NRA-ILA, “Concealed Carry | Right-to-Carry,” <https://www.nra.org/get-the-facts/right-to-carry-and-concealed-carry/>.
- ⁴⁴ See, e.g., David Smiley, “Florida returns to its ‘Gunshine State’ roots a year after Parkland,” Tampa Bay Times, Apr. 12, 2019, <https://www.tampabay.com/florida-politics/2019/04/12/florida-returns-to-its-gunshine-state-roots-a-year-after-parkland/>.
- ⁴⁵ Amanda Marcotte, “The gun lobby’s dangerous game: How it preys on people like Elliot Rodger,” Salon, May 28, 2014, https://www.salon.com/2014/05/28/the_gun_lobby_dangerous_game_how_its_stoking_the_delusions_of_people_like_elliott_rodger_partner/.
- ⁴⁶ See David Yamane, “The Sociology of U.S. Gun Culture,” Sociology Compass (June 16, 2017), <https://onlinelibrary.wiley.com/doi/full/10.1111/soc4.12497>; David Yamane, et al., “Targeted advertising: documenting the emergence of Gun Culture 2.0 in Guns magazine, 1955–2019,” Humanities & Social Sciences Communications (April 2020), <https://www.nature.com/articles/s41599-020-0437-0>; Michael Siegel, “How the Firearms Industry Influences US gun culture, in 6 Charts,” PRI: The World, February 23, 2018, <https://www.pri.org/stories/2018-02-23/how-firearms-industry-influences-us-gun-culture-6-charts>.
- ⁴⁷ Violence Policy Center, “The Militarization of the U.S. Civilian Firearms Market,” (June 2011): 9, <https://www.vpc.org/studies/militarization.pdf> (citing “Tinier, Deadlier Pocket Pistols Are in Vogue,” The Wall Street Journal, September 12, 1996).
- ⁴⁸ See, e.g., id.; “Smith & Wesson Launches Aggressive Strategy,” The Free Library, Publishers’ Development Corporation (August 1, 2005), <https://www.thefreelibrary.com/Smith+%26+Wesson+launches+aggressive+strategy.-a0135568802> David Yamane, et al., “Targeted advertising: documenting the emergence of Gun Culture 2.0 in Guns magazine, 1955–2019,” Humanities & Social Sciences Communications (April 2020), <https://www.nature.com/articles/s41599-020-0437-0>.
- ⁴⁹ David Yamane, et al., “Targeted advertising: documenting the emergence of Gun Culture 2.0 in Guns magazine, 1955–2019,” Humanities & Social Sciences Communications (April 2020), <https://www.nature.com/articles/s41599-020-0437-0>.
- ⁵⁰ Harel Shapira, et al., “Trends and Patterns of Concealed Handgun License Applications: A Multistate Analysis,” Social Currents, Vol. 5, no. 1, (2018): 3–14, <https://journals.sagepub.com/doi/pdf/10.1177/2329496517725334>.
- ⁵¹ US Commission on Civil Rights, “Examining the Race Effects of Stand Your Ground Laws and Related Issues,” Statement of Commissioner Michael Yaki, February 2020, 19.
- ⁵² Id. at 20 (citing “George Zimmerman’s Stalking Victim Demands His Concealed Weapon License be Revoked,” The Blast, November 30, 2018, <https://theblast.com/george-zimmerman-stalking-victim-demands-his-concealed-weapon-license-be-revoked/>).
- ⁵³ US Commission on Civil Rights, “Examining the Race Effects of Stand Your Ground Laws and Related Issues,” Statement of Commissioner Michael Yaki, February 2020, 20.
- ⁵⁴ Chris Schiano, “DATA RELEASE: Discord Logs Expose Regional Networks Planning for #UniteTheRight,” Unicorn Riot, August 29, 2017, <https://unicornriot.ninja/2017/data-release-discord-logs-expose-regional-networks-planning-unithetheright/>. See also, e.g., Brett Barouquere, “Klan leader Richard Preston sentenced to four years in prison for firing gun at ‘Unite the Right,’” Southern Poverty Law Center, August 22, 2018, <https://www.splcenter.org/hatewatch/2018/08/21/klan-leader-richard-preston-sentenced-four-years-prison-firing-gun-%E2%80%98unite-right%E2%80%9999>; Mike Carter, “Woman who shot protester at UW tells jury, it was ‘him or my darling’ husband,” Seattle Times, August 8, 2019, <https://www.seattletimes.com/seattle-news/crime/woman-who-shot-protester-at-uw-tells-jury-it-was-him-or-my-darling-husband>.
- ⁵⁵ Janet Reitman, “U.S. Law Enforcement Failed to See the Threat of White Nationalism. Now They Don’t Know How to Stop It,” The New York Times, November 3, 2018, <https://www.nytimes.com/2018/11/03/magazine/FBI-charlottesville-white-nationalism-far-right.html>. See also, Noreen Marcus, “Far right uses Fla. stand-your-ground law to recruit for white supremacist rally at UF,” Florida Bulldog, October 5, 2017, <https://www.floridabulldog.org/2017/10/far-right-uses-fla-stand-your-ground-law-to-recruit-for-white-supremacist-rally-at-uf/>.
- ⁵⁶ The White House, Office of the Press Secretary, “Remarks by President Obama on Trayvon Martin,” July 19, 2013, <http://www.whitehouse.gov/the-press-office/2013/07/19/remarks-president-trayvon-martin>.
- ⁵⁷ US Commission on Civil Rights, “Examining the Race Effects of Stand Your Ground Laws and Related Issues,” Statement of Commissioner Michael Yaki, February 2020, 17 (citing John K. Roman, Ph.D., “Race, Justifiable Homicide, and Stand Your Ground Laws: Analysis of FBI Supplementary Homicide Report Data,” The Urban Institute, (2013): 9).
- ⁵⁸ See American Bar Association, “National Task Force on Stand Your Ground Laws: Report and Recommendations,” (September 2015): 13.

Endnotes

- ⁵⁹ Justin Murphy, "A Statistical Analysis of Racism and Sexism in 'Stand Your Ground' Cases in Florida, 2005-2013," Social Science Quarterly (March 30, 2017), <https://onlinelibrary.wiley.com/doi/abs/10.1111/ssqu.12402>.
- ⁶⁰ See, e.g., Violence Policy Center, "Firearm Justifiable Homicides and Non-Fatal Self-Defense Gun Use," Table Nine: Race of Shooter and Person Killed in Justifiable Homicides by Firearm, 2013-2017 (May 2020); David Neiwert, "White supremacists' favorite myths about black crime rates take another hit from BJS study," Southern Poverty Law Center, October 23, 2017, <https://www.splcenter.org/hatewatch/2017/10/23/white-supremacists-favorite-myths-about-black-crime-rates-take-another-hit-bjs-study>.
- ⁶¹ See US Commission on Civil Rights, "Examining the Race Effects of Stand Your Ground Laws and Related Issues," Statement of Commissioner Michael Yaki, February 2020, 3.
- ⁶² See US Commission on Civil Rights, "Examining the Race Effects of Stand Your Ground Laws and Related Issues," Statement of Commissioner Michael Yaki, February 2020, 16.
- ⁶³ Id. at 17 (citing The Marshall Project, "Killings of Black Men by Whites are Far More Likely to be Ruled 'Justifiable,'" August 14, 2017, <https://www.themarshallproject.org/2017/08/14/killings-of-black-men-by-whites-are-far-more-likely-to-be-ruled-justifiable>).
- ⁶⁴ Id. at 16 (quoting Testimony of John Roman, Vol. 1, p.25) (emphasis added).
- ⁶⁵ Controlled for population. Mayors Against Illegal Guns, National Urban League, and VoteVets, "Shoot First: 'Stand Your Ground' Laws and Their Effect on Violent Crime and the Criminal Justice System," (September 2013): 13, https://s3.amazonaws.com/s3.mayorsagainstillegalguns.org/images/ShootFirst_v4.pdf
- ⁶⁶ Justin Murphy, "A Statistical Analysis of Racism and Sexism in 'Stand Your Ground' Cases in Florida, 2005-2013," Social Science Quarterly (March 30, 2017), <https://onlinelibrary.wiley.com/doi/abs/10.1111/ssqu.12402>.
- ⁶⁷ Nicole Ackermann, et al., "Race, Law, and Health: Examination of 'Stand Your Ground' and Defendant Convictions in Florida," Social Science & Medicine 142 (2015): 194-201.
- ⁶⁸ Michelle Degli Esposti, et al., "Increasing adolescent firearm homicides and racial disparities following Florida's 'Stand Your Ground' self-defence law," Injury Prevention 26 (2020):187-90, <https://injuryprevention.bmj.com/content/26/2/187>.
- ⁶⁹ See American Bar Association, "National Task Force on Stand Your Ground Laws: Report and Recommendations," (September 2015): 13.
- ⁷⁰ See Caroline Light, "A 'Stand Your Ground' Expansion That Expands Inequality," The New York Times, March 23, 2017, <https://www.nytimes.com/2017/03/23/opinion/a-stand-your-ground-expansion-that-expands-inequality.html>.
- ⁷¹ American Psychological Association, "Press Release: People See Black Men as Larger, More Threatening Than Same-Sized White Men," March 13, 2017, <https://www.apa.org/news/press/releases/2017/03/black-men-threatening> (citing John Wilson, et al., "Racial Bias in Judgments of Physical Size and Formidability: From Size to Threat," Journal of Personality and Social Psychology (March 13, 2017)).
- ⁷² Id. at 24 (citing Anthony G. Greenwald, et al., "Targets of discrimination: Effects of Race on Responses to Weapons Holders," Journal of Experimental Social Psychology, Vol. 39, no. 4, (July 2003): 399-405).
- ⁷³ Justin Murphy, "A Statistical Analysis of Racism and Sexism in 'Stand Your Ground' Cases in Florida, 2005-2013," Social Science Quarterly (Mar. 30, 2017), <https://onlinelibrary.wiley.com/doi/abs/10.1111/ssqu.12402>.
- ⁷⁴ Mary Anne Franks, "Real Men Advance, Real Women Retreat: Stand Your Ground, Battered Women 's Syndrome, and Violence as Male Privilege," University of Miami Law Review 68 (2014): 1099, 1111, <https://repository.law.miami.edu/cgi/viewcontent.cgi?article=1006&context=umlr>; VAWnet: An Online Resource Library on Gender-Based Violence, "The Scope of the Problem: Intimate Partner Homicide Statistics," <https://vawnet.org/sc/scope-problem-intimate-partner-homicide-statistics>.
- ⁷⁵ E.g., "Deborah Epstein and Lisa A. Goodman, "Discounting Women: Doubting Domestic Violence Survivors' Credibility and Dismissing Their Experiences," University of Pennsylvania Law Review 167 (2019): 399, 402, <https://scholarship.law.georgetown.edu/cgi/viewcontent.cgi?article=3055&context=facpub>
- ⁷⁶ Justin Murphy, "A Statistical Analysis of Racism and Sexism in 'Stand Your Ground' Cases in Florida, 2005-2013," Social Science Quarterly (March 30, 2017), <https://onlinelibrary.wiley.com/doi/abs/10.1111/ssqu.12402>.
- ⁷⁷ Christine Hauser, "Florida Woman Whose 'Stand Your Ground' Defense Was Rejected Is Released," The New York Times, February 7, 2017, <https://www.nytimes.com/2017/02/07/us/marissa-alexander-released-stand-your-ground.html>.
- ⁷⁸ Caroline Light, "A 'Stand Your Ground' Expansion That Expands Inequality," The New York Times, March 23, 2017, <https://www.nytimes.com/2017/03/23/opinion/a-stand-your-ground-expansion-that-expands-inequality.html>.
- ⁷⁹ Justin Murphy, "Are 'Stand Your Ground' Laws Racist and Sexist? A Statistical Analysis of Cases in Florida, 2005-2013," Social Science Quarterly, (March 2016): 13, https://www.researchgate.net/publication/312602014_Are_Stand_Your_Ground_Laws_Racist_and_Sexist_A_Statistical_Analysis_of_Cases_in_Florida_2005-2013. The study estimated the probability distribution of a defendant being convicted in a 2010 case, where the defendant is non-white, the defendant is 31 years old, the victim is non-white, the victim is 34 years old, the victim did not die, the defendant clearly had a gun, the victim was clearly unarmed, the victim was not clearly committing a crime, the defendant did not clearly pursue the victim, the defendant could have retreated, the defendant was not clearly on their own property, the victim did not clearly initiate, there was at least one clear witness, and a female defendant and male victim were engaged in a domestic incident.
- ⁸⁰ See Peter C. Baker, "What 'Stand Your Ground' Really Means," Pacific Standard, September 29, 2018, <https://psmag.com/magazine/what-stand-your-ground-really-means>.

Endnotes

- ⁸¹ Sunnive Brydum and Mitch Kellaway, “This Black Trans Man Is in Prison for Killing His Rapist,” The Advocate, April 8, 2015, <https://www.advocate.com/politics/transgender/2015/04/08/black-trans-man-prison-killing-his-rapist>.
- ⁸² Professor Mary Anne Franks, “Stand Your Ground’s Woman Problem: Laws Expanding Self-Defense Raise Questions About Gender as Well as Race,” HuffPost, May 3, 2014, https://www.huffpost.com/entry/stand-your-grounds-woman-_b_4886650.
- ⁸³ See, e.g., German Lopez, “What ‘Stand Your Ground’ Laws Actually Do,” Vox, December 12, 2016, <https://www.vox.com/policy-and-politics/2016/12/12/13875124/stand-your-ground-castle-doctrine-law>.
- ⁸⁴ RAND Corporation, “Gun Policy Outcome Explorer: An Expert Opinion Comparison Tool,” <https://www.rand.org/research/gun-policy/outcomes-map.html>.
- ⁸⁵ David K. Humphreys, Antonio Gasparrini, and Douglas J. Wiebe, “Evaluating the Impact of Florida’s ‘Stand Your Ground’ Self-defense Law on Homicide and Suicide by Firearm: An Interrupted Time Series Study,” JAMA Internal Medicine 177, no. 1 (2017): 44–50.
- ⁸⁶ Michelle Degli Esposti, et al., “Increasing adolescent firearm homicides and racial disparities following Florida’s ‘Stand Your Ground’ self-defence law,” Injury Prevention 26 (2020): 187–90.
- ⁸⁷ Marc Fisher and Dan Eggen, “‘Stand Your Ground’ laws coincide with jump in justifiable-homicide cases,” The Washington Post, April 7, 2012, https://www.washingtonpost.com/national/stand-your-ground-laws-coincide-with-jump-in-justifiable-homicide-cases/2012/04/07/gIQA52v51S_story.html.
- ⁸⁸ Robert J. Spitzer, “Stand Your Ground Makes No Sense,” The New York Times, May 4, 2015, <https://nyti.ms/2CcMW4y>.
- ⁸⁹ Benjamin Ukert, Douglas J. Wiebe, and David K. Humphreys, “Regional Differences in the Impact of the ‘Stand Your Ground’ Law in Florida,” Preventive Medicine 115 (2018): 68–75.
- ⁹⁰ Stand Your Ground Laws and Homicides, and Injuries (Nat’l Bureau Econ. Research, Working Paper No. 18187, 2012).
- ⁹¹ See US Commission on Civil Rights, “Examining the Race Effects of Stand Your Ground Laws and Related Issues,” Statement of Commissioner Michael Yaki, (February 2020): 17–18.
- ⁹² Cheng Cheng, Mark Hoekstra, “Does Strengthening Self-Defense Law Deter Crime Or Escalate Violence? Evidence From Castle Doctrine,” National Bureau of Economic Research, Working Paper 18134, 4, <http://www.nber.org/papers/w18134>.
- ⁹³ Chandler McClellan and Erdal Tekin, “Stand Your Ground Laws, Homicides, and Injuries,” Journal of Human Resources 52, no. 3 (2017): 621–653.
- ⁹⁴ Id.; Cheng Cheng and Mark Hoekstra, “Does Strengthening Self-defense Law Deter Crime or Escalate Violence? Evidence from Expansions to Castle Doctrine,” Journal of Human Resources 48, no. 3 (2013): 821–854.
- ⁹⁵ Cheng Cheng and Mark Hoekstra, “Does Strengthening Self-defense Law Deter Crime or Escalate Violence? Evidence from Expansions to Castle Doctrine,” Journal of Human Resources 48, no. 3 (2013): 821–854.
- ⁹⁶ Rand Corporation, “The Science of Gun Policy: A Critical Synthesis of Research Evidence on the Effects of Gun Policies in the United States, Second Edition” (2020), https://www.rand.org/pubs/research_reports/RR2088-1.html.
- ⁹⁷ See US Commission on Civil Rights, “Examining the Race Effects of Stand Your Ground Laws and Related Issues,” Statement of Commissioner Michael Yaki, February 2020, 6.
- ⁹⁸ Ta-Nehisi Coates, “Stand Your Ground and Vigilante Justice,” The Atlantic, March 22, 2012, <https://www.theatlantic.com/national/archive/2012/03/stand-your-ground-and-vigilante-justice/254900/>.
- ⁹⁹ Ta-Nehisi Coates, “Florida’s Ubiquitous Castle,” The Atlantic, March 15, 2012, <https://www.theatlantic.com/national/archive/2012/03/floridas-ubiquitous-castle/254544/>.
- ¹⁰⁰ Id.

State by State Citations

Though not all states have Stand Your Ground laws, every state accounts for situations in which a homicide is considered legally justified, either with a statute or by judicial decisions. In some states, the justifiable homicide statute and the Stand Your Ground statute are the same.

Alabama

SYG statute: Ala. Code § 13A-3-23(b).

Justifiable homicide statute: Ala. Code § 13A-3-23(a).

Alaska

SYG statutes: Alaska Stat. §§ 11.81.335(b)(5); 11.81.350(f).

Justifiable homicide statute: Alaska Stat. § 11.81.335(a).

Arizona

SYG statutes: Ariz. Rev. Stat. §§ 13-405(B); 13-411(B); 13-418(B).

Justifiable homicide statutes: Ariz. Rev. Stat. §§ 13-405(B); 13-408; 13-411(B); 13-418(B).

Deadly force in response to property crime: Arizona's statute states that the use of force may be justified to prevent first or second degree burglary, which includes burglary of unoccupied residences. Ariz. Rev. Stat. §§ 13-411; 13-1507-08; 13-1501.

Arkansas

Duty to retreat statute: Ark. Code Ann. § 5-2-607(b)(1)(A).

Justifiable homicide statute: Ark. Code Ann. § 5-2-607(a).

California

SYG by court precedent: People v. Clark, 201 Cal.App.4th 235, 250 (2011) (citing People v. Collins, 189 Cal. App. 2d 575, 588 (1961)). See also, California Criminal Jury Instructions, Cal. Crim. No. 505, 506, 3470.

Justifiable homicide statute: Cal. Penal Code §§ 195-99.

Deadly force against a fleeing person: The plain text of California Penal Code § 197(4) states that deadly force is justifiable “When necessarily committed in attempting, by lawful ways and means, to apprehend any person for any felony committed[.]” and courts have stated that “an assailed person . . . is entitled to . . . pursue the assailant until the danger of bodily injury or death has passed, even if safety could have been achieved by retreating.” People v. Blessett, 22 Cal.App.5th 903, 951, fn. 23 (2018) (partially overruled on other grounds); see also, People v. Hughes 107 Cal.App.2d 487, 494 (1951); CALCRIM No. 505. However, California courts have clarified that this law “should be read in light of common law principles” and provide that homicide is only justifiable when the felony involves imminent danger of death or great bodily harm, and a person reasonably believes that the immediate use of deadly force was necessary to defend against that danger. See, e.g., People v. Ceballos, 12 Cal.3d 470, 478 (1974); People v. Piorkowski, 41 Cal.App.3d 324, 329-30 (1974); CALCRIM No. 505. Deadly force against property crime: The plain text of California Penal Code § 197(1) states that deadly force is justifiable when resisting any attempt to commit a felony (a category which includes theft of items valued over $950). However, California courts have clarified that force is only justified in resisting violent felonies. See above for additional information.

Colorado

SYG by court precedent: Idrogo v. People, 818 P.2d 752 (Colo. 1991).

Justifiable homicide statute: Colo. Rev. Stat. § 18-1-704.

Connecticut

Duty to retreat statute: Conn. Gen. Stat. § 53a-19(b).

Justifiable homicide statute: Conn. Gen. Stat. § 53a-19.

Delaware

Duty to retreat statute: Del. Code Ann. tit. 11, § 464(e)(2).

Justifiable homicide statute: Del. Code Ann. tit. 11, § 464.

Florida

SYG statutes: Fla. Stat. §§ 776.012(b); 776.031(b); 776.032(2).

Justifiable homicide statute: See generally Ch. 776, Fla. Stat. (Justifiable Use of Force).

SYG arrest restriction: Fla. Stat. § 776.032(2).

Deadly force against property crime: Under Florida law, a person is justified in using deadly force “if he or she reasonably believes that such conduct is necessary to prevent the imminent commission of a forcible felony,” which is defined to include, among other things, burglary of an unoccupied motor vehicle (or other “conveyance”). Fla. Stat. Ann. §§ 776/031(2); 810.02(4).

State by State Citations

Georgia

SYG statute: Ga. Code Ann. § 16-3-23.1.

Justifiable homicide statute: Ga. Code Ann. § 16-3-21.

Hawaii

Duty to retreat statute: Haw. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 703-304(5)(b).

Justifiable homicide statute: Haw. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 703-300; 703-304; 703-305.

Idaho

SYG statute: Idaho Code § 19-202A(3).

Justifiable homicide statute: Idaho Code § 18-4009.

Illinois

SYG by court precedent: See e.g., Hammond v. People, 199 Ill. 173, 182 (1902); People v. McGraw, 13 Ill. 2d 249, 256 (1958).

Justifiable homicide statutes: 720 ILCS 5/7-1; 720 ILCS 5/7-3; 720 ILCS 5/7-4.

Deadly force against property crime: State law states that use of deadly force is justifiable if a person reasonably believes that such force is necessary to prevent the commission of a forcible felony, which is defined to include burglary by unlawfully breaking into an unoccupied vehicle with the intent to commit a felony or theft. 720 ILCS 5/7-3(a); 720 ILCS 5/19-1; 720 ILCS 5/2-8.

Indiana

SYG statute: Ind. Code Ann. § 35-41-3-2.

Justifiable homicide statute: Ind. Code Ann. § 35-41-3-2.

Iowa

SYG statute: Iowa Code § 704.1(3).

Justifiable homicide statutes: Iowa Code §§ 704.1; §704.2A; 704.3 - 704.7.

Kansas

SYG statutes: Kan. Stat. Ann. §§ 21-5222(c); 21-5230.

Justifiable homicide statutes: Kan. Stat. Ann. §§ 21-5222 - 21-5231.

SYG arrest restriction: Kan. Stat. Ann. § 21-5231.

Kentucky

SYG statutes: Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§ 503.050(4); 503.055(3), 503.070(3); 503.080(3).

Justifiable homicide statutes: Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§ 503.050 - 503.085.

SYG arrest restriction: Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 503.085(2).

Louisiana

SYG statutes: La. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§ 14:19(C), (D); 14:20(C), (D).

Justifiable homicide statutes: La. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§ 14:19 - 14:22.

Maine

Duty to retreat statute: Me. Stat., 17-A § 108(2)(C)(3)(a).

Justifiable homicide statute: Me. Stat., 17-A § 108(2).

Maryland

Duty to retreat by court precedent: See e.g., Burch v. State, 346 Md. 253, 283-84 (1997).

Justifiable homicide by court precedent: See e.g., State v. Faulkner, 301 Md. 482, 485-86 (1984); Porter v. State, 55 Md. 220, 235-36 (2017).

Massachusetts

Duty to retreat by court precedent: See e.g., Commonwealth v. Lapointe, 402 Mass. 321, 329 (1988); Commonwealth v. Pring-Wilson, 448 Mass. 718 (2007).

Justifiable homicide by court precedent: See, e.g., Commonwealth v. Harrington, 379 Mass. 446, 450 (1980); Commonwealth v. Ortega, 480 Mass. 603, 610-11 (2018).

Michigan

SYG statute: Mich. Comp. Laws Serv. § 780.972.

Justifiable homicide statute: Mich. Comp. Laws Serv. § 780.972 - 780.974.

Minnesota

Duty to retreat by court precedent: See e.g., State v. Zumberge, 888 N.W.2d 688, 694 (Minn. 2017).

Justifiable homicide statute: Minn. Stat. §§ 609.06; 609.065.

State by State Citations

Mississippi

SYG statute: Miss. Code Ann. § 97-3-15(4).

Justifiable homicide statute: Miss. Code Ann. § 97-3-15.

Deadly force against property crime: Mississippi law states that “the killing of a human being” is justifiable “in resisting” another person from committing a felony in the immediate premises of a dwelling, vehicle, or place of business or employment occupied by the person using such lethal force. Theft of property valued at or over $1,000 is a felony. See e.g., Miss. Code Ann. §§ 97-3-15(e), 97-17-41; Olier v. Bailey, 164 So.3d 982, 994 (Miss. 2015); Westbrook v. State, 29 So.3d 828, 833 (Miss. App. 2009).

Missouri

SYG statute: Mo. Rev. Stat. § 563.031(3).

Justifiable homicide statute: Mo. Rev. Stat. § 563.031.

Montana

SYG statute: Mont. Code Ann. § 45-3-110.

Justifiable homicide statutes: Mont. Code Ann. §§ 45-3-101 - 105; 45-3-110.

Nebraska

Duty to retreat statutes: Neb. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 28-1409(4)(b); 28-1410(2).

Justifiable homicide statutes: Neb. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 28-1409 - 28-1411.

Nevada

SYG statute: Nev. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 200.120(2).

Justifiable homicide statutes: Nev. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 200.120(1) - 220.200.

Deadly force against property crime: The plain language of Nevada law authorizes a person to use deadly force to resist an attempt to commit any felony in the person’s presence. Nev. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 200.160(2). Theft of items valued above $1,200 is a felony. Nev. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 205.0835(2)(b). However, Nevada courts have found that this literal interpretation would be “unreasonable and absurd,” and ruled instead that “the amount of force used must be reasonable and necessary under the circumstances,” and that deadly force cannot be used unless the person killed poses a threat of serious bodily injury. Newell v. State, 131 Nev. 974, 980 (2015).

New Hampshire

SYG statute: N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 627:4(III)(a). See also, State v. Etienne, 163 N.H. 57 (2011).

Justifiable homicide statutes: N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 627:4 - 627:8.

New Jersey

Duty to retreat statute: N.J. Stat. § 2C:3-4(b)(2).

Justifiable homicide statute: N.J. Stat. § 2C:3-4.

New Mexico

SYG by court precedent: State v. Horton, 57 N.M. 257, 261 (1953) (“Certainly the italicized sentence is erroneous in telling the jury the defendant could not kill his assailant if he could yield without being killed”); State v. Anderson, 364 P.3d 306, 310 (2015) (“The jury was not, however, informed as required by UJI 14-5190 that a person ‘who is threatened with an attack need not retreat’”); 14-5190 NMRA.

Justifiable homicide statutes: N.M. Stat. Ann. § 30-2-6 - 30-2-7.

New York

Duty to retreat statute: N.Y. Penal Law § 35.15.

Justifiable homicide statute: N.Y. Penal Law § 35.15; 35.20(3); 35.30; 35.10(3).

North Carolina

SYG statutes: N.C. Gen. Stat. §§ 14-51.3; 14-51.2(f).

Justifiable homicide statutes: N.C. Gen. Stat. § 14-51.2 - 14-51.4.

Deadly force against property crime: Under N.C. Gen. Stat. § 14-51.2, a person is presumed to have held a reasonable fear of imminent death or serious bodily injury if they are “the lawful occupant of a home, motor vehicle, or workplace” and both of the following are true: “(1) The person against whom the defensive force was used was in the process of unlawfully and forcefully entering, or had unlawfully and forcibly entered, a home, motor vehicle, or workplace, or if that person had removed or was attempting to remove another against that person’s will from the home, motor vehicle, or workplace;” and “(2) The person who uses defensive force knew or had reason to believe that an unlawful and forcible entry or unlawful and forcible act was occurring or had occurred.”

It is not clear, however, whether the term “lawful occupant” refers only to someone who was physically present in the home, motor vehicle, or workplace when the unlawful entry occurred into that property, or if, instead, this section authorizes a person who is in their home to use lethal force to prevent someone from unlawfully entering their motor vehicle parked in the driveway.

State by State Citations

North Dakota

SYG statute: N.D. Cent. Code § 12.1-05-07(2)(b)(2).

Justifiable homicide statutes: N.D. Cent. Code § 12.1-05-01, 12.1-05-07 - 12.1-05-07.2.

Ohio

SYG statutes: Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 2307.601 (civil liability); §2901.05(B) (criminal).

Justifiable homicide statute: Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 2307.601.

Oklahoma

SYG statute: Okla. Stat. Ann. tit. 21, § 1289.25(D).

Justifiable homicide statutes: Okla. Stat. Ann. tit. 21, § 732 - 733.

SYG arrest restriction: Okla. Stat. Ann. tit. 21, § 1289.25(G).

Oregon

SYG by court precedent: See e.g., State v. Sandoval, 342 Ore. 506, 513-514 (2007); State v. Lang, 215 Ore. App. 15, 18 (2007).

Justifiable homicide statutes: Or. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§ 161.219; 161.239.

Deadly force against property crime: Oregon law states that deadly force may be justifiable to prevent a burglary in a dwelling, even if the dwelling is not occupied. Or. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§ 161.219; 164.215.

Pennsylvania

SYG statutes: 18 Pa. Cons. Stat. Ann. §§ 505 (2.3), (2)(ii); 506(b); 507(c)(3).

Justifiable homicide statutes: 18 Pa. Cons. Stat. Ann. § 501 - 510.

Rhode Island

Duty to retreat by court precedent: See e.g., State v. Guerrero, 206 A.3d 108 (R.I. 2019); State v. Garrett, 91 A.3d 793 (R.I. 2014).

Justifiable homicide statutes: R.I. Gen. Laws §§ 11-23-1; 11-8-8.

South Carolina

SYG statute: S.C. Code Ann. § 16-11-440(C).

Justifiable homicide statute: S.C. Code Ann. §§ 16-11-410 - 16-11-450; 17-13-10; 16-1-60.

Deadly force against a fleeing person: S.C. Code Ann. § 17-13-10; See also, State v. Cooney, 320 S.C. 107 (1995).

SYG arrest restriction: S.C. Code Ann. § 16-11-450 (B).

South Dakota

SYG statutes: S.D. Codified Laws §§ 22-18-4; 22-16-34; 22-16-35.

Justifiable homicide statutes: S.D. Codified Laws §§ 22-16-34 - 22-16-35; 22-18-4.

Deadly force against property crime: The plain language of South Dakota law states that a person may use deadly force to resist any attempt to commit “any felony upon him or her,” or “in the lawful defense” of that person or certain other people, “if there is reasonable ground to apprehend a design to commit a felony . . . and imminent danger of such design being accomplished.” S.D. Codified Laws §§ 22-16-34; 22-16-35. However, South Dakota courts have found that this literal interpretation would lead to absurd results, and have interpreted South Dakota’s justifiable homicide statutes “to impliedly include the word ‘necessary.’” Instead, the Court ruled that “it was never the intent of our forebears when this statute was enacted to encompass felonies not involving a danger of serious bodily harm.” If they concluded otherwise, the Court wrote, “one might justifiably be shot while forging a check in someone’s home.” State v. Birdsheed, 871 N.W.2d 62, 73 (2015); State v. Pellegrino, 577 N.W.2d 590, 596 (1998).

Tennessee

SYG statute: Tenn. Code Ann. § 39-11-611(b)(2).

Justifiable homicide statute: Tenn. Code Ann. §§ 39-11-611(b)(2); 39-17-1322.

SYG arrest restriction: Tenn. Code Ann. § 39-17-1322.

Texas

SYG statute: Tex. Penal Code §§ 9.31(e); 9.32 (c).

Justifiable homicide statute: Tex. Penal Code §§ 9.31-9.34.

Deadly force against a fleeing person: Tex. Penal Code § 9.42.

Deadly force against property crime: Tex. Penal Code §§ 9.42-9.423. See also, e.g., Boget v. State, 74 S.W.3d 23, 3 (Tex.Crim.App. 2002); McFadden v. State, 541 S.W.3d 277, 289 (Tex.Ct.App. 2018).

State by State Citations

Utah

SYG statute: Utah Code Ann. § 76-2-402.

Justifiable homicide statute: Utah Code Ann. § 76-2-402.

Deadly force against property crime: The plain text of Utah law states that deadly force is justifiable where a person reasonably believes that force is necessary to prevent the commission of a forcible felony, which is defined to include burglary of a building, whether or not the building is occupied. Utah Code Ann. §§ 76-6-402; 76-6-202. A 2018 Utah Supreme Court decision noted that the applicable definition of “forcible felony” was intended to include crimes “that carry a high risk of a victim suffering death or serious bodily injury,” and so courts may decline to interpret this statute literally or find that lethal force is justified to prevent commission of burglaries that do not carry such a risk. See State v. Tulley, 428 P.3d 1005, 1015, fn. 9 (2018).

Vermont

SYG by court precedent: See State v. Hatcher, 167 Vt. 338, 348 (1997).

Justifiable homicide statute: 13 V.S.A. § 2305.

Virginia

SYG by court precedent: See, e.g., Foote v. Commonwealth, 11 Va. App. 61, 67 (1990) (citing McCoy v. Commonwealth, 125 Va. 771, 775 (1919)).

Justifiable homicide by court precedent: See e.g., Bailey v. Commonwealth, 200 Va. 92 (1958).

Washington

SYG by court precedent: See e.g., State v. Redmond, 150 Wn.2d 489; State v. Studd, 137 Wn.2d 533, 549, 973 P.2d 1049 (1999); State v. Williams, 81 Wn. App. 738, 744, 916 P.2d 445 (1996).

Justifiable homicide statute: Rev. Code Wash. § 9A.16.050.

Washington DC

Duty to retreat by court precedent: There is no affirmative duty to retreat in DC but juries may expressly consider a failure to retreat when evaluating the necessity of a person’s use of force. See e.g., Gillis v. United States, 400 A.2d 311 (D.C. 1979); Broadie v. United States, 925 A.2d 605 (D.C. 2007); Dawkins v. United States, 189 A.3d 223 (D.C. 2018).

Justifiable homicide by court precedent: See e.g., Comber v. United States, 584 A.2d 26 (D.C. 1990), Thomas v. United States, 557 A.2d 1296 (D.C. 1989), United States v. Bradford, 344 A.2d 208 (D.C. 1975).

West Virginia

SYG statute: W. Va. Code § 55-7-22(c).

Justifiable homicide statute: W. Va. Code § 61-2-1. See also, Williams v. Mohn, 462 F. Supp. 756 (N.D.W. Va. 1978); State v. Harden, 223 W. Va. 796 (2009).

Wisconsin

SYG statute (Occupied vehicles only): Wis. Stat. Ann. § 939.48. See also, State v. Wenger, 225 Wis. 2d 495 (Wis. Ct. App. 1999).

Justifiable homicide statute: Wis. Stat. §§ 939.48; 939.22.

Wyoming

SYG statute: Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 6-2-602(e).

Justifiable homicide statute: Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 6-2-602.

splcenter.org

The SPLC Action Fund is dedicated to fighting hate and bigotry and to seeking justice in our society. Using lobbying, grassroots organizing, and other forms of advocacy, the SPLC Action Fund works toward the day when the ideals of equal justice and equal opportunity will be a reality for everyone.

giffordslawcenter.org

For over 25 years, the legal experts at Giffords Law Center to Prevent Gun Violence have been fighting for a safer America by researching, drafting, and defending the laws, policies, and programs proven to save lives from gun violence.